BOOTY CALL!

FIRST EVER CAR BOOT SALE IN HUA HIN

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

Our non-UK readers may be a little puzzled by this week's story, but car boot sales are enormously popular events in the UK, and the arrival of them in Hua Hin is a welcome addition. They are similar to what Americans refer to as 'flea markets' but are more geared towards individuals selling unwanted household and other items, and the concept is that people will load up their vehicle with items in the hope that they can sell them at a regular designated meeting place with plenty of parking space. The largest events in the UK attract thousands of people - a small charge is paid by sellers for their parking space, while buyers enter free.

The first such event in Hua Hin has been organised for Sunday 6th October, at the Zab Wer restaurant on Soi 112. The organisers plan to hold future events on the first Sunday of every month from then on, and they hope that the local Thais and expats will attend in sufficient numbers for this to be the case. Advance booking is available now at the discounted price of 300 baht per space, although people can pay 500 baht on the day if there is remaining space available. Booking, payment, details and rules of the event can be found at huahincarbootsale.info, or you can also call 089 128 9556, or visit the Lucky Real Estate office at the Makro by Soi 4. Traders are welcome but no food or drink can be sold at the event, and non-Thais are advised that while they can attend they must not handle the actual sale of goods themselves due to Thai labour laws. Buyers are not affected by this of course. So load up your unwanted 'booty' and go along! (see ad p 11)

FORWARD PLANNING

By Roger Norwood

One of the most common frustrations expats endure in Thailand has to be the 'last minute' mentality that seems to run throughout Thai society. I have lost count of the number of times that I have learned of either an organised event, a special promotion or a (Thai) family visit or outing at the last possible moment, causing other arrangements to be hastily cancelled or supplies to be purchased in double quick time.

Forward planning seems to be a rare event here, whether it is in a commercial, official or domestic situation. A classic example of this was and is the annual Hua Hin Jazz Festival; every year whoever organises it (and there have been several different people responsible in it's eleven years of existence) announces the dates and lineups less than a month before the event, and there have been several occasions when it has been moved at very short notice. While it can be argued that they still attract a lot of people to the event, I believe that it could be many more, bringing a lot more money to the town.

The recent Food Festival is another example where promotional posters only appeared around the town in the week leading up to the event, and also highlighted another issue that is particular to an international tourist destination - most promotional material for events is only in Thai, with only some organisers recognising the need to tell foreign tourists about their event.

Officialdom also follows this pattern, and examples are when the local police go around the bars telling them they must close immediately, or roads are suddenly closed and dug up either without any notification to residents, or very little notice so they are unable to make provision for the disruption.

I am not suggesting that Thailand should change its ways for the benefit of foreigners, but for the benefit of Thailand, as better and more advanced planning would result in better attended and more profitable events, with the side benefit of more impressed tourists and less hassled expats!

■ TEXAS, USA Texas restaurant closing down sign insults entire city – owner claims it's fake

A Texas restaurant owner has come under fire for apparently insulting a whole city with an offensive sign after going out of business.

Instead of calling Gordon Ramsey to deal with his kitchen nightmares, the owner seemingly decided to shut up shop and leave a note telling his customers exactly what he thinks of them. The letter, posted on the front of the Sava! Italiano restaurant in Amarillo, Texas, read: 'You sorry aed, rednecked sacks of goat sperm had no idea what you had here! Good luck with your pre-packaged frozen sh food in this town. We are off to make money in a town whose average IQ is above room temperature.'

A picture of the letter was posted on Reddit where it has been viewed thousands of times, but it has since been taken down from the closed shop front. The owners, who plan to open up new restaurants in Lubbock and Austin, have denied putting up the sign. 'Don't believe all you hear and see folks!' said a post on its Facebook page. However many Facebook users appears unconvinced by the denial.

'Isn't it obvious? Someone broke into the restaurant, printed a sign on company paper, and taped it to the inside of the restaurant window,' wrote Paige Jackson. 'Then they left and locked the restaurant back up. Yep, that must be what happened.'

■ COVENTRY, UK Man with world's longest tongue retains record after it keeps growing

A man with the world's longest tongue 3.8 inches long (9.8cm) long is set to retain his record after it kept growing. Stephen Taylor's tongue has grown 0.2 inches (0.5cm) since it last made it into the record books in 2009 and is expected to carry on growing.

Stephen's extra-long tongue has brought him worldwide fame and he once shared a 10-second kiss with actress Brigitte Nielsen in front of a live TV audience in Italy.

The teaching graduate, from Coventry got to meet Gene Simmons from Kiss, who was left speechless by the size of Stephen's tongue.

Guinness adjudicators take their measurement from the middle of the top lip to the tip of the tongue. The average length of a tongue measured from lips is 0.78 inches (2cm) and Stephen's extra long one gives him a lisp.

■ A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... The quick and the dead

All souls - alive or dead.

This rather archaic phrase has been used as the title of various films and plays in recent years, notably the 1995 film, starring Sharon Stone. This had a 'gunslinger hits town' plot line and the film's tagline was 'The Quick and the dead - in this town, you're either one or the other'. That clearly uses the popular meaning of 'quick', that is, 'fast' - in this case on the draw. The earliest meaning of 'quick' had nothing to do with speed, it meant 'endowed with life', or more simply, 'alive', as opposed to the current 'lively' meaning. To 'quicken' was to receive life and the first movement of a baby in the mother's womb was called the quickening. This use of 'quick' is extremely old and is recorded, as 'cwice', in an Old English translation of the Orosius Histories, dating from around the 4th century. The word has largely died out now, although we still retain the meaning in words like 'quicksand', that is, sand that moves and has 'life', or the bubbling and gurgling 'quicklime'.

The quick and the dead are referred to several times in the Bible. These texts relate to judgment, with the admonition that only the divine may judge the quick and the dead. The first English citation of the phrase is consequently from the 1385 Wycliffe Bible:

And thei schulen yyue resoun to hym, that is redi to deme the quyke and the deed.

The more easily deciphered King James' Version renders this as:

Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead.

Related to this phrase, but only by a common misconception is our 'bonus' phrase this week.

Saved by the bell

Saved by a last minute intervention.

This is boxing slang that came into being in the latter half of the 19th century. A boxer who is in danger of losing a bout can be 'saved' from defeat by the bell that marks the end of a round. The earliest reference to this that can be found is in the Massachusetts newspaper The Fitchburg Daily Sentinel, February 1893:

"Martin Flaherty defeated Bobby Burns in 32 rounds by a complete knockout. Half a dozen times Flaherty was saved by the bell in the earlier rounds."

There is a widespread notion that the phrase is from the 17th century and that it describes people being saved from being buried alive by using a coffin with a bell attached. The idea being that, if they were buried but later revived, they could ring the bell and be saved from an unpleasant death. The idea is certainly plausible as the fear of burial alive was and is real. Several prominent people expressed this fear when close to death themselves:

"All I desire for my own burial is not to be buried alive." - Lord Chesterfield, 1769.

"Have me decently buried, but do not let my body be put into a vault in less than two days after I am dead." - deathbed request of George Washington.

"Swear to make them cut me open, so that I won't be buried alive."- Frederic Chopin's last words.

Just as real were the devices themselves, several of which were patented in England and the USA. These were known as 'safety coffins' and designs were registered in the 19th century and up to as late as 1955.

There's no evidence to show that these coffins were ever put to use though and there's a similar lack of evidence of the phrase ever being used in that sense prior to it having been used in boxing circles.

Is there an English phrase or saying that you would like to know more about?

BUM DEAL

I find it increasingly difficult to keep track of the UKs' financial status. We seem to go from triple dip recessions to signs of recovery almost overnight.

One thing though is for sure - Harold Wilsons' old 'pound in your pocket' certainly doesn't go as far as it did in his day.

By comparison Thailands' economy remains remarkably stable. Any signs that it suffered a huge financial crisis 16 years ago are long gone, and while other countries hit by inflation tend to gradually withdraw their smallest units of currency, Thailand still has it's satang.

The satang has been in circulation since decimalisation was introduced to the country in 1897, and has a value of 100th of one baht. Although no satang coins have been minted since 2008, it continues to be legal tender.

Not surprisingly most shops no longer entertain the coins, and they are rarely seen in circulation, but the 25 and 50 satang coins can still sometimes be found in your change.

To get an idea of just how tiny a unit of currency it is, one dollar US would buy about 3,200 satang, while one Euro is worth around 4,220 satang at the current rates of exchange.

You can be thankful not to be burdened with such huge amounts of coins, but many Thai people still rely on the satang as a measure of their income, particularly when dealing in very low value items such as the sale of recycled newspapers.

With a history already spanning 116 years, the satang could still have quite a few years to go as legal tender. Even when it is eventually withdrawn it is easy to imagine people still referring to things as 'one satangs' worth'. But as long as it remains that little coin serves as a reminder of the huge divides between the countrys' richest and poorest classes.

A large collection of old currency can be found on display in glass topped tables in Chumpons Railway Station

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

Advances in science will soon allow man to travel to the most distant corners of the universe. Still no word, however, on it being able to get you off that couch.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

If someone had told you 30 years ago that you'd end up an insurance salesman, you probably would have laughed. Then again, you would've been 6-months-old at the time.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

Romance is in the air for Pisces this week, as well as on the bed-sheets, the nearby curtains, and in a growing puddle on the floor.

ARIES MAR 21 – APR 20

You will give birth to a beautiful, bouncing baby girl this week, moments after going into labour inside that giant inflatable castle.

TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

Fear and Jealousy will soon tear you apart, which is rather unfortunate, as Fear and Jealousy are the two pitbulls that live next door.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

Use the watering-can of good intentions to nurture the fig tree of expectations. There, enjoy figuring that one out, you jerks.

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22

Your life will soon be divided into Pre-Angering-Of-The-Ants and Post-Angering-Of-The-Ants eras.

LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

Don't let anybody tell you what you can or cannot do. That's for you, three to five of your ribs, and most of the hearing in your left ear, to decide.

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

The stars indicate that you've been looking really great lately. Also, the stars indicate that they could really use your help moving next weekend.

LIBRA SEP 23 – OCT 23

You claim that nobody understand you, but then, the strange white men in lab coats are doing the best they can.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

It's never really been about race, or religion, or even politics for you, which is great, since "it," in this case, refers to eating a meatball sub.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

You can try dancing around the issue all you want, but in the end, you still don't know what to do with your arms while on the dance floor.

'CONCUSSION NOT GOOD FOR YOU' DISCOVERY SHOCKS SCIENTISTS

■ USA

The National Football League (NFL) has made a discovery that has sent the medical world into confusion. Since 1920, thousands of American footballers haven taken part in an elaborate experiment to repeatedly 'ram their heads together' in the hope of generating an alternative source of energy. Much to everyone's surprise the study has concluded that there was not enough kinetic force to 'boil an egg' but enough traumatic brain injury 'to elect George W Bush again'.

The initial data on cognitive impairment was inconclusive, as the tactics of the average NFL match already resembled the actions of a befuddled egg-plant. One doctor acknowledged: 'Our suspicions were first aroused when we noticed that in no other sport do the participants dress like a marshmallows'.

Despite suffering no such head trauma themselves, fans regularly display the concentration of a goldfish. So mind numbing is the NFL, that interest is only maintained through constant squad rotation between downs, intravenous infusions of deep fried fat and scantily clad women waving brightly coloured balls of string.

Left: We were going to illustrate this story with a bone crunching image of two NFL stars bashing their helmets together, but as this is a family publication, here is a gratuitous cheerleader cleavage shot instead

The medicinal properties of other sports have been long established, with both tennis and F1 being a reliable cure for insomnia, ice hockey alleviating pacifism and cricket taming hyperactivity (and 'the will to live'). However doubts are emerging that boxing may not be an effective cosmetic 'cure for acne'. While rugby can treat abstinence it can also lead to what doctors call a 'picasso-ing' of the face. In turn, golf can help rid you of excessive wealth but it guarantees an existence dressed as a circa 1970's pimp. Association Football or 'soccer' has now been officially declassified as a sport, and reclassified as a 'too big to fail' industry in the banking sector.

'Obviously the easiest solution was for one of us to look up 'concussion' in the dictionary,' admitted an NFL spokesman. 'But you'll be pleased to hear that much of the $675m of injury compensation will go to providing therapeutic activities for those in recovery; these include kickboxing, base jumping and Ferret Legging.'
