COUPLE SLAIN AT RESORT

BRITISH EXPAT AND THAI WIFE MURDERED IN THAP SAKAE

HUA HIN, THAILAND

An elderly British man and his Thai wife were robbed and beaten to death by three men, including a chef and a security guard, at a beach resort in Thailand, police said Wednesday.

A worker at the Jack Beach Resort in Thap Sakae district of Prachuap Khiri Khan province, about 100 kilometres south of Hua Hin, found the badly beaten bodies of Michael Raymond, 68 and Suchada Baokhamdee, 52, Tuesday afternoon in their beach front bungalow. The couple had checked in at the resort on the Gulf of Thailand a day earlier.

"They were beaten with a chair and other hard objects," case officer Captain Winai Raila-aied said.

Police have arrested three Thai men, including two resort staff and a villager, who all confessed to robbery and murder.

"At first two suspects -- a chef and a security guard -- admitted they had robbed the couple of 2,000 baht ($43), a mobile phone and a Bangkok Bank ATM card," Winai said. "Now all three have confessed to their wrongdoing".

Police named the confessed killers as security guard Pongpitak Tapsawang, 29, and cook Prajak Maunjinka, 50. Fisherman Jakkarin Auyen, 30, is believed to be the third suspect.

A maid went to the room on Tuesday at 3.30pm after the couple failed to appear. The body of Mr Raymond, dressed only in brown shorts, was found near a sofa with his face and head savagely beaten. His wife, dressed only in a pink top, was found with similar wounds near the refrigerator. Winai added that Mr Raymond had lived in the northeastern Thai province of Khon Kaen for two years since he got married.

A spokesperson for the Jack Beach Resort said: ''We are shocked and horrified. This has always been a safe place. We have often left doors open, without fear of robbery. Now we will have to reassess the casual holiday way."

The 17-bungalow resort on the Gulf of Thailand has been open for seven years. The couple had checked in just for the one night, the spokesperson said.

Prachuab Khiri Khan Governor Veera Sriwattanatrakul said that the gruesome murder badly tarnished the province and its tourism business. Resorts in the province should from now on be equipped with security cameras to ensure safety and help police if crimes occurred.

AWOL SAYS:

The increasingly battered reputation of the safety of Thailand for foreigners has taken another blow with this horrific attack, although great kudos should go to the police for their quick work in apprehending the alleged culprits. What is needed now though is for these murderers to be dealt with quickly by the Thai legal system and be made an example of, with the harshest possible penalty imposed, regardless of the fact that they have made confessions.

While violent crime is a fact of life the world over, it appears to be an increasing menace in Thailand, although it could just be better or less restricted reporting of it here. Either way, the tourist business and related sectors are being affected, and the perpetrators of such crimes need to be very visibly punished to both deter others and restore foreigners' confidence.

■ Do you wonder why we say certain things, or what they really mean? Each week we will examine a different word or phrase and tell you how it came about.

This week it is.. As pleased as Punch
Very pleased.

'As pleased as Punch' derives from the Mr. Punch puppet character. Punch's name itself derives from Polichinello (spelled various ways, including Punchinello), a puppet used in the 16th century Italian Commedia dell'arte.

Punch and Judy shows, the popular summer-time entertainments on British beaches, have been somewhat in decline from the latter half of the 20th century onward, due to them being seen as politically incorrect. That's hardly surprising as the main character Punch is a wife-beating serial killer.

In performance, the grotesque Punch character is depicted as self-satisfied and delighted with his evil deeds and squawking "That's the way to do it!" whenever he dispatches another victim. Nevertheless, there is still what might be called a folk affection for the old rogue in the UK and it would be a shame to see the tradition fade away completely.

The show had an Italian origin and has been much changed over the years. It began in Britain at the time of the restoration of the monarchy in the 17th century. Samuel Pepys' Diary has an entry from 1666 that shows this early origin and also the popularity of the show even then:

"I with my wife... by coach to Moorefields, and there saw 'Polichinello', which pleases me mightily."

The phrase 'as pleased as Punch' appears fairly late in the story. The earliest known record is from William Gifford's satires The Baviad, and Maeviad, 1797:

Oh! how my fingers itch to pull thy nose! As pleased as Punch, I'd hold it in my gripe.

'As pleased as Punch' is now the most common form of the expression. When the term was coined it was just as usual to say 'as proud as Punch'. Charles Dickens, for example used the two terms interchangeably in his novels; for example:

David Copperfield, 1850: I am as proud as Punch to think that I once had the honour of being connected with your family.

Hard Times, 1854: When Sissy got into the school here.. her father was as pleased as Punch.

A father, son and grandson went to the country club for their weekly round of golf. Just as they reached the first tee, a beautiful young blonde woman carrying her bag of clubs approached them. She explained that the member came with her to the club for a round of golf had an emergency that called him away and asked the trio whether she could join them. Naturally, the guys all agreed.

Smiling, the blonde thanked them and said, 'Look, fellows, I work in a topless bar as a dancer, so nothing shocks me anymore. If any of you want to smoke cigars, have a beer, bet, swear, tell off-color stories or do anything that you normally do when playing a round together, go ahead. But, I enjoy playing golf, consider myself pretty good at it, so don't try to coach me on how to play my shots.'

With that the guys agreed to relax and invited her to drive first. All eyes were fastened on her shapely behind as she bent to place her ball on the tee. She then took her driver and hit the ball 270 yards down the middle, right in front of the green. The father's mouth was agape. 'That was beautiful,' he said. The blonde put her driver away and said, 'I really didn't get into it, and I faded it a little.'

After the three guys hit their drives and their second shots, the blonde took out an eight iron and lofted the ball within five feet of the hole. The son said, 'Damn, lady, you played that perfectly.' The blonde frowned and said, 'It was a little weak, but even an easy seven would have been too much club. I've left a tricky little putt.' She then tapped in the five-footer for a birdie. Having the honors, she drove first on the second hole, knocked the heck out of the ball, and it landed nearly 300 yards away smack in the middle of the fairway.

For the rest of the round the statuesque blonde continued to amaze the guys, quietly and methodically shooting for par or less on every hole.

When they arrived at the 18th green, the blonde was three under par, and had a very nasty 12-foot putt on an undulating green for a par.

She turned to the three guys and said, 'I really want to thank you all for not acting like a bunch of chauvinists and telling me what club to use or how to play a shot, but I need this putt for a 69 and I'd really like to break 70 on this course. If any one of you can tell me how to make par on this hole I'll take him back to my apartment, pour some 35-year-old Single Malt Strath Mill Scotch in him, fix him a steak dinner and then show him a very good time the rest of the night.'

The yuppie son jumped at the thought! He strolled across the green, carefully eyeing the line of the putt and finally said, 'Honey, aim about 6 inches to the right of the hole and hit it firm. It will get over that little hump and break right into the cup.'

The father knelt down and sighted the putt using his putter as a plumb. 'Don't listen to the kid, darlin', you want to hit it softly 10 inches to the right and let it run left down that little hogback, so it falls into the cup.'

The old grey-haired grandfather walked over to the blonde's ball, picked it up and handed it to her and said, 'That's a gimme, sweetheart.'

The blonde smiled and said, 'Your car or mine?'

■ KEELE, ENGLAND Muggles master their quaffles for first British Quidditch match

The pupils at Hogwarts Academy would have been proud. Quidditch, the fictional ball game from the Harry Potter books, is now being played in Britain.

The first official match was held at the weekend and Keele University beat Leicester University 2-1.

To play the game, opposing teams of seven have to put 'quaffles' into hoops while avoiding dodgeballs known as 'bludgers'.

The flying 'snitch' is played by a neutral player dressed in yellow with a tennis ball in their waistband.

In the absence of flying broomsticks, players have to run around with sticks or brooms between their legs.

Although Quidditch is new to Britain, more than 400 teams play in the US.

Keele student Megan Shaw, 20, who refereed the match, said: 'We really hope it takes off.'

■ PENRYN, ENGLAND 'Fabulous' corkscrew made from scrap metal sells for £100,000

Inventor Rob Higgs hopes to stop the act of opening a bottle of wine from being a chore with his £100,000 corkscrew made from 300 pieces of scrap metal.

His complex corkscrew machine uses two cannon balls, a clock spring and a steam engine to pour a glass of wine – and now stands to make its creator a pretty penny.

The mind-boggling machine has already been sold to a six-star hotel for £100,000.

Mr Higgs, from Penryn, Cornwall, has also been commissioned to make 25 more of the machines so is sure to be raising a glass to his creativity.

Mr Higgs, who describes his work as 'being similar to Heath Robinson drawings', spent four years building the prototype which has been branded a 'fabulous talking point'.

He said he was inspired by items in his grandfather's workshop as a child and had spent most of his life creating wacky inventions.

'The majority of the corkscrew machine is stuff that I found in places like scrap yards, car boot sales and antique fairs,' he said. 'I also have a workshop which has tons of hoarded rubbish and piles of junk. It's a useful brain exercise because it gives you ideas. It's like going to a library.'

FEATURED GAME

THURSDAY, 22 MARCH 2012
PREMIER LEAGUE
Man City v Chelsea 02:45
Etihad Stadium, Manchester, England
A crucial game for both sides as City try to retake top spot or keep pace with United, while Chelsea try to regain a top four chance. It's a chance for City to really stick the knife in to an ailing challenger, and we think they will with some force to knock the Blues out of contention completely.

OLYMPIC OPENING CEREMONY TO INCLUDE SCOTTISH HEROIN ADDICT CLIMBING OUT OF TOILET

■ LONDON, ENGLAND

After Olympic opening ceremony director Danny Boyle enlisted dance music duo Underworld to help launch the 2012 event, the world is preparing itself for a giant mechanical heroin addict climbing out of a 100-foot high dirty toilet.

Boyle and Underworld have been reunited after Olympic organisers agreed that nothing really captured life in the UK quite like one of their early collaborations, 1996 film Trainspotting.

A London 2012 spokesperson said, "What we have created here is the 'dream team', a group of people capable of creating the imagery and music that really defines what it means to be British in the modern age."

"We haven't seen too much from Danny yet, but he did ask for £100k for a bus-sized animatronic dog turd and wanted to know the decibel limit for badly orchestrated drum and bass played from the open window of a Vauxhall Nova."

"What could be more British than that?"

More than 100,000 people have auditioned to take part on the opening ceremony, but director Boyle insists he has yet to find the perfect blend of apathy and disdain that is considered so quintessentially British.

"It's a challenge to find the right person, certainly." said Boyle

"This is an opportunity to show the world what the UK is all about, and I see this as being as much about education as it is promotion of the Olympics."

"If only Renton was a real person we'd already be in rehearsals."
