Power Down

Thai Electricity supply approaching critical levels

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

Another ASEAN meeting took place in Hua Hin recently, but this was a less heralded one. However the message to come out of the 26th ASEAN Power Utilities/Authorities (HAPUA) Council Meeting held at the Dusit was a grim one.

Suthep Chimklai, director of the system planning division of the Electricity Generating Authority of Thailand, Egat, said power reserves for Thailand over the next five years may be at critical levels unless a new power plant can be built as outlined in the Power Development Plan. He added that the latest protests by environmentalists in Chachoengsao resulted in the operators of two power plants deciding to change locations.

That means that the two gas-fired power plants would be delayed by at least one year to 2014 and 2015. "We don't know if there will be protests at the new locations," said

Mr Suthep. "It's another delay at a time when the domestic economy is picking up. I think our power reserves will be critically low."

Mr Suthep said many coal-fired and nuclear plants needed to be built over the next 20 years to meet demand, and they are likely to face even more opposition.

Egat is planning alternatives such as buying more power from other countries and a pooled power facility and generation grid with other Asean members, he said after the meeting. "Thailand could benefit from power grid links between countries in the region since Burma and Laos have plentiful fuel resources," said Mr Suthep.

The possibility of the development of broadband and high-speed internet along with power transmission lines was also discussed at the meeting, said Energy Minister Wannarat Channukul. Asean members are building 16 interconnected power transmission networks, which are expected to be operational by 2015 and the fibre-optic lines could also be used for broadband and internet.

Do you wonder why we say certain things, or what they really mean? Each week we will examine a different word or phrase and tell you how it came about.

This week it is.. Gone for a burton

No longer functional - a reference to a person who had died or an item that was broken.

There are numerous suggestions as to the origin of this British phrase, and that is another way of saying that no one is entirely sure how it originated. It dates from mid 20th century UK and the first reference to it in print is a definition in The New Statesman, August 1941: "Go for a Burton, crash."

There are many suggested derivations, so we'll just list a couple of the long shots: - A burton (also called a Spanish Burton) was a block and tackle mechanism used on Royal Navy ships. It was reputedly complex and difficult to use and any mariner who wasn't where he was expected to be was said to have 'gone for a burton'. The word Burton in this guise was being used in the 1700's.

- 'A-burton' was the term used to describe a form of stowage on a ship. Again, we have a definition - in Arthur Young's Nautical Dictionary, 1846: "A-burton, Casks are said to be stowed a-burton, when placed athwartships [from side to side across the ship] in the hold."

There really isn't much to commend these explanations apart from the word 'burton'. They are both very early citations for a phrase that wasn't known before the 1940s. Without conclusive proof we can't completely discount them, but it does seem reasonable to put them at the back of the field. That leaves us the two more credible front runners:

1. To 'go for a burton' refers to the beer brewed in the Midlands town of Burton-upon-Trent, which was and still is famous for its breweries. RAF pilots who crashed, especially those who crashed into the sea, i.e. 'in the drink', were said to have 'gone for a burton'. Some commentators have referred to a pre-WWII advert for Burton's Ale, in which a place at a dinner table was vacant and the missing person was said to have 'gone for a Burton', i.e. gone to the pub for a drink. That would be a very strong candidate if only any record of the adverts were to be found, so until any do come to light it's reasonable to call the said adverts mythical.

2. 'Go for a burton' is a reference to the suits made by Montague Burton, who supplied the majority of the demobilization suits that British servicemen were given on leaving service after WWII. (Note: Monty is also a contender as the source of the Full Monty). Any serviceman who was absent could have been said to have 'gone for a burton'. This does seem the less likely of the two explanations, as it doesn't quite match the meaning of the phrase. 'Gone for a burton' was used to mean dead, not merely absent, and Montague Burton didn't supply shrouds, as far as we know.

What is known for sure is that the term was popularised by the RAF around the time of WWII, evidenced by the fact that all the early citations of it come from that date and context. It migrated to the USA quite quickly and in June 1943 a story entitled Husky Goes Down for a Burton appeared in Boys' Life, the magazine of the Boy Scouts of America:

[Gone down for a Burton] In the R.A.F. it's the gentle way of saying that an aviator has been killed in operation.

This phrase is now rather archaic and began fading from general use during the later part of the 20th century. It hasn't quite 'gone for a burton' but it is certainly well on its way.

Weird News

■ CALIFORNIA, USA

California train mooning event is great crack for participants

A California train mooning session saw dozens of cheeky people baring their bums to passing Amtrak and Metrolink trains this weekend. It's known as the 'Mooning of the Amtrak' and is a tradition that goes back 30 proud years. It lasts all day long, with bikers, lovebirds and even OAPs baring all with great enthusiasm for the passing trains in the southern Californian city of Laguna Niguel.

One participant, Kim Norris, said: 'This is so much fun. It took me about a week to build up the courage to do this, and another week to talk my husband into it. But it was all worth it.'

The origins of the ritual are said to come from a bar room bet at the Mugs Away Saloon opposite the train track. A punter apparently volunteered to buy a drink for anyone who would flash their bottom at a passing train. The rest is history.

At one point the event attracted up to 10,000 people, but the Orange County Sheriff's department has 'cracked' down on proceedings after some people over-zealously started having full sex by the tracks.

This year about 100 people took part with police officers patrolling to make sure there wasn't any criminal naughtiness.

■ BROOME, AUSTRALIA

Australian drunk rides crocodile, gets bitten

An Australian drunk was taken to hospital with leg injuries after he scaled a fence at a zoo and tried to ride a crocodile.

The man had been thrown out of a pub in Broome, in northwestern Australia, for being drunk - whereupon he clambered over a barbed wire fence at Broome Crocodile Park carrying a flashlight, sought out a crocodile named Fatso, and and climbed onto his back. Sixteen-foot-long saltwater crocodile Fatso wasn't keen on this, and spun round and bit the man on his right leg.

Fatso then surprisingly released the man, who hastily climbed back over the fence. He was taken to hospital with some 'very nasty lacerations' on his leg, according to Sergeant Roger Haynes of the Broome police.

MORE: Five of the biggest drinking fails

Haynes added: 'Saltwater crocodiles ... once they get hold of you, are not renowned for letting you go. He's lucky to have escaped with his life.'

The man, a tourist from eastern Australia, told authorities that he had wanted to give Fatso a pat.

Capricorn Dec 22 - Jan 19
Remember: Those who can't do, teach. And those who can't teach just keep repeating the same tired maxim over and over again.

Aquarius Jan 20 – Feb 18
It's true that God created you in His likeness. Unfortunately for you, God was feeling particularly shitty about Himself that day.

Pisces Feb 19 – Mar 20
They say you have the grace of a dancer and the agility of a world-class gymnast. After that, though, it's usually just a bunch of mean-spirited laughter.

Aries Mar 21 – Apr 20
A combination of hubris, treachery, and everyday low prices will soon mark the end of your reign as Mattress King.

Taurus Apr 21 – May 21
Smuggling cocaine across the border is a delicate art. Next time try stashing it inside a stuffed animal instead of a live one.

Gemini May 22 – June 21
You didn't get into plumbing for the fame, the fortune, or the women. But one severely backed-up toilet will soon change all of that.

Cancer Jun 22 – Jul 22
Action and adventure await you this Thursday, though not before hours of pointless exposition and predictable plot twists.

Leo Jul 23 – Aug 22
Your financial situation takes a turn for the worse this week when that damn ten baht coin slips loose and falls behind the sofa cushion.

Virgo Aug 23 – Sep 22
It's difficult to know who to trust in life. Then again, the guy with the horns and the hooves should have been a no-brainer.

Libra Sep 23 – Oct 23
A man's home is his castle. This week prepare to have your castle stormed by a marauding horde of phone bills.

Scorpio Oct 24 – Nov 21

Your Problems SOLVED

Send your problem to Mary Ann Cotton on submissions@awolonline.net

■ DEAR MARY,
I have a very embarrassing physical feature that is and has caused me no end of problems, and is particularly distressing because of the career path I am on. You see I have undergone extensive training to be a masseur, and am capable of all manner of styles - Thai, Swedish, Oily, Soapy - you name it and I am an expert. But I have this great big bush of hair growing where it shouldn't be. Potential employers notice it almost instantly, and when I have managed to get a job, several customers have complained about it. I have tried everything to get rid of it - shaving, creams, hot wax, as well as spending hours pulling the individual hairs out one by one. But still it grows back, bushier than ever.
I am really at my wits end, and am embarrassed to be seen in public now - have you ever had to deal with someone with really hairy nostrils before?
Schnozz, Samut Prakarn

Dear Schnozz,
I have always been an advocate of everything being left to be natural, so bald men should allow themselves to go bald, hairy legged women should leave them alone, and people with halitosis should live in France. However, having seen the photographs you sent, this is a rule I would break in your case. When you referred to a bush, I (and I am sure many readers) made the assumption that you were referring to your front bottom, but bush does your nasal growth an injustice. If you weren't so set on your massage career, I would advise that you join a circus and use it to your advantage. Another alternative would be to take your daily trimmings to be made into cushions. However if you are determined to rid yourself of your growth there is only one solution; you will have to start snorting cocaine, as it is a well known fact that it completely kills anything to do with the nostrils. I'm not sure whether you can get a doctor's prescription for it though...

No results were supplied by the organisers so the league table is unchanged - sorry folks!

Mr Dan's Hua Hin 8-Ball and 9-Ball Leagues

Both these leagues have finished. The new season is scheduled to start on Monday 26th July for the 9 Ball, and Wednesday 28th July for the 8 Ball. Teams for the new season are probably:

Dick's Office
Mr Dan
Boapa's Place
Eagle Bar
Kom Hom
Maria's
Breakfast Club
Donkey's Rest
Dolphin Bar
Play Sports Lounge
TNT

If you are not on this list and would like to join one or both of the leagues, please contact Dan on 085 060 4527 immediately or go and see him at Mr Dan's.

If any team has not paid their registration fee by Monday 19th July they will be excluded. This is a final deadline. There are some teams that have still not paid the previous seasons fee, and they will be excluded if this is not rectified, and the new season fee paid as well. If insufficient teams (less than 8) have paid, the next season will be cancelled completely and the existing organisers will not organise another one. If the bars can't be bothered to meet deadlines for something that benefits them and their customers then that is their choice.

This is your last chance.

Cup Final
Jungle Juice beat JW Black
Congratulations to Jungle Juice on winning the Cup (that's not the trophy Doug is holding!!). In a fantastic season they have done the double; won their league and the Cup. They have not lost a single game - a great achievement. We look forward to them playing in the 1st division.
2nd Leg Div 2 runners up v 2nd from last Div 1
ThaiWaii beat Kom Hom Ladies
This result means that ThaiWaii remain in the 1st division next season. Well played to both teams.

Fixtures 20/07/2010
Individuals - Top 16
The first part will commence at 7.00pm with each group of four playing at the individual bars (see below). If any players cannot play next Tuesday please let us know as soon as possible so that we can invite the next available player along.
The four players at each bar will play each other 501 best of three and will be awarded 1 point for a win. In the event of a tie, legs for and against will be the deciding factor, and if still tied then a playoff game of 1 leg 501 will decide the result. Please ensure these games start promptly at 7.00pm. A score sheet will be issued to each bar.
Group A at Jungle Juice:
A. Ball (1) Cat A, B. Joe (8) Oasis, C. Noom (9) Paradise, D. Brian (16) Kom Hom
Group B at Lazy Daze:

Premier League News

With less than a month to go until the new season kicks off, this section will once more be all things Premier League, despite the generally awful showing by England and most players connected to it at the World Cup! Friendlies, transfer speculation and news, and the week before the start, the AWOL predictions will be back. However there will be no AWOL on 13th August due to a public holiday on the 12th for HM The Quuen's birthday..

Donkey Population Plummets In Spain

World Cup celebrations endanger asses

■ MADRID, SPAIN

JOYFUL crowds spilled onto the streets of Spain last weekend as the nation celebrated its World Cup victory with a traditional bout of doing unspeakable things to donkeys.

Minutes after the winning goal was scored by someone who was once linked with a move to Chelsea, the mayor of Madrid appeared in the city's main square and kicked a specially selected donkey right up the testicles.

In Valencia, members of the local coastguard draped flags and scarves on a trio of donkeys, herded them to the top of the city's highest bell tower and then pushed them into a shark tank.

And in Seville, donkeys were attached to giant fireworks and sent soaring into the night sky before landing on the outskirts of the city with a dull, wet thud.

Footballologist, Tom Logan, said: "Spain play with such beauty and such passion. In many ways it is a living embodiment of this beautiful, passionate country. And they're also brilliant at messing up donkeys."

Meanwhile it has emerged that match referee Howard Webb flew to Holland last night in his ongoing quest to book absolutely every single Dutch person.

Dismissing Dutch threats of a lifetime pornography ban, Webb started taking names the moment he arrived at Schiphol Airport, before showing the yellow card to his taxi driver, a group of frightened school children and everyone in the lobby of the Amstelveen Ramada.

It is understood Webb's to-do list also includes Amsterdam-born guitar hero Eddie Van Halen, Emmanuelle star Sylvie Kristel and Olympic swimmer Pieter van den Hoogenband.

Match of the Day pundit Alan Hansen backed Webb while urinating on a Dutch flag and demanding the exhumation and imprisonment of the little boy who saved the Netherlands from a devastating flood by sticking his finger in a beefy, short-haired woman.

In the UK, football fans said that while the final had some top quality violence, they spent most of the match applauding the cameraman whose job it is to scan the crowd for tasty-looking birds, of which there were many.

But the biggest cheer of the night went to the last-minute appearance of former president Nelson Mandela, allowing official stand-in Morgan Freeman to go back to his hotel room and watch Hot Tub Time Machine.

Juan Luis Allagro, a football fan and cruelty enthusiast from Cadiz, added: "It is a great day. I cannot wait until our heroes return from South Africa and hurl baby donkeys from the open-topped bus."
