AN ILL WIND?

WILL
YELLOW AND RED SHIRT RALLIES IN BANGKOK
AFFECT TOURISM IN HUA HIN?

■ HUA HIN THAILAND The vast majority of business owners in the tourist industry in Thailand would have let out a groan as new rallies were announced by both the People's Alliance for Democracy (PAD) and the United Front for Democracy Against Dictatorship (UDD). Even if the rallies are peaceful, the prospect of things turning nasty again will surely be enough for some people to either cancel existing bookings or choose different countries, and given the hair trigger reactions by foreign governments last time when official warnings not to travel to Thailand were issued and thus insurance for travel here at that time invalid, this is another blow to a high season already blighted by the previous troubles, and here in Hua Hin by local restrictions as outlined in last week's issue of AWOL.

However, all may not be lost, as whatever happens with the rallies, tourists who do come and residents in Bangkok may choose to spend less time there and more time in places like Hua Hin, and with an apparently weakening baht making Thailand cheaper for some Western tourists it can only be hoped that outweighs any of the negatives.

Those of us who have lived and worked in this town in the last few years know that everything carries on here as normal regardless of events elsewhere in the country, be it the military coup in 2006, freak weather such as the tsunami of 2004, the unrest in the south, the occupation of the airport by the yellow shirts or the violence that erupted at the red shirt protest last year, with at most some minor travel issues in the majority of cases. It is perhaps something that potential visitors should be made aware of to encourage them to come to the town.

■ HERTFORDSHIRE, ENGLAND
Family find car three years after parking it

Gerald Sanctuary and his family have been reunited with a car they lost almost three years ago.

Sanctuary left the silver Honda in a car park while he went shopping in May 2008.

But the 80-year-old, who suffers dementia, then forgot where he had left it.

Despite a search, it stayed undiscovered in the NCP site until attendant Charlene Lewis noticed it looking suspiciously dirty last month and called police.

Mr Sanctuary's son, Nigel, said: 'It's just amazing that it was right under our noses the whole time.'

The 50-year-old, of St Albans in Hertfordshire, said the vehicle, which still had a credit card on the dashboard, worked fine despite its long lay-off.

'It's a real wonder it fired up straight away,' he added.

■ BLACK FOREST, GERMANY
British pensioner drives into church in Germany 'because SatNav told him to'

A 76-year-old British pensioner and his wife spent the night in hospital with minor injuries after driving into the side of a church in Germany - because they were following instructions from their satellite navigation system.

The couple were driving their Renault through southern Germany when the car's GPS system developed a fault and directed them to turn right.

However, despite there being no road, the couple turned off the country lane - and ploughed straight into a rural village church near the Austrian border.

A police spokeswoman from the nearby town of Immenstadt described the couple as 'confused', adding: 'They didn't notice that the navigation system was faulty.'

The crash saw the car written off completely - but, more significantly, cause as much as £21,500-worth of repairs to the church, including damage to the building's foundations.

A picture also fell off the wall.

The couple are said to have been on a driving holiday and were making their way through the Black Forest region of Germany and into France.

■ Do you wonder why we say certain things, or what they really mean? Each week we will examine a different word or phrase and tell you how it came about.

This week it is.. On the ball

To be alert; in command of one's senses.

Some authorities have suggested that 'on the ball' originated in the sporting arena, and alludes to runners being on the balls of their feet, eagerly ready to run a race. It is a plausible derivation, but has nothing to recommend it beyond that.

A more commonly advocated location for the source of 'on the ball' is the Royal Observatory at Greenwich. This is where the oldest surviving and best known time-ball is sited. The Greenwich time-ball was installed in 1833 to signal the accurate time to passing ships. It was, and still is, raised just before 1pm each day and falls as 1pm strikes on the observatory's clock. Captains needed to have their ships' chronometers set accurately in order to navigate correctly, hence they needed to be 'on the ball'. It's a nice story but again unfortunately it isn't true. The phrase 'on the ball' did actually originate in the sporting arena, but relates to the eyes rather than the feet. It is a contraction of the earlier expression 'keep your eye on the ball', advice given to participants in virtually every known ball game. For the source, we need to look to early ball games. The phrase is recorded in early records of cricket, golf, croquet and baseball and many people regard baseball as the origin. Well, that appears to be almost true - the earliest citation found in print comes from the English game of rounders. The English novelist William Kingston wrote 'books for boys', and in 1864 published Ernest Bracebridge, or, Schoolboy Days, which includes this scene: Ellis seized the bat with a convulsive clutch... Remembering Ernest's advice, he kept his eye on the ball, and hit it so fairly that he sent it flying away to a considerable distance. "Capital!" cried Ernest. "Run! run! - two bases at least."

American readers will recognise the similarity of the rounders terminology with that of baseball. For those not familiar with rounders and/or baseball, suffice it to say that they are essentially the same game, but that it is easier to imagine Sylvester Stallone playing baseball. There's no consensus on this but there's a strong case to be made that baseball is in fact an English game, being merely a beefed-up variation of rounders.

In 1744, which is certainly before anyone is known to have played baseball in the USA, John Newbery, an English publisher and a man with a reasonable claim to be the originator of literature printed specifically for children, produced A Little Pretty Pocket-Book, intended for the Amusement of Little Master Tommy and Pretty Miss Polly. That title sounds entirely suitable as the source of the rules of the game of rounders, which is played nowadays by children. Nevertheless, the book includes a graphic labelled Base-Ball, which shows men playing the game and which is accompanied by a rhyme that pretty much sums up the basics of both rounders and baseball: The ball, once stuck off, Away flies the boy To the next destin'd post, And then home with joy.

Baseball may or may not have been the origin of 'keep your eye on the ball', but it did take over the use of the phrase. As well as as the batters 'keeping their eye on the ball', the pitchers were also said to 'put something on the ball', i.e. they imparted some spin or curve on it, and this usage dates from the start of the 20th century. The figurative version of the phrase 'on the ball', i.e. with the meaning of being 'alert or apt' in a context where no actual ball is present, began later still. In 1989, W. C. Williams and J. Laughlin published Selected Letters, which contained an extract from a letter written Williams in 1939: The novella by Quevedo... [is] right on the ball. As to whether the phrase originated in the USA or the UK, on present evidence, let's call it a 1-1 draw.

PATTAYA BEACH COULD ERODE AWAY WITHIN FIVE YEARS, ACADEMIC WARNS

World-famous Pattaya Beach is in danger of disappearing due to the erosion there, an academic warned yesterday.

"If we don't do something, Pattaya Beach will likely vanish within five years," said Prof Thanawat Jarupongsakul, a lecturer at Chulalongkorn University.

The latest survey found Pattaya's shore was only four or five metres deep, compared to 35.6m in 1952 and 18.7m in 2002, he told a meeting on the master plan for the development of Pattaya Beach.

The plan recommends drawing back sand that has been swept away. Up to 200,000 cubic metres would be needed. "The refilling process will take about one year," he said.

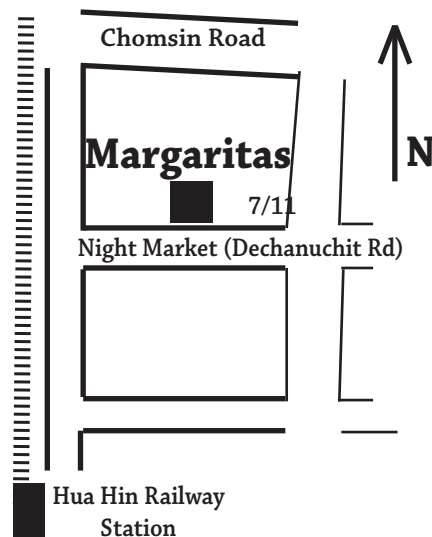

Pattaya City Major Ittipon Khunpleum said the erosion of Pattaya Beach was an urgent problem. "All parties should lend a hand," he said.

Rerm Chiawkij, however, has rented beach chairs there for half a century and does not think there is any real problem. "From what my eyes can see, the beach gets smaller between November and February only. But when the wind changes direction after that, the beach gets bigger again," he said.

BALLOON RIDES AT HUA HIN HILL VINEYARD. From February 12 until March 6, Hua Hin Hill Vineyard together with its partners is hosting the inaugural Hua Hin Hot Air Ballooning Festival. The private one-hour flight (Bt15,000/person) might not fly you to the moon but it does promise stunning views over the 480-acre vineyard estate and the surrounding countryside. Once back on the ground, a sparkling wine breakfast is served in a party tent set among the vines while a traditional jazz band performs.

■ THE SKY IS GRAY The news that Andy Gray had been sacked from Sky Sports just came up on the TV, my wife was going on about how he deserves to be sacked from Sky Sports. I told her it was just a joke that has been blown out of proportion and that it was over the top to sack him. She insisted that it was fair to sack him and I should look at it from a women's point of view. So I unplugged the TV, took it into the kitchen and watched it there.

■ KEYS TO BEING SEXIST It has been announced that FIFA 12 will contain only female match officials with immediate effect.

Additional options will be available for the game.

1. Shoe selection.
2. Half-time reapplication of makeup.
3. PMT controls, varying from 'Reasonable' to 'Raving'.
4. Bitch-slapping for dissent.
5. Consultation time between officials for up to half an hour, including tea/coffee and a little table and chairs.
6. Choice of matching or clashing outfits for the officials.

There will be no offside rule (for obvious reasons), fouls will depend on PMT settings and games will last for no longer than 10 minutes due to short attention span.

Commentary by Andy Gray and Richard Keys, with an option to turn off 'laughing' and 'abuse'.

■ OBAMA President Barack Obama visits a Glasgow hospital and enters a ward full of patients with no obvious sign of injury or illness.

He greets one. The patient replies:

*Fair fa your honest sonsie face,
Great chieftain o the puddin' race,
Aboon them a ye take yer place,
Painch, tripe or thairm,
As lang's my airm.*

Obama is confused, so he just grins and moves on to the next patient. The next patient responds:

*Some hae meat an canna eat,
And some wad eat that want it,
But we hae meat an we can eat,
So let the Lord be thankit.*

Even more confused, and his grin now rictus-like, the President moves onto the next patient, who immediately begins to chant:

*Wee sleeikit, cowerin, timorous beastie,
O the panic in thy breastie,
Thou needna start awa sae hastie,
Wi bickering brattle*

Now seriously troubled, Obama turns to the accompanying doctor and asks, 'Is this a psychiatric ward?'

'No' replies the doctor, 'this is the serious Burns unit'

PREMIER LEAGUE

WEDNESDAY, 2 FEBRUARY 2011

Arsenal v Everton, 02:45

Not easy for the home side but they should still win this.

Sunderland v Chelsea, 02:45

Chelsea seem to have got over their bad patch and we expect a narrow away win.

Man Utd v Aston Villa, 03:00

Villa are an in form team but United are imperious at Old Trafford - home win.

West Brom v Wigan, 03:00

Likely to be a bit of a scrappy game but we think the Baggies can come out on top.

THURSDAY, 3 FEBRUARY 2011

Birmingham v Man City, 02:45

Neither team is very consistent at the moment but Man. City should pick up the win here.

Blackburn v Tottenham, 03:00

Rovers will battle but Spurs have the quality to grab the victory here.

Blackpool v West Ham, 03:00

Probably the toughest prediction of the week as both teams could well be markedly different than previously. Draw.

Bolton v Wolverhampton, 03:00

Bolton have lost their edge lately but Wolves are hardly firing on all cylinders either. Narrow home win.

Tables do not include result of Liverpool v Fulham match played Wednesday night.

Fulham v Newcastle, 03:00

Another tricky prediction as Newcastle are notoriously fragile away in London, while Fulham are inconsistent. Home win.

Liverpool v Stoke, 03:00

This would have been a stroll in the park in seasons gone by for the home side, but no longer - Stoke are a neat efficient team who are hard to break down so we think a draw.

TAKE A BOW, SON

■ LONDON, ENGLAND

After the media furore following off air comments made by Sky Sports football anchors Richard Keys and Andy Gray about female assistant referees and their knowledge of the offside rule, a further 'secret' video of Gray engaging in sexually laced banter with a female presenter has been released as Sky sacked one of the faces of football on British TV.

Keys meanwhile has apologised for his comments and remains as big an anchor as ever, although both he and Gray were removed from the Bolton - Chelsea coverage on Monday night. Gray, commonly known as 'that big headed sweaty' is currently engaged in legal proceedings against a private investigator used by the News Of The World in an attempt to get the names of the journalists who requested the hacking of his and other famous people's phones. The News Of The World, more commonly known as

'that odious rag' is, of course, part of the News Corporation empire owned by Rupert Murdoch, who coincidentally also own a large part of BSkyB, Gray's employers. News Corporation is trying to take over BSkyB completely, but few commentators think that the sacking of Gray for saying and doing what every normal bloke does could possibly have any connection to any decision by the Government to refer that takeover to the Competition Commission, despite the virtual

ANDY GRAY SACKED FOR ACTING LIKE A NORMAL BLOKE.....OR WAS HE?

Sky viewers are reportedly disappointed in Richard Keys & Andy Gray (pictured left). One said "In this day and age women in football should be given more respect, especially the attractive ones with big tits."

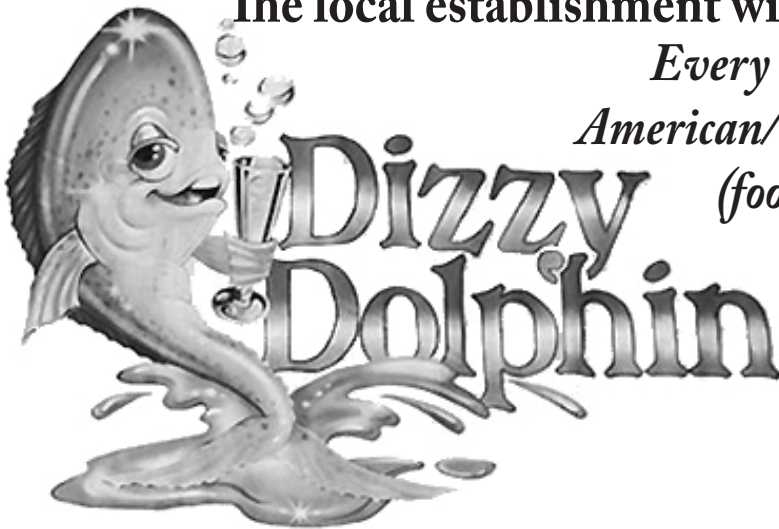

monopoly News Corporation already has on the world's media. These same commentators also cannot see any hypocrisy in the condemning of Gray by the media giant that thrives on pictures of half naked women in its newspapers and employs female presenters for their looks rather than ability.

Ron Atkinson was previously sacked as a football pundit for inappropriate comments, and he feels that Gray has been treated harshly. He added that "You would never find me making comments about a female official like that though, unless she was a nig-nog."
