ON THE RISE

FLOODING FEARS TO BOOST HUA HIN?

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

With the images of Bangkok and the northern provinces being ravaged by deadly flood waters still fresh from last year, the latest flooding taking place in Sukhothai, where large areas are under one and a half metres of water, and other northern areas, combined with the widely reported failure of the drainage test carried out in Bangkok, is leaving large sections of the Thai population with little confidence that this year will not be a repeat.

This is starting to show in the Hua Hin area, not that there appears to be any risk of anything other than occasional minor flooding here despite the heavy rains this year, but in the apparently increased numbers of Thai people arriving from the capital.

There are no statistics covering this, but anecdotal evidence suggests more traffic and higher occupancy of the many condominium blocks that are largely owned by Bangkok Thais. Some businesses are also reporting increased trade from non-local Thais.

Clearly, after last year when repeated assurances that the capital would not flood proved disastrously wrong, there is a feeling that it is better to be safe than sorry, and if this really is borne out with larger numbers of Thais visiting and staying in this area, it should in most cases be a benefit to the town and businesses here. Even though Thai 'tourists' generally have less money to spend than their foreign counterparts, there is still a great opportunity for canny businesses to take advantage of, and the town could experience a welcome early surge before the high season. While it has to be hoped that the politicians and experts are correct in their assertions that there will not be flooding this year on anything like the scale of last, it is not wrong to hope that Hua Hin will benefit from doubting residents.

■ UNITED KINGDOM Request for ferret makes it into list of most bizarre room service calls

From an extra pillow to a night cap, there are many reasons why a hotel guest might call reception to make their stay a more restful one. But what about the request: 'Could you send me a ferret please...'

It is one among a list of room service calls made by travellers so bizarre they read like plots not even John Cleese dared attempt for his madcap hotelier character Basil Fawlty.

The ferret was requested by a guest who was visiting a small animals show and didn't want to go alone. Another barmy boarder begged for sea salt scrub to remove her fake tan after it had gone wrong, while one out-of-towner requested 'a room with a sea view' after checking in at a Birmingham hotel – and was politely instructed the nearest seaside resort was 172km (107 miles) away.

Other outlandish appeals include an extra bed for a doll, a large ground-floor room so a guest could leave his motorbike there, a place at the breakfast table for a religious statue and a far-out demand from a patron who asked for a ghost to be sent to his room.

The list of kooky calls was made to staff working at Best Western hotels across Britain.

■ DELHI, INDIA Smugglers arrested with monkeys in their pants

Three men have been arrested in India after attempting to board a plane with monkeys hidden in their pants.

Customs officials became suspicious of the trio after spotting a bulge in one man's underwear during a routine frisk at Delhi airport. On further inspection, two of the men were found to have rare slender lorises concealed in a pouch hidden in their pants. According to reports, one of the nocturnal primates measured 7in in length and weighed 150g.

The three suspected smugglers were heading to Dubai. Another loris abandoned by the group was found in a bin outside the airport. 'On their direction another little monkey was recovered from a dustbin in the airport. They had abandoned him as they were unable to carry him,' said one official. The condition of the animals was described as 'OK, but deteriorating'. They are currently being treated in hospital under the care of People For Animals, India's largest animal welfare organisation. All three men were arrested under India's wildlife protection act.

■ Do you wonder why we say certain things, or what they really mean? Each week we will examine a different word or phrase and tell you how it came about.

This week it is... . Jack in the box

A toy consisting of a box containing a figure with a spring, which leaps up when the lid is raised.

On the face of it, a Jack-in-the-box is a harmless and amusing children's toy. 'Jack' is usually a clown figure, which pops up on a coiled spring when the box lid is opened. The clowning purists amongst you will probably by now be muttering that they aren't clowns but augustes. You would be right of course. Clowns have white-face make-up and usually wear pointed hats and ruffled collars. Augustes are the red-nosed guys with oversized trousers and squirty flowers in their buttonholes.

Jack was clearly intended to be a comic figure but not everyone finds him amusing. Fear of clowns has become a widespread enough condition lately for someone to have invented a name for it - coulrophobia. The word has no real etymological pedigree and was coined in the past twenty or so years.

The expression 'Jack in the box' existed for centuries before anyone thought of putting spring-loaded puppets inside boxes. The first reference known in print is found in John Foxe's Actes & Monuments, 1563, in which he reported a comment made by Bishop Nicholas Ridley:

[There are] railyng bils against the Lords supper, terming it Iack of the boxe, the sacrament of the halter, round Robin, with like unsemely termes.

It is clear that the term was used to represent something unsavoury and insulting. Very soon afterwards there is another reference that shows the phrase to have a meaning close to those who peddled 'a pig in a poke'. 'Jack in the box' was the name given to a swindler who cheated tradesmen by substituting empty boxes for the full ones that were expected. Such a 'Jack' is found in James Cranstoun's reprinting of Satirical Poems of the time of the Reformation. An anonymous poem, entitled The Bird in the Cage, was first published in 1570:

Jak in the bokis, for all thy mokis a vengeance mot the fall!
Thy subteltie and palzardrie our fredome bringis in thrall.

[Cheat, for all of your mockery revenge must be taken! Your cunning and devious behaviour threatens our freedom.]

There is a theory that the expression derives from the story of Sir John Schorne, a celebrated 12th century pious Christian who was believed by the people of Norfolk to possess healing powers. He was said to have caught the Devil and held him captive in his boot. Several English church screens still contain images of Schorne with the Devil peeping out of a boot. This was (much later) said to be the origin of the name of the toy Jack-in-the-box'. With no real evidence that connects Schorne to the expression, and 700 years later we aren't likely to find any, coupled with the fact that the children's toy didn't emerge until the 18th century, we can reasonably discount that supposed origin.

'Jack in the box' was also the name given to a type of firework and this is found in John Babington's Pyrotechnia, 1635: Another, [firework] which I call Iack in a box.

The 18th century inventors of the children's pop-up toy needed a name for it. It was a figure in a box that jumped up and gave people a fright. What better than to do what others in various fields had already done and adopt the existing 'Jack-in-the-box' expression?

'Jack in the box' was first used as the name of the toy in the 1702 text Infernal Wanderer:

Up started every one in his seat, like a Jack in a box...

So, Jack-in-the-box was variously a religious insult, a swindler, the Devil and an incendiary device - clearly a character not to be meddled with. Even non-coulrophobic children might do well to be wary of Jack. He may not have been real but, as a bogeyman, he had some impressive credentials.

■ EYESIGHT

A certain old lady thought her eyesight was going bad, and she was advised to go to see an optician. She goes in to see the optician, who says, "All right, let's check you out. You sit down here on this stool. You put your right hand over your right eye and read that chart on the wall over there."

The old lady puts her left hand over her left eye. The optician says, "No, no, no. Put your right hand over your right eye." Now the old lady puts both hands over both eyes. The optician is now getting upset.

The patient continues to screw up, and the optician really gets mad and says, "All right, I'll fix you!" He gets a paper bag out of the closet, puts one hole in it, puts it over the old lady's head, and says, "Now, read that chart!" The woman then reads it perfectly!

The doctor takes the bag off, and the old lady starts crying like a baby. The doctor says, "Now, what the hell is wrong with you?"

"Well, when I first came in here, I had my heart set on wire frames!"

■ SEX CHANGE

Went to the hospital with my brother the other day
He's just had a sex change operation .... It went really well.

In fact it went that well it took him half an hour to reverse out of the hospital carpark.

■ INNER SELF

I got in touch with my inner self today.

That's the last time I buy Tesco Value toilet roll.

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

Journey to the past this week by realizing that things are pretty much the same miserable way they've always been.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

You're about to give birth to one of life's greatest miracles. Unfortunately for you, it's the one with the multiplying loaves and fishes.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

The old public-speaking trick of imagining the audience naked has served you well in the past, but that was before you had to give a talk to a room full of burn survivors.

ARIES MAR 21 – APR 20

All of your questions will soon be answered, including what's that noise, who turned off all the lights, and why—why won't it stop feeding on us?

TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

You always knew your girlfriend was going to be high-maintenance. Still, never did you imagine you'd be replacing the internal combustion engine by yourself.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

They say you love money more than anything else in the world, but then, they've never seen you around a stack of pancakes.

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22

Be sure to choose your words carefully this week, as you've only got about seven of them left.

LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

When you were born they threw away the mold. Also, they threw away the glass womb, the intravenous feeding tubes, the contaminated petri dishes, and most of the funding.

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

The thought of an invisible man who lives above the clouds and judges all of mankind might seem silly to you, but, hey, that's Greg.

LIBRA SEP 23 – OCT 23

You'll soon see yourself in a whole new light, which is too bad, as it's the kind police investigators use to check for semen stains.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

The stars indicate professional success in the days to come, though it's quite difficult for them to keep a straight face during it.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

It might not be today, and it might not be tomorrow, but you'll soon come to regret staging a pie-eating contest to select a new wife.

FEATURED GAME

SATURDAY 15TH SEPTEMBER 2012
PREMIER LEAGUE
Sunderland v Liverpool 23:30
Stadium Of Light, Sunderland, England
Every game that comes along now for Brendan Rodgers and his Liverpool side is going to be seen by the media as an opportunity to stick the knife in; such is the nature of modern football. Martin O'Neill's side will certainly be looking to twist the knife but this is a game between two sides in transition, and either one might click on the day, and hopefully both. A draw wouldn't be a bad result for either, and that is exactly what we think will happen, although if Liverpool fail to score it will not go down well even if they get an away point. We think that come the end of the season Liverpool's early season form will be forgotten and they will be comfortably in the top ten, with Sunderland a couple of places below them.

FANTASY PREMIER LEAGUE

IT'S BACK! The AWOL Challenge is up and running again - anyone who was in the league last season will automatically be entered again this new season once they re-register with the same log in, and new players are more than welcome to join up.
New players should go to http://fantasy.premierleague.com/ and sign up to the main game, then once your team has been set, click on 'Leagues' and then 'Join A League'; the code to join the AWOL Challenge is

165133-47924

Each week we will print a league table showing the top players in the AWOL Challenge, and you will also be able to follow your progress in both this league and the main competition on the Premier League website. You can join as many other private or public leagues as you want, or even set up your own mini league.

FREEDOM!

MURRAY VOWS TO DRIVE THE ENGLISH OUT OF SCOTLAND

■ DUNBLANE, SCOTLAND

Newly crowned US Open champion Andy Murray is using his fame to unite Scotland against the English, it has emerged.

The 25-year-old Scot is the first British person to win a Grand Slam title in 76 years, making him a huge celebrity in his home country where he is known as 'Braveracket'.

Murray said: "This victory is sweet, but it is nothing compared to the taste of FREEDOM! What you have seen here today is just a small example of what a Scot can achieve if he is bold, carries a metal implement and has vengeance in his heart.

"There is one true monarch of Scotland – the rightful king Sean Connery. With the English fled or dismembered and Sean on the throne, we may set about building a strong, free, golf and tennis-based country."

Murray's victory was greeted with cries of 'Freedom!' from his legions of face-painted Scottish followers – mostly wild-haired men and women clutching emaciated babes drinking Irn Bru – thousands of whom had gathered outside the Arthur Ashe stadium but were refused admission on grounds of having lice.

Left: Andy Murray celebrates his historic US Open by leading rampaging hordes in skirts over the border to sack York.

Andy Murray is a direct descendant of the outlaw tennis player William Murray, who in 1291 offered to beat any English man in straight sets. But although unassailable on the court, William Murray perished when troops set fire to his bothy.

A spokesman for Buckingham Palace said: "This is a great day for British sport. However treason cannot be tolerated, and will be repaid with death.

"Murray can pledge loyalty to the Queen and live out his days as a wealthy Lord with rich lands and many sons, or we'll have his head on a stick."
