MAYOR ANNOUNCES IMPROVEMENTS FOR HUA HIN AS ANNUAL TOURISTS HIT 2.5 MILLION

HUA HIN, THAILAND

In the last two issues of AWOL, and in many previous front pages, we have highlighted the need for the city's infrastructure to be brought into line with the rapid expansion that is being experienced here.

This expansion is visible to the naked eye, but it is also being confirmed in hard numbers, and a report by Roongroj Seeluangsawat, the chairman of the Hua Hin-Cha am Tourism Association, said the number of tourists visiting Hua Hin annually has reached 2.5 million, of whom 40 per cent are foreign tourists. He also forecast that there would be a 20-per cent increase of room availability in the town to cope with the swelling tourist numbers. There are currently some 13,000 hotel rooms available in the town.

The Mayor, Nopporn Wuttikul, has announced that the town plan will develop involving a move of the municipality office, public schools and provincial waterworks office to suburbs; this will allow the redevelopment of these central parts to become car parks and to improve the town's layout and traffic system. A budget of some 100 million baht is expected for these modifications.

There is also a plan to invest in water purification equipment with a budget of 30 million baht so that the demand for water can be met, while another 11 million baht will fund the connection of raw water pipelines from nearby Phetchaburi province for 24-hour water transport. Mayor Nopporn also said that closed-circuit television cameras are to be installed around the town to assure tourists and others that Hua Hin is a safe place.

While we will all wait to see if these improvements transpire, it is good to know that the authorities are aware of the problems the area faces; let's hope the money becomes available and is spent wisely.

UNDERCOVER THAILAND:
SEX, SIN AND SMILES

MEDIA SUFFOCATION?

By Roger Norwood

This week's newspapers in Thailand carry a lurid report on the death in Bangkok of a former NASA employee, who met his unfortunate demise apparently accidentally by his own hand in a kinky sex act gone wrong.

This has echoes of the equally unfortunate death of David Carradine, the actor who shot to fame in the Kung Fu television series, and the widely accepted cause of death was an autoerotic asphyxiation act that also went wrong.

What these two deaths have in common other than the location and likely cause is the extremely graphic reporting that seems to be the norm in Thailand; this week's incident carried details that would normally be omitted from the majority of Western media, and while some of these details substantiated the likely cause of death, many feel uncomfortable being presented with them because of the likelihood that family and friends of the deceased would see them, and the subsequent public tarnishing of their loved one's reputation.

Some argue that what one does in private should stay private as long as it does no harm to others, but it is clear that the Thai media don't share this view, at least when it comes to reporting on foreigners, and they also display gruesome photographs of accident scenes that would not get past an editor in the West. Bodies that have been torn apart are routinely shown, and there can be some justification in this if it helps to educate the readers or viewers of the dangers of reckless driving or inadequate protection such as seatbelts or helmets, but there is not much evidence that this is the case here, which is probably down to the fatalistic attitude most Thais seem to have.

I am not going to say that the way things are done here are wrong, but they are certainly a shock to most foreigners when they first encounter such graphic reporting. For some it can be morbidly fascinating to read and see such things, but for me I think it inures people to the dangers that have caused the incident, and contributes to more and not less reckless actions, and the possibility of 'copycat' behaviour.

William Sparrow is away but will return soon. Thank you to Roger for his submission.

A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... Tawdry

Showy, but of poor quality.

For the explanation of the word tawdry we have to go back to 7th century England and the story of Etheldrida, the daughter of the king of East Anglia, who was otherwise known as Saint Audrey. Audrey died in 679 AD of a tumour of the throat. It was recorded by the Venerable Bede in Ecclesiasticall History, 731 AD, that her fate was considered just retribution as she had "for vain show adorned her neck with manifold splendid necklaces".

In the 16th century Nicholas Harpsfield, the Archdeacon of Canterbury, published his own ecclesiastical history Historia Anglicana Ecclesiastica and commented that:

"Our women of England are wont to wear about the neck a certain necklace, formed of thin and fine silk."

These silks were known as Saint Audrey's laces.

As time went by, 'St. Audrey's lace' became shortened to 'taudrey lace'. That comes as little surprise to those of us who live in Yorkshire, where expressions like 'the other' and 'down the hole' have long been replaced by 't'other' and 'down t'ole'. In his 1579 poem The Shepheardes Calendar, Edmund Spenser referred to 'tawdrie lace', in a warning to shepherd's daughters:

See, that your rudenesse doe not you disgrace:
Binde your fillets faste,
And gird in your waste,
For more finesse with a tawdrie lace.

'Tawdry' hadn't by that date developed the 'showy/poor quality' meaning that we now use but had started on its route there. What began as a name for fine lace ribbon became a disparaging term for the poor quality lace bought by country wenches at rural fairs. When Shakespeare wanted to establish Mopsa, the country bumpkin girlfriend of the Clown in A Winter's Tale, as less than sophisticated, he portrayed her as interested in frivolous showy dress and gave her this line:

Come, you promised me a tawdry-lace and a pair of sweet gloves.

'Tawdry' has long departed from any association with saints or expensive necklaces and is now entirely a negative description. To all the Audrey's out there, sorry but, as they would say around here, you're just t'Audrey.

■ CALIFORNIA, USA Burger King thieves have getaway car stolen by employee who hides it during robbery

A pair of criminals were left without a getaway car after it was stolen by an employee of the fast food restaurant they were attempting to rob.

The armed men had just raided a branch of Burger King in Stockton, California, when they found themselves in a bit of a pickle.

They had fled the restaurant and were ready to make their getaway but couldn't locate their vehicle.

It turned out it had been taken by a quick-thinking employee who saw it unattended and decided to drive it away.

The worker had initially gone out back to alert authorities to the robbery and was shocked to find the criminals had been stupid enough to leave their car running.

He then proceeded to drive the vehicle around the corner, which obviously caused considerable confusion for the thieves once they had stepped out.

Jeremy Lovitt, 23, and Gabriel Gonzalez, 19 were arrested by police at the scene.

■ MOUNT EVEREST, NEPAL Busy Mount Everest 'needs a ladder' to cope with demand

Thousands of climbers have scaled Mount Everest since it was famously conquered by Sir Edmund Hillary and Sherpa Tenzing 60 years ago.

In fact it has got so busy that mountaineers are facing queues of up to four hours to reach the top or make their way down from the highest peak.

Which is why there are plans to install a ladder on the Hillary Step 12m (40ft) from the summit of the 8,848m (29,028ft) mountain to ease congestion.

The controversial proposal has been put forward by the Expedition Operators Association in Nepal.

'To make the climbing easier, that would be wrong. But this is a safety feature,' a spokesman for the EOA said.

Plans for more rigorous traffic controls on the fixed ropes, which run from base camp to the summit are also on the cards.

Another suggestion is for the authorities in Nepal to vet climbers to ensure they have a basic level of experience.

While plans for a ladder have been criticised by hardened mountaineers they have been welcomed by some sherpas who are regular casualties on the mountain.

Last month a brawl broke out at over 6,096m (20,000ft) when three climbers crossed paths with a group of about 100 sherpas laying ropes for wealthy clients.

So far this year more than 500 climbers have reached the summit of the world's highest mountain.

■ FOČA, BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA Shepherd 'kills brown bear with his bare hands after squeezing its throat'

A shepherd allegedly killed a brown bear with his bare hands when it charged him as he tended his flock.

Blazo Grkovic gave the beast a 'bear hug' and strangled it as it swiped him with its paws and tried to bite him.

'I grabbed it round the throat and squeezed and squeezed until it collapsed,' the Bosnian said.

The 48-year-old, from a mountain region near Foča, in Bosnia and Herzegovina, went on to describe how he fought close up with the animal.

He admitted it was a tough battle and he was lucky to get out alive.

'It bit me, and I hit it until it died. I have injuries everywhere, especially in my left arm where he bit me twice or three times,' Mr Grkovic said from his hospital bed.

After dispatching the bear, the shepherd managed to call his brother, who turned up with an ambulance.

The brave farmer was treated in hospital for cuts.

■ BEDROOM GAMES

After 20 years of marriage, it's still an exciting race to the bedroom for me and the wife.
First one there locks the other one out.

■ MARRIED LIFE

Me and the wife went to see a marriage councilor yesterday.
We were shown in and told to make ourselves at home.
So I grabbed £20 out of the wife's purse and went off down the pub.

■ BEER AND RELIGION

10 reasons why beer is better than religion...
1. You can prove you have a beer
2. There are laws saying beer labels can't lie to you
3. You don't have to wait 2000+ years for another beer
4. Nobody's ever been burned, hanged or tortured over his brand of beer
5. When you have a beer, you don't knock on people's doors trying to give it away
6. They don't force beer on minors, who can't think for themselves
7. No beer has ever caused a major war
8. Beer doesn't tell you how to have sex
9. No one will kill you for not drinking beer
10. If you've devoted your life to beer, there are groups to help you stop

■ SHOT IN THE DARK

I was walking along the street and saw the board "Shoot the Kids and Frame the Mother in Law"
Imagine my disappointment when I saw it was a photo studio.

■ QUICKIES

After my last experience, I've now got my latest girlfriend eating out the palm of my hand.
My previous girlfriend took all my crockery.

I'm in a band called "Cyan Sapphire Navy."
We're a blues band.

I was looking at my phone's gps when my girlfriend split up with me.
At least I know where I stand now.

10 years ago today my best mate ran off to become a mime artist.
I never heard from him again.

I went to an AA meeting last night.
It was full of women with no tits.

The other day somebody told me that I can't deal with pain.
That really hurt.

I said to my mate, "If you keep smoking like that you'll be dead soon".
He said, "Smoking like what?"
I said, "The way you're holding it: you look like a queer. This is a rough area."

ONLY CHA AM

Some of our readers may not be aware but there is a website dedicated to all things Cha Am.
OnlyChaAm.com is a useful and informative site covering all the essentials and more for anyone living in or visiting the town,
AWOL has agreed to collaborate with them in a variety of ways and we hope our readers will enjoy the fruits of this combination, as well as participate in some of our planned ventures.
One of these which will be launched soon, is a feature that will appear in both the newspaper and the website, where a variety of people will be asked to tell us a bit more about themselves, their views on the area and their experiences. Participants will be drawn from all walks of life, be they local officials, tourists, expats, Thai or foreign and we hope that this will be both an interesting and enlightening feature that will help all of us understand the view from another angle.
Watch this space for news on when this will be starting, and please contact us if you are interested in taking part, or have a suggestion on either participants or questions.

AWOL ANNOUNCEMENT

Each year AWOL reviews it's advertising prices, and this year these changes will come into effect from 1st October.
In 2012 there was no change, in 2011 we reduced prices but for 2013 prices will increase due to rising costs, and details will be available in September. Existing advertisers who have had at least 13 consecutive issues of advertising by 1st October can continue under their existing rate for unlimited continuous renewals after that.
New or returning advertisers can take advantage of this if they book and pay for a 13 issue run by 1st July (and renew where applicable) so they can enjoy the lower rates during high season and beyond.
Details of our prices can be found as a download from the AWOL website, or by emailing us on info@awolonline.net.

Don't delay - save money by advertising now!

MAGS MEANDERINGS: FROM SOM TAM TO MUSHY PEAS

ART FOR ART'S SAKE

The finishing touches are being made in Hull (of all places!) to a huge sculpture destined for Heathrow Airport's Terminal 2.

At over 80 feet long, the aluminium structure is designed to represent 'a frozen moment of movement'. Which basically means that it resembles a plane in flight but with more curvy bits.

When finally installed at Heathrow the sculpture will appear to be suspended from the ceiling - although the actual supporting columns look a bit more safe than that sounds.

Quite why we still work in feet here in the UK is a whole other subject. The interesting thing is that we do produce some quite spectacular pieces of modern art. It isn't all to everyones' taste, and neither is it meant to be, but there is such a diversity of subject matter and materials that almost everyone can find either something they love - or something they would love to see on a bonfire. From a huge bumble bee at the Eden Project in Cornwall, to the Angel of the North, there is something for everyone. Even Hull has its' arty moments. A permanent 'fish trail' around the old town consists of a series of sculptures of different fish set into pavements and walls, while the Larkin Toads were a huge success in 2010. The 40 huge toads, decorated by different artists and schools, were dotted around the town for a few weeks in the summer to commemorate Hull poet Philip Larkin. My favourite was 'Punkphibian' toad - who lost his punk hairdo after only two days on the street, and had to be hurriedly taken away to have a new hairpiece fitted. (You can view the full gallery of toads by googling 'Larkin toads'.)

Hua Hin has also developed as a popular base for artists in recent years, and it is refreshing to see their more modern approach in paintings of more traditional Thai subjects like elephants and Wats.

There will probably always be a market for those dayglo pictures of rice farmers on fake black velvet, just as there will always be unsuspecting tourists clamouring to buy those annoying wooden frogs we all love to hate, but people are beginning to look for something a little more original, up to date, affordable, and packable, and Hua Hins' artists are now beginning to cater to that need as far as paintings go. But try googling 'sculpture' in Hua Hin and a farang name comes up - that of Elizabeth Jorn, who produces some interesting pieces in wood and bronze which, although clearly inspired by Asia, have a very graceful modern look.

Thailand does of course have a long tradition of very skilled craftsmen, who still create the deeply carved scenes in teak for furniture and wall art. It can take one of them 6 months just to carve out a coffee table top. But even those beautifully executed pieces follow strictly traditional designs which never vary.

What the country seems to lack is the ability to encourage a less traditional approach to art on a bigger scale. Even in Bangkok, which should be the obvious place to showcase the work of Thai artists, especially sculptors, any spaces which are left between new buildings seem to house some (admittedly clever) fountains and little else, while what new topiary there is often still takes the form of elephants.

Maybe Thailand sees no reason to change a winning formula. Maybe it believes that visitors expect to see only centuries old culture in art, and certainly those traditional skills shouldn't be lost. But surely it is time for more modern concepts to be given a chance.

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

It'll be a nuisance wearing the Nielsen box on your head all week, but at least you'll find out that your viewership goes up when you're fighting or having sex.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

Your defense lawyer is one of the best, but he will have a hard time blaming those 11 murders on the bossa nova, the dance of love.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

It's all over but the shouting, but don't worry: It's going to be great shouting.

ARIES MAR 21 – APR 20

You will soon be forced to admit that your entire emotional range can be conveyed with a set of cleverly arranged punctuation marks.

TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

Usually, this stuff happens in cinemas, so you're pretty surprised when two hours of sexy, suspense-filled action come to a bakery near you.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

You haven't worn it since college, but don't be surprised when your old suit still fits. It is made of rubber, after all.

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22

Newton's laws say that for every action there is an equal and opposite reaction, proving he knew nothing about women.

LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

You don't want anything to come between you and your cats. Luckily, given your obesity and the tininess of your trailer, it's not physically possible.

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

The broken ribs, fractured skull, and dislocated shoulder won't hurt at all, mostly because you'll suffer them after being dropped by drunken pallbearers.

LIBRA SEP 23 – OCT 23

Americans from coast to coast will be transfixed by your new signature dance, the Oh My God, Get It Off Me, Sweet Jesus, It Burns.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

Every day, in every way, you're getting better and better. But at this rate, you won't be good enough for 64 more years.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

Your plan to strike from the shadows and slip away unseen will be seen as inappropriate by the other teachers.

BADGE BOTHERERS

EVERTON FANS IN TURMOIL OVER BADGE 'BETRAYAL'

■ LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

A FURIOUS protest over badges suggests Everton fans may not be normal.

The club has unveiled a new shirt badge which experts say is 6.4% different to the old badge.

But supporters insisted the new badge was 'odd', 'clownish' and a 'betrayal of the club's heritage' leading to suggestions that they may be the sort of people who receive daily instructions from their goldfish.

Julian Cook, a badge dispute analyst, said: "To describe the new badge as 'odd' seems… odd.

"There's also significant levels of fury at the absence of the club's Latin motto, which translates as 'nothing but the best is good enough'. Given Everton's recent history, this would seem to be both untrue and redundant.

Left: Blues fans are outraged at the new badge, and observers worry that street violence may follow when the new kit colour is announced

"Perhaps they could replace it with 'Bill Kenwriight - What Have You Done?'. In Latin."

Cook added: "Both badges feature the same ugly little tower, both feature the club's founding date and both are the same basic shape. But such is the level of anger that I sense this is not actually about the badge. I am wondering if this is all previously suppressed rage that their former manager was ginger?

"Gary Lineker needs to tell someone to have a word with them."
