Jumbo problem Tourists warned: Do not feed the elephants

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

In the last week it has been reported that tourists in Bangkok face fines of 10,000 baht if they are caught feeding the elephants that are paraded in the nightlife and shopping areas of the city.

Some have questioned the logic of this rather than preventing the elephant handlers entering in the first place, but most people agree that busy streets are no place for these and other jungle animals. The problem of the 'domesticated' elephants in Thailand is a difficult one though, as the owners have to pay for their upkeep with few options other than tourists now.

AWOL spoke to the Hutsadin Elephant Foundation (see ad p8) and they confirmed that even in Hua Hin it is a problem, and many people will have seen the young elephant roaming the nightlife areas with its two young handlers attempting to sell food for people to give to the animal. The Foundation are trying to make contact with the owner to see if some arrangement can be made to take the elephant off the streets, but so far without success. They estimate that it could cost as much as 850,000 baht if they were to try and buy the elephant. One thing that the people of Hua Hin can do to dissuade the owner from putting the animal on the streets and convince him to give it a better life with the foundation is to not buy food for the elephant; many expats and bar owners already practice this but unfortunately many tourists do not. Hopefully this article can be the start of an education programme, so tell your family, friends and customers - 'DON'T FEED THE ELEPHANT'. While there is no sign of the large fines being imposed in Hua Hin at present, the principle is the same, and it seems likely that it could happen at some point, either announced or not, so from a selfish, financial reason alone it is worth abiding by.

English corner served up by

Do you wonder why we say certain things, or what they really mean? Each week we will examine a different word or phrase and tell you how it came about.

This week it is.. Panic stations

A state of high alert, often a simulated panic for comic effect.

The earliest citation of the term 'panic stations' found in print comes from the New York newspaper The World, September 1892. The actual reference is to 'anti-panic stations', which were units set up by the local medical services in order to reassure the public during a cholera outbreak. However, that can't be said to be the origin of the term, as it has a different meaning to the one that we usually understand.

The real 'panic stations' is a rare linguistic beast, in that it is a nautical phrase that doesn't originate from the heydays of sail. One of the numerous meanings of the word station is 'a position assigned to a man on duty'. The Royal Navy had several commands to call sailors to their stations, notably 'action stations', which was ordered when a ship came under attack. Oddly, for a term that sounds like an ironic play on words, 'panic stations' was an actual command. This is apparent in a report titled Behind the Veil, published in The Times, November 1918:

Alarm gongs had already sent the guns' crews to their invisible guns and immediately after the explosion 'Panic stations' was ordered, followed in due course by 'Abandon ship'.

The above story itself relates to HMS Prize, one of the Q-ships that were used by the UK as a defence against the German U-boat submarines in World War I. Q-ships were heavily armed military vessels disguised as slow and rusting cargo ships, and were filled with wood and other buoyant cargo to enable them to stay afloat after being hit. The disguise was intended to induce the unsuspecting U-boat, assuming there to be no risk, to surface, at which point the Q-ship's hidden guns would be unveiled and an attack would commence. The Germans soon became suspicious of any apparently harmless ship and waited until all threat appeared to have gone before surfacing. The above story explains how, Lieutenant-Commander Sanders, the captain of the sham cargo vessel, even went to the lengths of allowing his ship to be hit and part-submerged before raising the flag and opening fire on the surfacing U-boat.

The Royal Navy fly the White Ensign and the last-minute hoisting of the flag was considered to be a vital part of the engagement, as an attack by an unidentified vessel would have been against the accepted rules of war. Captain Saunders made sure that, although his ship was figuratively 'a wolf in sheep's clothing', it was literally 'showing its true colours'.

As to panic itself, the word is sometimes said to be derived from panicum, the Latin word for millet - which is also the source of the French 'pain', i.e. bread. One of the theories as to the fate of the Mary Celeste, which was discovered abandoned in the Atlantic in 1872 with the crew mysteriously missing, is that the ship's bread was contaminated with the hallucinogenic ergot fungus, causing those on board to panic and throw themselves overboard. Neither of these suggestions is correct. The Mary Celeste ergot theory is based on no evidence and the word panic derives from the eccentric god Pan, who the ancient Greeks believed lived in caves and other lonely places. They attributed any unusual sounds or animal behaviour to him. In ancient Greece, anyone who exhibited any sudden state of wild alarm was said to be like Pan, or as we would say, 'Panic'.

Man hit by six meteorites is being 'targeted by aliens'

A Bosnian man who claims he is being targeted by extraterrestrials after a series of meteorite strikes on his house has now been hit by a sixth space rock in the space of a few years.

Radivoje Lajic first came to international attention in 2008, shortly after the fifth meteorite had crashed into the roof of his house in the northern village of Gornji Lajici.

And now, within the past month, another rock has hit the roof of his house, in defiance of all the odds - making it six strikes since the plague of meteorites began in 2007.

Experts at Belgrade University have confirmed that all the falling rocks he has handed over were meteorites. They are now trying to work out what exactly it is about his house that particularly attracts them. The strikes always happen when it is raining heavily, he says, never when there are clear skies.

Lajic has his own explanation, of course. After the fifth rock struck his house, he said: 'I am obviously being targeted by extraterrestrials. I don't know what I have done to annoy them but there is no other explanation that makes sense. The chance of being hit by a meteorite is so small that getting hit six times has to be deliberate.'

50-year-old Lajic has had a steel girder reinforced roof put on the house to protect it from the alien bombardment - which he funded by selling one of the meteorites to a university in the Netherlands.

'I have no doubt I am being targeted by aliens,' he adds. 'They are playing games with me. I don't know why they are doing this. When it rains I can't sleep for worrying about another strike.'

Southern Illinois singer hits lowest note

It's official: southern Illinois resident Roger Menees is the lowest of the low.

The former gospel singer from Anna, Ill., received a certificate this week from Guinness World Records saying he had sung the lowest note ever produced by a human voice.

Menees managed the feat on Feb. 11 at his Carbondale recording studio. He hit 0.393 hertz - a very low F-sharp. The previous record was 0.797 hertz.

But Menees says he could have done better and will probably make another attempt if his new record is bested anytime soon.

■ DEAR MARY,

I am a 67 year-old 'silver fox' with four children and two failed marriages behind me. Until recently I had given up all hope of finding love again. However, during a recent holiday to Hua Hin with my good friend Billy, something amazing happened. One minute, Me and Billy were in a karaoke bar, doing our best Tom Jones and Frank Sinatra impressions, taking care not to get my cardi snagged on Billy's mobility scooter; the next, I was being seduced by a charming 19-year old sex-pot called Sa. Although we'd only known each other for 20 minutes, Sa had already declared her love and asked about how she might arrange a British passport so we can spend eternity together. All this despite the fact I weigh 18 stone and have an incontinence problem. Do you think it's too soon for us to get a joint bank account?

Dave, Kent

Dear Dave,

Do you remember the days when you were told 'you've never had it so good' by a politician?; or when a President said 'Read my lips, no new taxes?'; or the time your parents promised you a 'fun' family holiday in Hunstanton, which actually turned out to be a miserable week trapped in an airtight caravan with your flatulent granny teaching you every card game known to man; or the Nigerian businessman who via email guarantees you millions of pounds being deposited in your bank; or indeed, the time an England manager promised to get to the World Cup Final? You may have picked up a recurrent theme here, which is basically that things which appear too good to be true invariably are too good to be true. I suggest you bid farewell to Sa, unless you want to run the risk of something terrible happening, like losing your house, your money, all valuable personal belongings and any ounce of self respect you might still have.

Mr Dan A v Dolphin
Play Sports Lounge v Eagle Bar 2

Thank you to all the teams who have entered and we hope that the new season will be both enjoyable and competitive, with the emphasis very much on the former.

Will all teams please contact Dan at Mr Dans Guesthouse to indicate if they intend to provide food at their home matches; this is both to help the away team arrange their meal requirements as well as to allow the bars to reciprocate;
if a bar is unwilling or unable to provide food they should indicate this so that when their team travels to another venue there is no onus on the home venue to provide food for them. If no indication is made it will be assumed that no food is being provided.

This is a matter for the bars to sort out between themselves though as it is not a stipulation of the league that you must provide food. Any complaints regarding food must be sorted out between the individual bars.

Individuals - Top 16

Tuesday saw the Top 16 in action, there were some great matches. The 8 that made it through to the final stage were:

Mark (Oasis), Jo (Oasis), Martin (JW Black), Rune (Scandic A), Golf (Scandic A), Cop (Scandic A), Oil (Jungle Juice) and Ball (Cat A)

Match Results were:

Joe won against Golf

Copy won against Martin

Mark won against Ball

Oil won against Rune

Semi Finals – 5 Legs 301

Mark won against Joe

Cop won against Oil

The final needed all of the 5 legs with Mark being victorious. A great achievement, he was runner up last season and winner the season before! Well played to Cop he put up a great fight.

The evening ended with the presentation of the Trophies for the season by Mack our main sponsor.

England Are Rank -ed 13th in FIFA World Cup List

■ ZURICH, SWITZERLAND

The England football team may not have won the World Cup in South Africa, but their progression into the second stage of the tournament has lifted them into a lofty 13th place in the FIFA World Cup rankings, and coach Fabio Capello says the team deserves "enormous credit". The overall FIFA world rankings show England an incredible 7th position.

The Three Lions put up several impressive displays before eventually succumbing 4-1 to Germany in a closely-fought second-round encounter. Other gripping performances included the 1-1 draw with the USA, and a scoreless draw with African giants, Algeria, before the icing on England's World Cup cake, a 1-0 thrashing of Slovenia.

Today, after the new rankings were published, coach Capello told journalists at the FA's Lancaster Gate headquarters:

"OK, we not win World Cup, but we play good football. Except Wayne Rooney. And John Terry. And Steve Gerrard. And Frank Lampard. And Robert Green. And Matthew Upson. And Emile Heskey. And

Fabio Capello was goosed by the England squad in celebration

Gareth Barry. And Joe Cole. And Ashley Cole. And so on."

The success of the team was always a talking point for fans, and many were in celebratory mood when England's 13th-place ranking was announced. One of those fans who made the trip to South Africa - a trip that cost him nearly £7,000 - was Dennis Numpty, 43, from Essex. He said:

"I'll never go to an England game again. A complete waste of cash."

The entire FIFA World Cup rankings are reproduced below, but, whatever you feel about them, it's important to reflect for a moment on the fact that England are still nine places ahead of New Zealand.

Fifa 2010 World Cup standings:

1 Spain, 2 Netherlands, 3 Germany, 4 Uruguay, 5 Argentina, 6 Brazil, 7 Ghana, 8 Paraguay, 9 Japan, 10 Chile, 11 Portugal, 12 United States, 13 England, 14 Mexico, 15 South Korea, 16 Slovakia, 17 Ivory Coast, 18 Slovenia, 19 Switzerland, 20 South Africa, 21 Australia, 22 New Zealand, 23 Serbia, 24 Denmark, 25 Greece, 26 Italy, 27 Nigeria, 28 Algeria, 29 France, 30 Honduras, 31 Cameroon, 32 North Korea
