AWOL

ABSENT WITHOUT LEAVE FOR THE EXPAT IN ALL OF US
What's happening, and might be happening, in and around Hua Hin

IT NEVER RAINS BUT IT POURS

EARLY RAINY SEASON ADDS TO LOW SEASON WOES

HUA HIN, THAILAND

As Hua Hin stands at the nadir of the annual low season, many expats have already headed back to their home countries or will do as the summer arrives in Europe and America. Of course the weather here will still be warmer than most other places, but as we have been seeing over recent weeks, accompanied by some tremendous thunderstorms and torrential rain.

This is always a double edged sword for the town, as while the water is desperately needed both to replenish the water supply and help retain the lush green tropical look, it also causes a reduction in what is already a low trading period, with people choosing to stay at home rather than face getting drenched.

This can be a vicious circle for businesses who need paying customers so they can pay their bills, and AWOL is no exception to this, and it is made particularly difficult when goods or services are provided but then bills are not paid.

We have already announced that we will be raising our advertising prices later this year, and a major reason for this is the non or short payment by a number of former or current advertisers. We will be contacting them once again, but we wanted our readers to know that this situation is threatening the continuing publication of AWOL. With immediate effect AWOL will be charging backdated extra fees to those who have been in arrears for longer than 90 days and we would encourage anyone in this position to contact us immediately to avoid further charges.

NEIGHBOURHOOD WATCH

By Roger Norwood

A spate of foreigners have been arrested in Hua Hin in recent weeks by Thai police in connection with crimes committed in their own countries as well as offences in the Kingdom.

Whether this is just a coincidence or indicates something else is hard to say, but the reports coming out regarding the most recent arrest of an American man, Paul Cardwell, seem to suggest that some locals tipped off the police "after they became suspicious about a wealthy foreigner living a life of luxury seemingly without working".

If this is true then although it is very comforting to know that such vigilant individuals live here and will help to combat crime, there must also be quite a number of retired foreigners here living a life of luxury who could be worried that a jealous neighbour might decide to report them to the police in the same manner.

I had always been given the impression by 'old hand' expats that wealthy people were admired and of high status in Thailand, so I suspect that there may be a little more to this incident than was reported; foreigners who fall foul of their Thai neighbours will more likely have made some cultural faux pas or have caused some loss of face, and if this is combined with an arrogance that it appears Mr Cardwell had then they are on a slippery slope - in Cardwell's case having reportedly entered the country on a fake passport then the last thing to do would be to annoy your neighbours.

Given the bad press the police get routinely in Thailand, they should be congratulated in this and other recent arrests for their good work. It must also be hoped that these cases will dissuade other criminals from descending on or remaining in the area, and avoiding what has happened in other popular tourist resorts both in Thailand and places like Spain in the 1980s for example (the 'Costa Del Crime' as it became widely known).

As Shaw Taylor memorably used to say on 'Police 5', a British real crime programme, "Keep 'em peeled!"

A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.
This week it is..... A feather in one's cap

A symbol of honour and achievement.

The placing of a feather in a hat has been a symbol of achievement that has arisen in several cultures, apparently independently. The English writer and traveller Richard Hansard recorded it in his Description of Hungary, 1599:

"It hath been an antient custom among them [Hungarians] that none should wear a fether but he who had killed a Turk, to whom onlie yt was lawful to shew the number of his slaine enemys by the number of fethers in his cappe."

The Native American tradition of adding a feather to the head-dress of any warrior who performed a brave act is well known.

The figurative use of the phrase 'a feather in his hat' was in use in the UK by the 18th century; for example, in a letter from the Duchess of Portland to a Miss Collingwood, in 1734:

"My Lord ... esteems it a feather in his hat, that ..."

The children's rhyme Yankee Doodle is the best known use of the phrase.

Yankee Doodle went to town,
Riding on a pony;
He stuck a feather in his cap,
And called it macaroni.

There are many version of the lyric. It has been suggested that this version originated with the British forces in the American War of Independence, in an attempt to mock the revolutionary militia. 'Doodle' was 18th century British slang for simpleton (a.k.a. noodle) and 'macaroni' was slang for a dandy or fop. The latter originated with the Macaroni Club, a group of London aesthetes who were anxious to establish their sophistication by demonstrating a preference for foreign cuisine. The thinking behind the theory is that the Yankees were so stupid as to believe that putting a feather in one's cap would make them appear fashionable.

■ UK Do you have the recipe for the ultimate cheese on toast?

A search has been launched to find the perfect formula for the ultimate cheese on toast. The British Cheese Board (BCB) has created the competition to celebrate one of Britain's best-loved dishes.

Encouraging cheese toastie fans to send in their personal favourite recipes, the BCB hopes to end the debate on the best method and ingredients for cooking the delicious snack.

From what type of cheese to use to how long it should stay under the grill, there are a number of different approaches which can be taken in the kitchen.

'In celebrating this humble toasted snack, the BCB wants to remind people that cheese is a good value and easy way to feed a family,' said secretary Nigel White. 'We also hope to prompt people to think about the variety of British cheeses available, and show that our cheeses are among the best in the world.'

The Royal Society of Chemistry (RSC) will help with a series of scientific tests to determine the best formulas; with the eight most original recipes put to the test by an expert panel. Ruth Neale, executive at the Royal Society of Chemistry, said: 'We're delighted to be working alongside the British Cheese Board to put the public's recipes under the microscope. I'm looking forward to exploring the links between science and food and helping to identify the formula for the perfect way to make cheese on toast.'

Cheese fans should submit their recipes to enquiries@britishcheese.com.

■ USA Domino's trials new drone delivery system for pizzas

Pizza delivery boys on mopeds could soon be a thing of the past after Domino's revealed a new method of delivering their food – a drone helicopter.

The DomiCopter is set to revolutionise the takeaway industry if it proves to be anything more than just a public relations stunt.

A video released by the company showed a drone, which is usually used in war-like situations, taking a pizza to a customer. The powerful aircraft utilised several propellers to lift it into the air and was controlled by a user on the ground.

'At Dominos we're always looking to innovate and find new ways to deliver our pizza and a DomiCopter could fit the bill perfectly,' said Simon Wallis from Domino's.

'What better way to totally avoid the traffic than to fly – if anything this will now make us even quicker! We think it's a great way to reinforce that Domino's go to more lengths than anyone to deliver great pizza.'

■ NEBRASKA, USA Lizard King: Extinct reptile named after The Doors' Jim Morrison

A giant lizard that roamed Earth 40million years ago has been named after The Doors' iconic lead singer Jim Morrison. The 1.8m (6ft) long fossil, found in Burma in the 1970s, had lain unstudied in a US university until a few years ago.

Now palaeontologist Dr Jason Head has named the reptile 'Barbaturex morrisoni', or the 'bearded king', after the rock legend, who was known as The Lizard King.

Researchers believe the reptile was able to grow to such an enormous size due to the extremely warm weather where it roamed in the forests of Southeast Asia. A lack of predators also helped its development and allowed it to compete for food as one of the largest lizards ever to have lived on Earth.

'I listened to The Doors a lot during my research,' said Dr Head, whose research was published in Proceedings of the Royal Society B. 'Some of their musical imagery includes reptiles and ancient places – and Jim Morrison was of course The Lizard King – so it all kind of came together.'

■ SECRETARY

A man comes home with his little daughter, whom he has just taken to work. The little girl asks, "I saw you in your office with your secretary. Why do you call her a doll?"

Feeling his wife's gaze upon him, the man explains, "Well, honey, my secretary is a very hard-working girl. She types like you wouldn't believe, she knows the computer system and is very efficient."

"Oh," says the little girl, "I thought it was because she closed her eyes when you lay her down on the couch."

■ FORGOT MY GLASSES ...

Yesterday, my daughter again asked me why I didn't do something useful with my time. Talking about my "doing something useful" seems to be her favorite topic of conversation. She said that she was "only thinking about me", and suggested that I go down to the senior center, and hang out with the other old guys. I did this. When I got home last night, I decided to teach her a lesson about staying out of my business. I told her that I had joined a parachute club.

She said, "Are you nuts ,You're 80 years old, and you're going to start jumping out of airplanes?"

I proudly showed her that I even had a membership card. She looked at it and said, "Good grief Dad, where are your glasses! This is a membership to a Prostitute Club, not a Parachute Club."

I told her, "Then I'm in real trouble because I've signed up for five jumps a week.".

She fainted.

Life as a senior is not getting any easier, but sometimes it can really be fun!

■ INJURY CLAIM

The following is a courtroom exchange between a defense attorney and a farmer with a bodily injury claim. It came from a Houston, Texas insurance agent.

Attorney: "At the scene of the accident, did you tell the constable you had never felt better in your life?"

Farmer: "That's right."

Attorney: "Well, then, how is it that you are now claiming you were seriously injured when my client's auto hit your wagon?"

Farmer: "When the constable arrived, he went over to my horse, who had a broken leg, and shot him. Then he went over to Rover, my dog, who was all banged up, and shot him. When he asked me how I felt, I just thought under the circumstances, it was a wise choice of words to say I've never felt better in my life.

■ IN THE CLOSET

A woman has a problem with her closet door - it was opening every time a bus passed by. So she called a repairman. The repairman comes and sees that indeed, the door falls open every time a bus passes by.

"OK, I am going see what is going on, just close the door behind me" and he steps into the closet. At that time the husband comes home from work, opens the closet and finds the repairman.

Husband: "What the hell are you doing here?"

Repairman:"Well, you are not going to believe it, but I'm waiting for a bus!"

MAGS MEANDERINGS: FROM SOM TAM TO MUSHY PEAS

■ BAR HOPPING

This week we take another trip into the past, with some of the trials and tribulations - and lighter moments - of running a bar in Hua HIn.

After almost a year at the old Hare and Hounds on Soi Kanjanomai it became clear that the owner of the property had grand plans for the site. Much more grand than those of its' unsuspecting tenants. But the place had served us well, both as a home and a business, but more importantly as an introduction to Hua Hin and it's many characters.

It was time to look for somewhere new.

When word spread down the Soi it wasn't too difficult to distribute useful items which would be surplus to requirements, and the owners of a nearby restaurant soon claimed the heavy stone tables and benches for their own new outdoor area. Other 'useful' items probably found new homes too, but everyone knew that the Hare and Hounds' three Thai style wooden houses were soon to be demolished, and the priority was to find another bar.

In 2000 Thanon Poolsuk - or Poolsuk Road - was just beginning to develop. Between the City Beach Hotel and Soi Bintabaht it was pretty much the same as it is today, with the exception of the row of new units which have since replaced the open air eateries alongside the temple wall. Even beyond Bintabaht there were a few bars, and many expats will remember the original Lucky Lukes', and the frequent 'domestics' at Flamingo Bar between Fred and his fiery wife Fon, (although looking back now perhaps it would be fair to say that both were quite fiery characters!)

But by the time Poolsuk reached Soi Selakem the bars had petered out, with only NikNak bar on the corner of the two sois.

It was the house opposite NikNak bar which Billy and I chose as our next venture. Another original Thai house which until then had been used by a family who ran a business from home, as many still did in the centre of town.

A price was duly agreed, together with the date of the contract and all the usual terms. But the best laid plans tend to often need a little patience and a lot of caution, especially in Thailand, and especially when the man of the house had done the deal, but his family didn't seem quite so keen to move.

On the day the contract was due to be signed the occupiers of what was to become The Ship still hadn't shown any signs of moving. A 'stand off' ensued, with Billy keeping watch on the property, and I in the lawyers' office refusing to sign the contract until we were certain that the family had all moved out.

Needless to say they did, and the real work began.

Above: Poolsuk Road as it was in 2000; The Ship (now Diamond Bar) is just in shot on the right, and to the left of that is where P & P Bar and O'Neils now stand - at that time the building was still the home of the family of Pone Kingpetch, the boxer who has a statue in the park named after him opposite the TOT offices

MOURINHO PRESS CONFERENCE LEAVES A DISGUSTING STICKY MESS

■ LONDON, ENGLAND

Chelsea cleaning staff are still hosing down their press room after Jose Mourinho met reporters yesterday.

Workers in hazmat suits with bags of wadded up tissue worked through the night, mopping at the journalist joy fluids that were in places ankle-deep.

Building manager Roy Hobbs said: "It looks like a Stone Roses album cover in there.

"This is the biggest clean-up operation we've had to do since Avram Grant left and the whole place had to be fumigated to remove the smell of hooker."

England's football press had been maintaining a lazy half-lob since the first hints Mourinho might return to Chelsea, keeping themselves on a slow spin cycle by attending Paolo di Canio team talks.

When the Chelsea manager coined his new catchphrase, dubbing himself 'The Saucy One', the build up of Fleet Street reproductive juices was at such dangerous levels that several reporters had to file their copy from the toilets.

The perspex 'sneeze guard' borrowed from the Chelsea canteen salad bar to protect the incoming manager was so heavily soiled that it was several minutes before many realised he had left the room.

Journalist Wayne Hayes said: "I'm exhausted and I badly need some Vitamin E pills. I haven't felt like this since I was a teenager."

Left: Sticky fingers? Mourinho feels the full load of media expectations at the press conference
