

Tourist death 'not swine flu'

Panic over as tests prove negative for H1N1 virus; fatality caused by pneumonia, common flu

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

For a brief period earlier this week, both the Marriott Hotel and San Paulo Hospital were closed down as fears swept the town of an outbreak of the much hyped 'Swine flu' after a German woman, Mrs Barbel Wilhelmine, 65, who had been staying at the hotel and had been taken to the hospital, died on her way to Bangkok.

Initial reports had said that the new flu strain, H1N1, had been found in her, but later reports said that it had been common influenza and pneumonia that had caused her death.

Mrs Wilhelmine arrived in Thailand on May 12 with her husband, and their child. She showed no flu symptoms.

They then drove to Hua Hin and stayed in the hotel for about a week before having chest pains and breathing difficulties on May 16.

Her husband alerted hotel staff who sent her to San Paolo Hua Hin Hospital. The German stopped breathing on her way to the hospital, but the paramedics used CPR to revive her.

The hospital then referred her case to Samitivej Hospital in Bangkok, but she died on the way, in Samut Sakhon province, on May 18.

Of the 8,829 infection cases in 40 countries, 74 have died, mostly in Mexico, the US, Canada and Costa Rica, according to official figures from the World Health

A quarantine officer monitors travelers with a thermographic device at an arrival gate at the Suvarnabhumi airport in Bangkok.

Organisation.

Thailand confirmed two H1N1 infections after they returned from a trip to Mexico on May 12, but both have recovered after receiving treatment.

There are eight other people still in quarantine at Thai hospitals under observation for suspected swine flu.

Thailand has imposed a host of preventative measures against the spread of H1N1, including the use of heat-seeking devices at the country's main international airports to detect arrivals suffering from fever.

AWOL would like to extend our condolences to the family and friends of Mrs Wilhelmine.

We would also like to make clear that there is no risk whatsoever to other guests or visitors at the Marriott, or at San Paulo Hospital, and that the temporary closures were a precautionary measure only. Everyone should of course take their usual precautions to avoid catching or spreading any illnesses, and should consult a doctor at the earliest sign of fever.

■ LONDON, ENGLAND

Named Top UK Cover Model Ellen Liberachi is a beautiful lingerie model who is featured in the latest issue of Maxim Magazine (June 2009). The 23 year-old busty blonde has no problem stripping off to her sexy lingerie or bikini and she would love to be a Bond Girl.

Are you comfortable being practically naked in front of the camera?

I'm at ease in my bikini or lingerie. I'm so used to being naked now; if a photographer makes me feel comfortable, I relax. It's important to work with people you can be yourself around.

You must have Bond-girl dreams, right?

It would be amazing to be in such an iconic film series. Octopussy made me a fan when I was nine. My favorite Bond girl is Ursula Andress in Dr. No. She meant business and was beautiful.

Hua Hin's Hot Topics from HHAD

An abbreviated Hot Topics this week as the usual contributor is on holiday.

An odd assortment on the forum this week which has ranged from the continuing discussions (some might say never ending) on the perils, pitfalls but also potential and often actual benefits of foreigners buying here, to the mundane topics of everyday life such as where to find outdoor speakers.

Encouraging signs that tourists are still planning on coming here with several enquiries about different hotels, as well as lots of new members joining and stating their intentions to come to Hua Hin soon.

Several techie questions this week ranging from interest in digital book readers to how to equip a house with several TV cable points capable of delivering different channels.

Predictably money and visas are on everyone's minds with the debate continuing as to where the British pound is going against the baht as well as a report on a messy visa run to Malaysia. Also the members have identified the shrinking number of Thai banks who are not charging a fee to foreign card holders at ATMs - this number now down to one!

The swine flu scare triggered a knee jerk of new threads, moderated down to one as the 'crisis' subsided but HHAD would like to send its condolences to the affected family (see front page).

For all of these hot topics and plenty more get online at www.huahinafterdark.com/forum/ - Hua Hin's only active web community.

Have you ever wondered where a certain phrase comes from, or what it really means? Every week we will expand your knowledge of English and its etymology with a different word or saying. This week it is...

Draw a blank

This phrase originates from the lottery that was established in Tudor England. Elizabeth I, like the monarchs of other European countries at the time, was short of money and decided to copy rival nation states by instituting a national lottery. The money so raised was intended to go towards the 'reparation of the havens and strength of the Realm and towards further public works'. She signed the license granting the lottery in 1567 (not so much a signature, more a craft project).

Lotteries at that time worked by putting tickets with the participant's names on them into a 'lot pot'. An equal number of notes, some with the prizes written on them and some of which were blank, went into another pot. Pairs of tickets were drawn simultaneously from the two pots. It is easy to see how a failure to succeed came to be associated with drawing a blank.

Sir William More (1520-1600), when he found time to spare from his numerous other posts, which included 'Her Majesty's Deputy Master of the Swans', was the 'Treasurer of the Lottery in Surrey'. The Loseley Manuscripts are a unique archive of the More-Molyneux family who have for centuries lived in beautiful Tudor manor house Loseley Park. The manuscripts contain a unique record of life in Tudor and Stuart England and include More's description of the lottery: "A verie rich Lotterie ... without any blankes."

And so it should have been. The tickets cost ten shillings each - at a time when labourers were paid about a shilling a day. The prizes included silver plate and tapestry. Although the first time that someone 'drew a blank' was in the 16th century, the phrase wasn't recorded in print until the 19th, in Washington Irving's Tales of a Traveller, 1824, in which the plot involves a character being given credit for something he hadn't done: "It is like being congratulated on the high prize when one has drawn a blank."

Later in the 19th century it became used in a general figurative sense to mean to be unsuccessful in a venture or search of any kind.

If you hear a phrase or saying, or find yourself using one and would like to know how it came about, send the phrase to us at awol@huahinmedia.com and we will do our best to print the answer, along with your name.

New turtle nesting ground found

■ THAP SAKAE, THAILAND

A resident of Thap Sakae District in Prachuap Khiri Khan has discovered a nesting ground for green turtles at a site earmarked for a coal-fired plant by the Electricity Generating Authority of Thailand.

A chance discovery, it was made by a local, Pawinee Wongnen, on May 4 after she went for a walk that morning and spotted a dead baby turtle next to a hole in the ground on the sandy beach. Curious, she dug up the hole with bare hands and watched in amazement as others crawled out of the hole and made their way to the sea.

She marked the place and returned later with a team in employ of the Marine and Coastal Resources Research Centre that is based in the province. Among them was Atichart Inthongkam, an academic involved in fishery research along the Gulf of Thailand. They dug up around the hole to a depth of 80 centimetres and found eight more baby turtles.

"We found 118 eggs that had already hatched and another 10 that failed to hatch," Atichart said, adding that it was only the third instance - after Koh Kram island off mainland Chon Buri and Koh Kra off Nakhon Si Thammarat - that a nesting place for green sea turtles has been found on the Gulf of Thailand coast.

A fully grown sea turtle pictured near the Similan Islands

Sea turtles prefer quiet beaches far from human settlement for nesting, he explained, and saw this as a good development because he can look to the future with hope for the baby turtles, when they grow up, will return here to lay eggs.

The centre is presently nursing 26 young sea turtles in various stages of infirmity brought to it by the locals, and once they become strong enough it would release them to the sea.

The green turtle is listed by CITES in its Appendix I as among the most endangered species threatened with extinction.

Weird news round up

■ LONDON, ENGLAND

Speed camera rakes in £1m in five months

A temporary speed camera close to roadworks on a dual carriageway caught 100 motorists a day for five months, clocking up fines of nearly £1m.

The camera, on the busy A316 Country Way in Hanworth, caught 16,213 drivers speeding between June and November last year.

With charges for speeding consisting of a £60 fine and three penalty points, the speed camera was responsible for £973,000 in fines and 50,000 in penalty points.

The camera was set up next to roadworks on the dual carriageway to enforce a 30mph speed limit on the road, which normally has a speed limit of 50mph.

The information, released via the Freedom of Information Act, also revealed that the temporary camera caught 11,010 heading out of London and 5,203 driving in on the busy commuter route.

The maintenance work was carried out on the road to improve the roadmarking, signage and street lighting and resurfacing of the viaduct. However, the drastic drop in speed left many drivers unimpressed as they found the drop from 70mph, from the M3, to 30mph, too much and were captured speeding.

A further six other temporary cameras raked in £2.2m, including £616,000 in fines from a camera on the M1 in Mill Hill, North London, and £374,000 from a camera on the A40 in Denham, West London, it was revealed this week.

A spokesman from anti speed camera group Speedcameras.org said: "The speed camera on the A316 illustrates what a cash cow cameras have become. If they were capable of getting drivers to slow down then ask yourself why the number of drivers caught have consistently increased.

"That fact should be enough to tell the authorities a different approach is required to road safety, but when cameras are capable of raising £1m in revenue that's unlikely to happen anytime soon."

A spokesman for the Camera Partnership in Kent, said: "We remain very concerned that so many motorists disregard the temporary speed limits on roadworks sites.

"Drivers are at risk in roadworks where the lanes may be narrower, the layouts change and there is no hard shoulder for broken down vehicles."

Skydiver's plummets 6,000ft without chute

A skydiver had a miracle escape after he plummeted 6,000ft when his parachute was opened too late.

James Boole, from Tamworth, Staffordshire, pulled his ripcord just seconds before he hit the ground.

The 31-year-old father-of-one was in Russia filming another skydiver for a TV documentary when he says his partner signalled too late and he opened his chute two seconds before hitting the deep snow of a mountain top at 100mph.

Mr Boole broke his back and ribs, bruised a lung and chipped some of his teeth. He was rushed to hospital in Moscow before being flown back to the UK in a body brace and is now recovering at home.

The mechanical engineer has been parachuting for 12 years and has completed more than 2,000 jumps.

THE LORDS NAME IN VAIN

"My friend," said St. Peter to the recently deceased, "you did lead an exemplary life on earth--but there is one instance of your taking the name of The Lord in vain. Would you care to tell us about it?"

"I recall," replied the new applicant, "it was in 1965 on the last hole at Pinehurst. I only needed a par four to break 70 for the first time in my life."

"Was your drive good?" asked St. Peter, with increasing interest.

"Right down the middle. But when I got to my ball, it was plugged deep in a wet rut made by a drunk's golf cart."

"Oh dear," said St. Peter. "A real sucker! Is that when you..."

"No. I'm pretty good with a 3-iron. I played the ball close to my feet, caught the sweet spot and moved it right onto the green. But it bounced on a twig or something--it was a very windy day--and slid off the apron right under the steepest lip of the trap."

"What a pity!" said St. Peter consolingly, "Then that must have been when..."

"No. I gritted my teeth, dug in with an open stance, swung a smooth outside arc, and backspun a bucket's worth of sand up onto the green. When everything settled down, there was my ball, only ten inches from the cup."

"JESUS CHRIST!" shrieked St. Peter. "Don't tell me you choked the putt!"

KAYAKING ACCIDENT

The day after his wife disappeared in a kayaking accident, an Anchorage man answered his door to find two grim-faced Alaska State Troopers.

"We're sorry, Mr. Wilkes, but we have some information about your wife," said one trooper.

"Tell me! Did you find her?" Wilkes shouted.

The troopers looked at each other. One said, “We have some bad news, some good news, and some really great news. Which do you want to hear first?”

Fearing the worst, an ashen Mr. Wilkes said, "Give me the bad news first."

The trooper said, "I'm sorry to tell you, sir, but this morning we found your wife's body in Kachemak Bay."

"Oh my God!" exclaimed Wilkes. Swallowing hard, he asked, "What's the good news?"

The trooper continued, “When we pulled her up she had 12 twenty-five pound king crabs and 6 good-size Dungeness crabs clinging to her.”

Stunned, Mr. Wilkes demanded, "If that's the good news, what's the great news?"

The trooper said, "We're going to pull her up again tomorrow "

NEW BORN

Nervously pacing up and down a hospital corridor, a man waits as his wife gives birth to their first child. After a long labour the doctor comes out and tells the man that he is the father of a baby boy. The man is overjoyed, and rushes in to his wife who smiles weakly and gives him the child.

Overcome, the tearful father asks the midwife if there is anything he can do to help. Sensing that the dad wants to share in the occasion the midwife tells him to take the baby and bathe it next door. After a few minutes the midwife pops in to see how the man is getting on.

She jumps back in dismay when she sees what the new dad is doing. He has two fingers firmly lodged up the infant's nose and is dragging the child through the water in figure-of-eights.

"Good God!" she shouts. "That's not how to bathe a new-born!"

"It bloody well is," the man replies, "when the water's this hot."

SWEET & STICKY?

In a biology class at Harvard University, the professor was discussing the high glucose levels found in semen. A female freshman raised her hand and asked, “If I understand, you’re saying there is a lot of glucose, as in sugar, in semen?” “That’s correct,” responded the professor, going on to add statistical info.

Raising her hand again, the girl asked, "Then why doesn't it taste sweet?"

After a stunned silence, the whole class burst out laughing, the poor girl's face turned bright red, and as she realised exactly what she had inadvertently said (or rather implied), she picked up her books without a word and walked out of class, never to return.

However, as she was going out the door, the Professor's reply was classic.

Totally straight-faced, he answered her question. “It doesn’t taste sweet because the taste buds for sweetness are on the tip of your tongue, not the back of your throat. Have a good day.”

Capricorn Dec 22 - Jan 19

You'll be delighted to hear that the latest mobile phones from Japan have hit the shelves in local stores. Soon you'll find out that unless you win the Dutch 'Zip Code lottery', you'll never be able to afford one. As you don't own property in that country, the likelihood of this is very low, no matter how much the stars favour you winning.

Aquarius Jan 20 - Feb 18

With Pluto arguing with Goofy, Mickey Mouse descending, and Minnie ascending, there's absolutely no saying what this week will bring you.

Pisces Feb 19 - Mar 20

There's something fishy about your girlfriend. You notice this particularly after late night outings with a certain male friend where you're not invited. Don't worry though - the smell soon wears off.

Aries Mar 21 - Apr 19

Give in to the deep desire to hop from rock to rock in the local hills. The risk of breaking every bone in your body, is far outweighed by the satisfaction you feel.

Taurus Apr 20 - May 20

The stars seem to have something good in store for you this week, but have decided not to reveal it until further notice. If this notice doesn't come before Wednesday, you'd do well to take precautions for rainy days.

Gemini May 21 - Jun 21

Stay away from televisions and other monitors this week. Also cover all reflecting surfaces including mirrors and glass tables with cloth after dark. You may spot your evil twin in there, who has returned to haunt you.

Cancer Jun 22 - Jul 22

Your motherly instincts will be misinterpreted by certain males, who will instantly start flirting with you. Avoid visiting bars frequented by people of a different sexual orientation than yours. Be especially aware of people with a Q in their name.

Leo Jul 23 - Aug 22

Stay home this weekend. The large amount of beans you ate last night, will have a hand in your troubles. Avoid non-air-conditioned establishments as it may hit the fan there, leaving everybody knee-deep in murky business, and you receiving a life-long ban from the place.

Virgo Aug 23 - Sep 22

True love isn't in the stars for you any time soon. Don't look too deep in the history of people trying to woo you this week, otherwise you'll never get laid.

Libra Sep 23 - Oct 23

This is not the time to tidy up your desk at the office, as later in the week a meaningless office romance will make sure everything ends up on the floor anyway.

Scorpio Oct 24 - Nov 21

Try to see the silver lining around the clouds at the horizon. It's a really beautiful sight, and remember that nothing can grow without rain. Investing in sandbags might be a wise idea, despite rising sand prices.

Sagittarius Nov 22 - Dec 21

Mars is heavily influencing your life this week. You'll need all your tact to avoid full on war with the Russian Mafia. It is wise to invite a very attractive Hummer sales person into your home, provided they carry short-range rocket proof wind shields.

And there is plenty going on to bely the sleepy fishing village impression, with a host of bars, restaurants, hotels and condominiums, as well as top quality golf courses and pristine beaches.

Where is Khao Takiab? For those of you unfamiliar with KT, just take the road south from Hua Hin for about 6 km until you reach a junction where the main road bends right up and over the railway, with a U-turn underneath, and the leftmost lane before that will take you into the centre of Khao Takiab.

Megabooks Khao Takiab closing at end of May

■ KHAO TAKIAB, THAILAND

Following last week's article in AWOL's Khao Takiab pull out on the Megabooks outlet, we have been informed by them that they are closing that store at the end of May. The Hua Hin branch will remain open however, so all customers should visit that store instead, which is opposite the Japanese Restaurant attached to the Sofitel complex near the crossroads of Naresdamri and Damnoernkasem Roads.

■ DEAR MARY,

I am a regular reader and contributor on the local forum, Hua Hin After Dark, but in the last few months have been increasingly worried by certain things that have been happening on there. The first thing is that I have been receiving messages from another poster who I don't think I know in real life, but their name on the forum is Honolulu Jimmy. Actually that was the name but it has now been banned, and I have been getting messages from another name but I'm sure it is the same person. These messages are of a sexual nature, and the man behind them is a complete pervert! The second thing is that a new moderator appeared on the forum recently who scares the living daylights out of me, called The Grim Reaper. He is very scary. The third thing, and my main question is, why are there so many idiots spoiling what is a truly great forum?

Dainty, Hua Hin.

Mary says: Dear Dainty,

I have had a word with the top man at HHAD on your behalf, Lev Jameson, on one of his infrequent trips to Hua Hin. Here is what he had to say....

Unfortunately, like any successful enterprise, once it gets past a certain size, the idiots seem to multiply exponentially, whether they are customers, suppliers or in this case, posters. While there are a lot of very good and sensible posters, threads get disrupted easily by a few idiots. Honolulu Jimmy is a prime example, as well as all his aliases, which get banned as soon as he is spotted; he is a hand shandy and no mistake! Believe me, the Grim Reaper is your friend, culling and slashing the idiots as we speak, but it is a never ending task. He is very real, so the idiots had better watch out that he doesn't find them in person...

Dear Mary,

In the last few weeks I have been suffering some very worrying symptoms, which I am finding hard to deal with. I have been getting terrible headaches, cold sweats, hot flushes and chills, but the most worrying are the homicidal instincts and murderous rages I find myself getting into.

I recently purchased a large scythe to cut the garden which had become a complete mess, but whenever I get near the implement I have this overpowering urge to don a black cloak and creep about menacingly.

I think some of my mood swings are down to too much time on the computer, as I have recently been promoted to a position of Ultimate Moderator on the local forum, where I have complete power to edit or delete posts, or ban posters; in extreme situations I have been given permission to hunt down and butcher errant posters.

I have been using Ibuprofen to try and contain the headaches but their effect seems to be reducing; what do you suggest I do to avoid going on a killing spree? GR, Hua Hin.

Mary says: Dear GR,

Are you by any chance related to JR? I believe he had similar homicidal tendencies but wore a rather natty hat. I certainly like your image - very dashing with just enough menace to make the girls weak at the knees. To be honest by the tone of your letter you sound like a good egg who wouldn't sever someone's head from their body unless they really deserved it, so I say good on you for your promotion, and don't have any qualms about getting down to business. Hua Hin will be for sure a better place without some of the no marks that you are intended to eliminate. I believe you will find that sating your blood lust is all you need to eliminate the headaches.

EPL Preview

(all times Thailand)

Sunday, 24 May 2009

Arsenal v Stoke, 22:00

The Gunners will be looking to finish their season with a flourish, while Stoke will be as pleased as Punch to be 11th and looking towards another season of top flight football. Home win.

Aston Villa v Newcastle, 22:00

Playing away on the last day may be a blessing in disguise for Newcastle, and as it is Villa, who have looked a little lacklustre recently they have a chance. A draw may be enough and we think that is what they will get here.

Blackburn v West Brom, 22:00

Not much for either side to be playing for here with the Baggies already down and Rovers just playing for position. Both teams may well try out some lesser known names. A last hurrah for West Brom and a draw.

Fulham v Everton, 22:00

Something in this game for both sides, as they try to hold on to their respective 7th and 5th positions. Hodgson deserves plaudits for getting his side to over perform while Moyes has done equally well despite huge injury problems. Another draw looks on the cards here.

Hull v Man Utd, 22:00

The home side need to win to survive for sure at the expense of two teams from the North East. United are likely not to be at full strength with a Champions League Final in three days, although Ferguson will want to give a run out to some of his stars. We think they will still have too much for Hull and this will be an away win and relegation for Hull.

Liverpool v Tottenham, 22:00

The Reds need a draw to guarantee 2nd while Spurs need a win and a Fulham loss to grab 7th. We can't see the latter happening and with nothing else to play for we think this will be a convincing win for Liverpool.

Man City v Bolton, 22:00

Another playing for positions match, but at least there is some local rivalry. Doubts still linger as to Mark Hughes position and he will want his team to make a statement of intent for next season. Bolton will make it difficult though, so a narrow home win.

Sunderland v Chelsea, 22:00

If Hull and Newcastle win and Sunderland don't, they go down. Lucky for the Black Cats that Hull are playing the Champions then! Chelsea will do them no favours and will pummel them from the off; away win.

West Ham v M'brough, 22:00

Boro need an even greater miracle than anyone; they need Hull to lose and themselves to win by a combined total of 5 goals or more, and for Newcastle to lose. We can't even see them winning at Upton Park as the Hammers look to exact revenge for their FA Cup defeat. Carlton Cole looked sharp returning from injury last week and we predict a home win.

Wigan v Portsmouth, 22:00

Two teams now destined to finish in the bottom half, and Steve Bruce must be worried at his team's form in the final third of the season. Pompey fans must be worried at the state of their finances, and these two could well be relegation contenders next season. With some strong teams coming up they will both need to strengthen. This is likely to be a fairly relaxed affair which we think will end in yet another draw.

A classic final expected amid Roman rumble fears

■ ROME, ITALY

Thursday 28th May 2009, 01.45
Champions League Final
Barcelona v Manchester Utd

While fans of Arsenal, Chelsea and others may disagree, this match up surely has got the two best teams in Europe facing each other, and the talent on display will be mouthwatering. Both teams have scintillating attackers and ferocious defenders and there will be fascinating match ups all over the park. Unfortunately there have been rumours of potential crowd trouble in Rome, but hopefully these will come to nothing. The exact line ups and formations will be closely guarded secrets until just before kick off, but we believe the likely teams will be as follows:

Barcelona - Valdes, Puyol, Toure Yaya, Pique, Sylvinho, Busquets, Xavi, Keita, Messi, Eto'o, Iniesta
Manchester United - Van De Sar, O'Shea, Ferdinand, Vidic, Evra, Scholes, Carrick, Anderson, Park, Ronaldo, Rooney.

Both teams have been hit by suspensions, with Barcelona losing both first choice full backs (Alves and Abidal) so we think it is likely that Sylvinho will come in at left back, and Carles Puyol (left) at right back.

Manchester United meanwhile lose Darren Fletcher but have a more than able deputy in Paul Scholes (above), and he may have been preferred in any case due to experience.

One player who won't be in the Barcelona starting line up but could well make a sub appearance is the 19 year old Bojan (below), a

Catalan-Serb, and it will be well worth watching him as he is the proverbial 'wonderkid'; there are also strong rumours that he might go on loan to a Premier League club next season.

As to an AWOL prediction? Both teams are trying to complete an impressive haul of trophies, and it will be close, possibly extra time and penalties again. The loss of the full backs will be a big problem for Barcelona, and while they have experienced replacements, the pace of the United attack may well be their undoing. A thrilling game in prospect, with the English Champions just squeaking it again.
