Immigration Migrating Again

New home at restaurant on Canal Road

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

Just 18 months after the Hua Hin Immigration offices relocated from their original site in Soi 102 to their current offices in Soi 23, plans are well underway for a move to another new location on Chonlapathan Road, more commonly called the Canal (Klong) Road.

The Three Girls (Sam Poo Ying) restaurant has been named as the destination, and this is roughly the same distance from the town centre as the current site, but with much better access and parking, and it should also have much more spacious offices - anyone who has visited the Soi 23 office will be familiar with the cramped conditions both the officers and foreigners have to contend with. The move is expected to be completed sometime in October, but as yet no firm date is available as work is still ongoing to prepare the new location.

The advice from the immigration office is that if you are due to see them around that time, to call them on 032 522 656 (the phone number at Soi 23) - if there is no answer or that number does not work then it is almost certain that they have already moved to the new location. One unanswered question is whether this is another temporary move, as there have been rumours for some time that a new permanent home will be or is being constructed, but either way it appears that each move made so far has been to the benefit of most people.

Bar is 25 year old Israeli model with the best possible name to play with! Absolutely no connection to sports as far as we know but she looks great in a bikini, we think you'll agree. Apparently has an on-off relationship with none other than Leonardo Di Caprio, but we can't imagine what she sees in him...

English corner served up by

Do you wonder why we say certain things, or what they really mean? Each week we will examine a different word or phrase and tell you how it came about.

This week it is..

If it ain't broke, don't fix it

If something is working adequately well, leave it alone.

Humans seem to have the urge to improve things. Prehistoric hand-axes were made by repeatedly chipping small flakes off pebbles of flint with other hard objects. Million-year-old examples of these have been found that give the impression of being ruined by being chipped just one time too many. That pang of regret we have probably all felt after spoiling something by adding that unnecessary final touch was first faced by Ugg in his cave.

The thought may be Stone Age but the phrase 'if it ain't broke don't fix it', which sounds as though it might come from the Roosevelt or Truman era, is more recent than that. This one is widely attributed to T. Bert (Thomas Bertram) Lance, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget in Jimmy Carter's 1977 administration. He was quoted in the newsletter of the US Chamber of Commerce, Nation's Business, May 1977:

Bert Lance believes he can save Uncle Sam billions if he can get the government to adopt a simple motto: "If it ain't broke, don't fix it." He explains: "That's the trouble with government: Fixing things that aren't broken and not fixing things that are broken."

Lance certainly did popularise the term but it seems to have been a colloquial phrase in the southern states of the USA before his celebrated use of it. For example, this piece is from the Texas newspaper The Big Spring Herald, December, 1976:

"We would agree with the old Georgia farmer who said his basic principle was 'If it ain't broke, don't fix it.'"

Several correspondents from the southern states of the USA have commented that they recall the phrase from well before 1977 - some saying the 1930s. That may be misremembering (which is commonplace in the dating of recently coined phrases) or it may be that the phrase existed in common parlance but not in print. It would be surprising for a phrase to exist in the spoken language for the best part of 50 years before it appeared in print. The Internet has changed the way that new coinages spread and these days a datable record of a new phrase will be apparent within a day or two. Even in the days of newsprint, 50 years is hard to swallow. This suggests that the notion and possibly a variant of the phrase may well have been around for some time before the 1970s, but that the present-day wording of the phrase began then.

George Bernard Shaw's 'two countries divided by a common language' comes into play here. The phrase has to be American. In England things don't get broke, they get broken. Of course 'ain't broke' is intended as a knowing southern yokelism, as opposed to 'proper' American, but it is one that wouldn't have originated anywhere else.

In a few short years, 'if it ain't broke, don't fix it' has, even in the UK, become so established a part of the language as to have become a cliché, which is an unusually quick ascent and descent. Nevertheless, it's a close call as to whether Lance is now best remembered as coining that phrase or for William Safire's pithy description of him as 'Carter's broken Lance' after his resignation in 1977, following the Calhoun National Bank corruption scandal.

■ BUCKINGHAMSHIRE, ENGLAND

Motorised table bids for fastest furniture record

A British motoring enthusiast is hoping to break the world record for the fastest piece of furniture - with a motorised table that can achieve speeds over 100mph. Buckinghamshire-based amateur mechanic Perry Watkins created the speedy table from a Reliant Scimitar sports car chassis and a fuel-injected 4 litre Land Rover Discovery engine boosted by nitrous oxide injection - plus six chairs, elegant place settings, and a dummy that bears a striking resemblance to Top Gear's The Stig.

In some nice touches, the exhaust fumes come out of two silver teapots, the brake lights are encased in rolled-up napkins, and the road-legal vehicle's tax disc is stuck onto the champagne bucket. The table's driver sits in the centre, with their head sticking out of the table just underneath the roast chicken.

Watkins - whose day job is as a sales director at high street shoe repairer Timpson - says that his table, naturally named Fast Food, has hit speeds of 103mph in test runs. He is now trying to take the fastest furniture title - set in 2007 by Edd China and his motorised sofa, which reached 92mph - with an official record attempt at Northamptonshire's Santa Pod Raceway today. Watkins has previously created the world's lowest car, named the Flatmobile, and the world's smallest car, christened the Wind Up.

LIBRARY

A guy visits a library and approaches the desk.

"Excuse me," he says: "Do you have the new self-help book for men with small dicks?"

The librarian replies: "No, it's not in yet."

"Yep, that's the one," says the man.

VIAGRA

A woman goes to the drugstore and asks the pharmacist: "Can you tell me about Viagra?"

"What would you like to know," the pharmacist asks.

"What does it do?" the woman asks.

"Well, when I take it, it enhances my libido and prolongs my erection," the pharmacist says.

"Can you get it over the counter?" the woman asks.

"Yes," the pharmacist replies: "but I'd probably need two pills for that."

CAUGHT IN THE CROSSFIRE

A woman who was pregnant with triplets was caught in the crossfire at a bank robbery and shot three times in the stomach. An operation was too risky so the bullets were never removed.

Sixteen years later, the two girl triplets go crying to their mom. "We were peeing and a bullet came out," they say.

So the mother explains what had happened years earlier. The next day, the boy triplet starts crying.

"Let me guess," the mother says: "you were peeing and a bullet came out?"

"No," he replies: "I was touching myself and I shot the dog."

TWINS

A family had twin boys whose only resemblance to each other was their looks.

If one felt it was too hot, the other thought it was too cold.

If one said the TV was too loud, the other claimed the volume needed to be turned up.

Opposite in every way, one was an eternal optimist, the other a doom and gloom pessimist.

Just to see what would happen, on the twins' birthday their father loaded the pessimist's room with every imaginable toy and game. The optimist's room he loaded with horse manure.

That night the father passed by the pessimist's room and found him sitting amid his new gifts crying bitterly. "Why are you crying?" the father asked.

"Because my friends will be jealous, I'll have to read all these instructions before I can do anything with this stuff, I'll constantly need batteries, and my toys will eventually get broken," answered the pessimist. Passing the optimist twin's room, the father found him dancing for joy in the pile of manure: "What are you so happy about?" he asked.

The optimist replied: "There has to be a pony in here somewhere!"

Your STARS

Capricorn Dec 22 - Jan 19

In a complete reversal of conventional wisdom, you'll find that you do in fact have to be crazy to work at your job, and that no, it doesn't help.

Aquarius Jan 20 - Feb 18

No one knows what mysteries lie deep in the human heart, but you figure they must not be rinsing it thoroughly or using a bright enough flashlight.

Pisces Feb 19 - Mar 20

You've always had a never-say-die attitude. Luckily, your impending death will be so embarrassingly obvious that words will be unnecessary.

Aries Mar 21 - Apr 20

To be truly human is to never give up; however, to be truly human is also to know the meaning of sacrifice. It's some deep sh*t, really.

Taurus Apr 21 - May 21

Financial success continues to elude you, as you have yet to determine the best way to advertise your enjoyable and affordable moustache rides.

Gemini May 22 - June 21

An error in last week's horoscope has probably resulted in you having a midnight encounter with a tall dark strangler. The stars regret any inconvenience.

Cancer Jun 22 - Jul 22

Leo Jul 23 - Aug 22

When all's been said and all's been done and you finally look back on the entirety of your life, it will be about 3 p.m. next Wednesday.

Virgo Aug 23 - Sep 22

Although it's true that the only tool you have is a hammer, everything you see looks a lot more like a sort of medium-sized box than a nail.

Libra Sep 23 - Oct 23

You've never been able to explain why, but you have a sneaking suspicion that the narrator of 10cc's 1975 hit "I'm Not In Love" was in fact in love.

Scorpio Oct 24 - Nov 21

You'll manage to get through the entire Helen Keller presentation with no hilarious slip-ups, but afterward you'll be complimented by a guy with no arms and no legs who likes to water-ski.

Sagittarius Nov 22 - Dec 21

■ DEAR MARY,

Last year I married my boyfriend, Bob, from Ireland (I am Thai) after a few months of being together, blissfully happy. Things are generally very good between us, except when he has been drinking; he doesn't get violent or abusive, but he starts singing, and normally concludes with a song that I had never heard before, complete with all sorts of theatrical actions, which ends with him grabbing me by the upper arms and screaming at the top of his voice "It's a rat trap Judy, and we've been CAUGHT!"

He then normally collapses in a mumbling heap and I have to get him home somehow. What is really disturbing me is the fact that my name is Judy, and I now discover that all of my husband's previous girlfriend's or wives (three of them) were also called Judy. Should I be at all worried by this?

Judy, Nakhom Pathom.

Dear Judy,

I wouldn't get worried by this situation, as it is a well known phenomenon in the UK and Ireland for men to fall back on a song from their youth when they are drunk. 'Rat Trap' was a massive hit over there in the late '70's for an Irish band called the Boomtown Rats and it was extremely common in those days for drunken young men to act out the part of the character in the song, so much so that psychiatrists have named this type of behaviour as 'Rat Trap syndrome'.

There is obviously something in your husband's psychological make up that means he is attracted to anyone with the name of the female character in the song, Judy, so I would suggest that you get rid of anyone with that name in your circle of friends or acquaintances pretty damn quick, by any means possible! I would also suggest you get hold of a copy of the album 'A Tonic For The Troops' as it is a pretty fine album, while also containing said song. You should find everything will go like clockwork from then on.

Fixtures and predictions

(all times Thailand)

Saturday, 11 September 2010

Everton v Man Utd, 18:45

The Toffees are off to another slow start and this early season meeting with Sir Alex's team doesn't do them any favours. However we think this may be a draw.

Arsenal v Bolton, 21:00

The good start Bolton have made is likely to come to a grinding halt at the Emirates. Home win.

Fulham v Wolves, 21:00

Mark Hughes has his work cut out to match his predecessors achievements but he should be able to eke out a win here.

Man City v Blackburn, 21:00

This is the type of game City must win if they are to have any hope of a title challenge or even a European slot; we think they will.

Newcastle v Blackpool, 21:00

The rollercoaster ride for these sides continues but we can't see anything but a home win here.

West Brom v Tottenham, 21:00

A tricky game for Spurs who are already facing a mounting injury list. The Baggies will want to keep it tight and we can sense a draw here.

West Ham v Chelsea, 21:00

Rock bottom Hammers are unlikely to shift after this game, although we expect them to compete. Away win.

Wigan v Sunderland, 21:00

Tough to predict this as both are inconsistent. Sit on the fence time as we predict a draw.

Sunday, 12 September 2010

Birmingham v Liverpool, 22:00

This could be a cracker as unbeaten Birmingham face a patchy Liverpool, and the latter will want to kick start their season. The Reds to snatch an away win.

Tuesday, 14 September 2010

Stoke v Aston Villa, 02:00

A tasty Midlands derby that will be played at a frenetic tempo. Stoke at home are usually fierce opponents while Villa should be bouyant with a new permanent manager in place. Seems like a nailed on draw.

Rooney Ends Drought

Six years without prostitute revelations over

■ MANCHESTER, ENGLAND
MANCHESTER United and England fans were celebrating last night after Wayne Rooney ended a six year prostitute revelation drought.

The striker was back to his best after a series of spectacular £1200-a-night intercourse sessions with a money-grubbing tart who was obviously going to tell the News of the World the moment he crawled back into his childish car. It is the England star's first competitive sex scandal since pumping some fat old skank in the changing room of a Merseyside shell suit boutique in 2004.

Manager Sir Alex Ferguson said: "A lot of people will say that a player of Wayne's extreme wealth and intense stupidity should be bedding greasy whores week in-week out.

"I think even Wayne would accept that they have a point, but the fact that this lad was able to do it while his wife was pregnant is genuinely world class."

Fabio Capello has also welcomed Rooney's return to whore-mongering form.

The England manager said: "The low point was in South Africa,

The Rooneys (left) may now face the horrible task of dividing up their vast collection of ghastly tasteless possessions said it was still unclear how Rooney's wife Coleen would react but it would almost certainly involve a shameless amount of money, the repeated use of the words 'RAT' and 'TEARS' in massive capital letters and then some more money.

She added: "It's such a tragedy because they have been together since Wayne was thinking about having sex with prostitutes as a 14 year-old boy.

"But unfortunately this is the guaranteed outcome when you hitch your wagon to an arse-faced millionaire with the brain of a stuffed gibbon."

Meanwhile some England fans stressed the exposé had once again forced them to imagine what Rooney's orgasm face might look like.

Wayne Hayes, from Hatfield, said: "I reckon it's like an angry, sunburnt tortoise that's just stubbed its toe."

after the Germany game, when Wayne attempted a reverse Dutch Steamboat with a local hooker and ended up fracturing his wrist, losing the remote control and scaring the sweet bejesus out of Peter Crouch.

"For a player of his abilities this was basic sex trade and I worried he'd have to hang up his Travelodge loyalty card for good. But that one in the papers? I would beat you to death with Clive Tyldesley's just to watch her clean the bathroom."
