New army golf course wins expat plaudits

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

Opened at the start of September, the Suan Son, or Sea Pines Golf Course south of Hua Hin and on the edge of Khao Takiab, has been wowing the local expats as they have tried it out over the last two weeks.

New golf courses often need time to 'bed down' but the almost universal response to rounds played at this course are that it is already going to give many of the other courses in the area a run for their money, particularly as the indications are that it will be cheaper than most. Although the club house is not expected to be finished until November, the course condition has been described as excellent by many of the local golfers. The only real criticism made so far has been that the sand in the bunkers round the greens is too hard. Not all the tees are available at time of writing but are expected to be operational soon, and there have been some remarks about the standard of the caddies but these are likely to be just teething problems.

Somerumourshavebeencirculating that the Prime Minister will be coming to the official opening of the course but as yet these remain unconfirmed. Prices at the course are currently following the Golf Festival pricing of 800 baht green fee plus caddy fee (250 baht), but normal prices are expected to be in the 1500 to 2000 baht range.

Memberships will also be available and the unconfirmed prices we have obtained are 30,000 baht for one year or 100,000 baht for five. All in all it appears that the Sea Pines course will be a great addition to the already impressive collection of courses in the area, with the added bonus of being right by the sea, so may also appeal to non-golfing partners. It can only be hoped that sense does prevail on the pricing of the course and that it is also a universal price.

Do you wonder why we say certain things, or what they really mean? Each week we will examine a different word or phrase and tell you how it came about.

This week it is.. Pigs might fly / When pigs fly

A humorous/sarcastic remark, used to indicate the unlikeliness of some event or to mock the credulity of others. For example, "I might make a start on papering the back bedroom tomorrow". "Yes, and pigs might fly".

The original version of the succinct 'pigs might fly' was 'pigs fly with their tails forward', which is first found in a list of proverbs in the 1616 edition of John Withals's English-Latin dictionary - A Shorte Dictionarie for Yonge Begynners: Pigs fly in the ayre with their tayles forward.

This form of the expression was in use for two hundred years as a sarcastic rejoinder to any overly optimistic prediction made by the gullible, much as we now use "...and pigs might fly".

Why pigs? Other creatures were previously cited in similar phrases - 'snails may fly', 'cows might fly' etc., but it is pigs have stood the test of time as the favoured image of an animal that is particularly unsuited to flight. It is probably the bulkiness of the creatures and their habit of rooting in earth that suggests an intensely ramping nature [...and it's nice to have an opportunity to sneak in the little-used 'ramping', which means no more nor less than 'unable to fly'].

Thomas Fuller, in Gnomologia, 1732, was the first to explicitly single out the pig as a ham-fisted aeronaut:

That is as likely as to see an Hog fly.

The first example found of the currently used form is from The Autobiography of Jack Ketch By Charles Whitehead, 1835: Yes, pigs may fly, but they're very unlikely birds.

Flying pigs appeared in print in the UK quite often throughout the rest of the 19th century. The Illustrated Times referred to them in an issue in August 1855: "...pigs might fly. An elephant, too, might dance on the tight-rope."

Lewis Carroll also conjured one up in Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, 1865:

"I've a right to think," said Alice sharply... "Just about as much right," said the Duchess, "as pigs have to fly."

Weird News

■ LOUISIANA, USA

Naked woman steals cab, falls asleep

A woman who took her clothes off in a taxi cab then stole it after the cab driver drove to a police station to complain. Then she had a little nap.

The incident occurred in Covington, Louisiana, at about 2am, when the woman (at that point fully clothed) asked to be taken to Michigan. The cab driver declined to take her to Michigan, probably on the grounds that Michigan is roughly 1,200 miles away from Covington, Louisiana.

This upset the woman, who responded by taking her clothes off in protest. When she refused to get out of the cab the driver drove to the nearest police station.

Unfortunately the driver forgot to take his keys with him when he leapt out of the car upon arriving at the station - giving the woman the perfect opportunity to steal his car from in front of him. The woman drove a few blocks, parked, and fell asleep naked in the back. The woman - identified as 29-year-old Jennifer Gille (pictured left) - was arrested and charged with exposing herself and stealing the vehicle. According to a police spokesman, Gille 'was probably under the influence of some type of chemical.'

■ BANGKOK, THAILAND

Thai senators fight in front of Parliament

Two senators from Thailand ended up trading blows in public - but rather than a political grudge match gone violent, they were taking part in a scrap to promote Thai kickboxing, otherwise known as Muay Thai.

59-year-old Payap Tongchuen and Direk Tungfang, 64, went two rounds in front of Parliament in trunks and gloves. A boxing ring was set up especially for the event in front of the parliament building in Bangkok. Tongchuen joked: 'It's good that I can still stand!'

Direk added: 'The aim is to market Thai boxing, as Muay Thai at the international level. It is also to campaign for the younger generations to maintain this traditional sport.'

The referee avoided any arguments by declaring the two politicians - both former professional boxers - joint victors.

PARAPROSDOKIANS

(with thanks to David)

A paraproisdokian is a figure of speech in which the latter part of a sentence or phrase is surprising or unexpected in a way that causes the reader or listener to reframe or reinterpret the first part. It is frequently used for humorous or dramatic effect.

- Do not argue with an idiot. He will drag you down to his level and beat you with experience.
- Going to church doesn't make you a Christian any more than standing in a garage makes you a car.
- The last thing I want to do is hurt you. But it's still on the list.
- Light travels faster than sound. This is why some people appear bright until you hear them speak.
- If I agreed with you, we'd both be wrong.
- We never really grow up; we only learn how to act in public.
- War does not determine who is right -- only who is left.
- Knowledge is knowing a tomato is a fruit; Wisdom is not putting it in a fruit salad.
- To steal ideas from one person is plagiarism. To steal from many is research.
- Dolphins are so smart that after a few weeks of captivity, they can train people to stand on the edge of the pool and throw them fish.
- I thought I wanted a career; turns out I just wanted pay checks.
- A bank is a place that will lend you money if you can prove that you don't need it.
- I didn't say it was your fault, I said I was blaming you.
- A clear conscience is usually the sign of a bad memory.
- You do not need a parachute to skydive. You only need a parachute to skydive twice.
- Always borrow money from a pessimist. He won't expect it back.
- A diplomat is someone who can tell you to go to hell in such a way that you will look forward to the trip.
- Hospitality: making your guests feel like they're at home, even if you wish they were.
- Money can't buy happiness, but it sure makes misery easier to live with.
- You're never too old to learn something stupid.
- A bus is a vehicle that runs twice as fast when you are after it as when you are in it.
- If you are supposed to learn from your mistakes, why do some people have more than one child?
- Change is inevitable, except from a vending machine.

Don't Miss This Week

- 'Prak' at Cicada Market. Saturday 18th September, performance begins at 7:30 pm. A dance interpretation of the Mae Nak legend- the story of a beautiful young woman who lived by the Phra Khanong canal in Bangkok with her husband, Mak. With Nak pregnant, Mak is called off to war, and is severely injured. While he is being nursed, unknown to him both Nak and the child die during childbirth. When Mak eventually returns home, he is cast under a spell and finds his loving wife and his new child waiting for him and nothing wrong. Neighbours who try to tell Mak that he is living with her ghost meet with grisly ends. And it gets better from there.
- Pichet KlunChun Dance Company presents "Chui Chai", an original dance theatre, at Vic Hua Hin. Saturdays 18 and 25 September starting at 7:30 pm. Tickets 1000, 800, 500 baht. Students 50% off.

■ DEAR MARY,

I have been happily married for several years, and live with my wife on the outskirts of Hua Hin. I like to have one evening a week where I can be by myself, sometimes going out for a walk, sometimes to have a drink. If I do the latter there is a lovely little bar that I always go to which has friendly staff and a nice ambience. I tend to like a whisky and coke, but recently when I have been going there I seem to get a special glass which never empties, however hard I try - I gulp it down and almost before the glass is on the bar it is full again. Consequently I have been getting quite tipsy and have suffered some long periods of memory loss, and my wife has started accusing me of all sorts of things such as unfaithfulness. The thing is I always have a great feeling of contentment the next day after my outings, so my question is should I continue this enjoyable experience and risk losing my wife or stop and be unhappy at losing this freedom?

Indecisive Ian, Hua Hin

Dear Ian,

I think many men will have come to the same crossroads as you are now at, but so many of them take the wrong turn, leading to years of unhappiness and self loathing, bitterness and resentment. The decision they take at a moment such as this changes their life and whole perspective on life, love and women. I can't stress how important this decision is, not just for you, but for your wife too. She could also be facing years of misery and constant nagging doubts as to whether she has been fair on you, and whether she forced you into the wrong decision. Only you can make the decision, and you have to make it for the right reasons.

Ultimately the choice can be simplified in one of two ways; do you sacrifice years of happiness at the risk of your peace of mind, or do you tell your wife where to get off? I think the choice is obvious!

Fixtures and predictions

(all times Thailand)

Saturday, 18 September 2010

Stoke v West Ham, 18:45

The Hammers have officially made their worst ever start to a season and they need some sort of result here. Given their failings dealing with big balls into the box we can't see them getting it. Home win.

Aston Villa v Bolton, 21:00

Villa will finally have Gerard Houllier installed and we expect a reaction immediately. Home win.

Blackburn v Fulham, 21:00

Mark Hughes returns to one of his old clubs, who we don't think will do him any favours. Home win.

Everton v Newcastle, 21:00

The Blues will have been buoyed by their dramatic comeback last week and suspect that they will roll over the Barcodes.

Tottenham v Wolves, 21:00

Tough one to call; Spurs have major injury worries and European matches while Wolves have made a good start, A shock away win.

West Brom v Birmingham, 21:00

Eleven places but only two points separate these great rivals and we think the Baggies will get one over the Blues on this occasion.

Sunderland v Arsenal, 23:30

Even at this early stage the Gunners need to keep pace with Chelsea but this is a tricky fixture; we think a draw.

Sunday, 19 September 2010

Man Utd v Liverpool, 19:30

As True Visions like to somewhat inappropriately call it given the political divide here, the Red War is always compulsive viewing. Liverpool were inept last week while United unexpectedly let Everton back in. Draw.

Wigan v Man City, 21:00

City seem to be living proof that you can't buy success, while Wigan are as unpredictable as they come. Another draw.

Chelsea v Blackpool, 22:00

The tangerine dream is alive and well but we think it will get a good kicking here. Chelsea won in second gear last week and this could be a heavy home win.

Stars unite to keep their dirty laundry hidden

■ LONDON, ENGLAND

A group of current and former sports superstars are preparing a shock class lawsuit against the world's press, claiming that their lives and careers have been significantly affected by the media's lascivious reporting of their private life sex, drug, drink, gambling and violence problems.

Newspapers, magazines, television broadcasters, internet sites, and Jeremy Clarkson have been named in the press release read out by publicist Max Clifford this week, who only on Monday was defending his client Ricky Hatton from press revelations about his drink and drug problems. Following these revelations Hatton coincidentally entered a rehab clinic.

Among the group of superstars are Tiger Woods, John Terry, Wayne Rooney, Hatton, Steven Gerrard, Rio Ferdinand, Paul Gascoigne, David Beckham, Ashley Cole, Frank Lampard and Gary Lineker. When asked why Lineker, former England and Spurs striker and now presenter of the BBC's Match of the Day programme, was involved, Clifford told reporters that he was fed up of the jokes about his mammoth jug ears, which had prevented him becoming the 'Armani Man' and having to settle for being the 'Walker's Crisps Man'.

Apparently Robert Green wanted to join the group on the grounds that his career is in ruins due to media reporting, but was refused as the others were worried that in court he might 'drop the ball'.

Other sporting and non-sporting celebrities, including George Michael (right), Hugh Grant, Britney Spears, Graham Le Saux, Bill Clinton, George Clooney, Tom Cruise and William Hague are apparently considering joining the class action as well but all Clifford would say was "Hmm, well, maybe Spears and Clinton, but all the rest....they're a bit, well, you know..."

Professor Jock Strap from the University of Studies in Willenhall specialises in sports psychology and had this to say about the action; "I think they are all nuts. Most of them have had big payouts from papers like the Sun or News Of The World over the past few years and it is quite clear that the vast majority of the public don't give two hoots about where Wazza waves his willy or what Hatton honks up his hooter. They'll still pay to see them punch someone else's lights out. Mind you, Lineker has got massive ears."

More as we get it.
