THIRD MAN FINALLY ARRESTED FOR MURDER OF BRITON

HUA HIN, THAILAND

Over three years have passed since we reported on the brutal murder in Hua Hin of Raymond John Hind (in Issue 92 on 30th July 2010), and we further reported in February last year when court dates were set for two of the alleged culprits, Hind's wife and her lover, who had eventually confessed to the crime.

On 9th October 2013 Tourist Police announced the arrest in Songkhla of 30-year-old Khomkrit Imnoey for his alleged role in the murder of English businessman Hind, 68.

Khomkrit allegedly conspired with his older sister Bunnak Hind and her lover Thanakorn Budsaba to murder the Briton on July 26, 2010, disguising the crime as a robbery and break-in. Bunnak and Thanakorn were arrested shortly after the murder, but Khomkrit had been on the run until his arrest in Songkhla's Chana district.

Khomkrit maintained his innocence in the murder, claiming he was delivering milk on the day and only went to the scene after his sister called him about what had happened. After learning that the court had issued an arrest warrant for him, he said he decided to flee because he was already wanted for the rape of minor, under a warrant issued on February 20, 2006. He was arrested by police forces at his workplace, at an electricity power plant.

Mr Hind had a daughter and granddaughter in the UK, and we hope that they, along with his friends both in the UK and Thailand, will now finally see his alleged murderers punished appropriately. As far as Khomkrit goes, we must also hope that his alleged previous rape victim and relatives will also see justice served after a nearly eight year wait.

SILENCE IS GOLDEN

By Roger Norwood

My apologies for this week once again returning to the issue of 'face' in Thailand, but it is to many expats a complete mystery, and for still more visiting foreigners something they are not even really aware of.

I would compare 'face' to an omnipresent force that controls almost everything Thais do or say, but almost without anyone realising it. Only on the odd occasion do Thais have to consciously think about it, as it is so ingrained into the way they do and see things. It is hard to find a decent comparison in Western countries to help explain it, but I am going to try!

The best I have been able to come up with is the British concept of 'fairness'; given any situation that involves a dispute between two or more parties, most British people of a certain age (I can't speak for the youth!) will be able to determine almost instantly the rights and wrongs of what is fair or not. It is a very important part of British life - if someone pushes in to a queue, for example, this is the epitome of being 'not fair', and they might as well have raped and murdered someone in front of you!

Thais will instinctively act in a way so as to both not lose face nor cause anyone else to, although I am still to work out what they would do if it is a one or the other type choice, but I suspect this depends on who the other party is - an older relative will likely have their face saved at the expense of the person having to choose for example.

Foreigners will often react in a way to cause a Thai to lose face without realising it, and once they do realise, saying sorry does not help and can actually make things worse sometimes. This is equally hard for foreigners to understand, as we are used to being able to apologise and make good for our mistakes, but in Thailand, to use an old English saying, they see you as trying to close the stable door after the horse has bolted. And in these situations, staying silent and letting time pass is often the best policy, which has undertones of another saying - "Better to remain silent and be thought a fool than to speak and to remove all doubt."

■ LOUGHBOROUGH, UK New underwear filters out smell of flatulence

If you're the type of person who would kick someone out of bed for breaking wind, then this range of underwear could be for you.

The Shreddies pants contain Zorflex, used in chemical warfare suits, and its Loughborough-based makers claim they can filter odours 200 times stronger than the average 'emission'.

The carbon material is apparently reactivated every time the pants are washed.

A spokesperson at Shreddies is quoted by NY Daily News as saying: 'Although Shreddies has got cheeky with the new campaign, to many people they still remain very much a healthcare product and have helped so many cope with conditions such as IBS, Crohn's and food intolerances. But the bottom line is that Shreddies are for everyone, after all, it's something we all do.

'Flatulence seriously affects millions of people every day and since 2008 Shreddies has been helping those affected increase their quality of life.

'We have found the answer to help alleviate the most obvious symptom of flatulence… the odours.'

■ CONNECTICUT, USA Shirtless man throws parrot at police officer to avoid capture

Criminals have tried a lot of different things in order to avoid being caught but an incident in which an alleged crook threw a parrot at an officer to prevent himself being captured could be a first.

Luis Santana, from Connecticut, USA, was so eager to escape the authorities he reportedly decided to use the squawking bird as a distraction when they were about to detain him.

When officers arrived on the scene after reports of an altercation, instead of surrendering, a shirtless Mr Santana apparently threw a stolen white parrot at an attending officer.

If that wasn't enough, the bird was then said to have bit the policeman on the finger.

Justice was served in the end though after the shirtless parrot thrower was located at a house nearby.

He was duly arrested and has since been charged with several offences, including cruelty to animals and assaulting a police officer.

The parrot has reportedly been returned to its rightful owner.

A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated. This week it is.....Monkey On Their Back

An unpleasant psychological burden; also used to indicate drug addiction

The earliest references to piggybacking monkeys involve the backs of other animals. Of these, the earliest found are references to the cruel and ancient history of dancing bears, accounts of monkeys on baited ponies, and on show camels. In 1807, sportswriter Pierce Egan wrote of a monkey riding a horse. These seem relevant because of their proximity in time to the phrase first being used figuratively and because, in most of these anecdotes, the monkey is either frightening the animal or symbolizing its subjugation.

In 1822, Thomas Gillett published a collection of stories as The Midland Minstrel that included a humorous tale called "The Devil and the Doctor" about some students who teach their overzealous instructor a lesson by dropping a monkey on his back while he's riding his horse home one night. He's convinced the monkey is the devil and, after a mad dash through town, sees the error of his ways. This attribution of evil to the monkey is significant and evolves in later citations.

The earliest figurative use of the phrase found dates from an 1836 publication of The Parterre of Poetry and Historical Romance: Without question, the habit of precaution which prompted him to secure his buttons, alone prevented the abstraction of his pocket-book, and two five-pound Bank of England notes—an admirable piece of ingenuity, which has only been nullified by that purely legal process called docking an entail ! The abridged retires from society with a monkey on his back, and bequeathing a cordial benediction to the author of this diabolical 'Essay on Man.'

In the original the phrase is written in italics, probably indicating that it was not in common use at the time. Its meaning is not entirely clear from its context of a man avoiding a pickpocket scheme at a fair. We do see a continuation of the monkey-as-devil theme in the use of diabolical.

The earliest printed definition of the phrase comes from the Glossary of Northamptonshire Words and Phrases, 1854: MONKEY. 'I've put your monkey up,' is a phrase implying, I've roused your spirit, or offended you. 'I've put up your back,' is an equivalent, which see. A child is said to have the monkey on its back, when in ill humour, or out of temper.

And this from The Slang Dictionary, 1874: Monkey, spirit or ill temper; 'to get one's Monkey up,' to rouse his passion. A man is said to have his Monkey up or the Monkey on his back, when he is 'riled,' or out of temper; this is old, and was probably in allusion originally to the evil spirit which was supposed to lie always present with a man; also under similar circumstances a man is said to have his back or hump up.

Other literary references from the turn of the century reinforce this idea of the monkey as an evil spirit making someone do something they wouldn't otherwise, e.g, this from A Rational Marriage, 1899: Mealy, will you forgive me for that box on the ear ? It was a beastly thing of me to do ; but I felt a bit ' at bay,' my dear, which you must take on trust, because I can't explain it to you. I had the black monkey on my back ; but it's off again now, and I'm awfully sorry I avenged my own bad temper upon you.

and this from Beauty and Nick, 1914: 'Why did you break it?' asked Nick. 'Because I had a monkey on my back,' said Beauty. 'Such an evil little monkey.'

The earliest mention of drug use found is in a glossary from the 1938 Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology: Monkey, a habit, as in 'I have a monkey on my back.' Usually used when one is sick from lack of drugs.

This use for opiate addiction was likely a natural evolution from its history of referring to an evil and subjugating force acting on someone beyond their control.

■ THE BLONDE UNDERTAKER

A man who'd just died is delivered to a local undertakers wearing an expensive, expertly tailored black suit.

The female blonde undertaker asks the deceased's wife how she would like the body dressed. She points out that the man does look good in the black suit he is already wearing.

The widow, however, says that she always thought her husband looked his best in blue, and that she wants him in a blue suit. She gives the Blonde undertaker a blank cheque and says, 'I don't care what it costs, but please have my husband in a blue suit for the viewing.'

The woman returns the next day for the wake. To her delight, she finds her husband dressed in a gorgeous blue suit with a subtle chalk stripe; the suit fits him perfectly...

She says to the undertaker, 'Whatever this cost, I'm very satisfied.. You did an excellent job and I'm very grateful. How much did you spend....?' To her astonishment, the blonde mortician presents her with the blank cheque.

'There's no charge,' she says.

'No, really, I must compensate you for the cost of that exquisite blue suit....!' she says.

'Honestly, ma'am,' the blonde says, 'it cost nothing. You see, a deceased gentleman of about your husband's size was brought in shortly after you left yesterday, and he was wearing an attractive blue suit. I asked his wife if she minded him going to his grave wearing a black suit instead, and she said it made no difference as long as he looked nice.'

'So I just switched the heads.'

■ TELLING THE TRUTH

An attractive young woman on a flight from Ireland asked the Priest beside her, 'Father, may I ask a favour?' 'Of course child. What may I do for you?' 'Well, I bought my mother an expensive hair dryer for her birthday. It is unopened but well over the Customs limits and I'm afraid they'll confiscate it. Is there any way you could carry it through customs for me? Hide it under your robes perhaps?' 'I would love to help you, dear, but I must warn you, I will not lie.' 'With your honest face, Father, no one will question you.' When they got to Customs, she let the priest go first. The official asked, 'Father, do you have anything to declare?' 'From the top of my head down to my waist I have nothing to declare.' The official thought this answer strange, so asked, 'And what do you have to declare from your waist to the floor?' 'I have a marvellous instrument designed to be used on a woman, but which is, to date, unused.' Roaring with laughter, the official said, 'Go ahead, Father. Next please!'

■ FERGIE

Sir Alex Ferguson has had a street named after him
There is a penalty for parking on it though

■ NEW DRUG CRAZE

Police have just released details of a new drug craze that is being carried out in Yorkshire nightclubs.

Apparently, Yorkshire club-goers have started injecting Ecstasy just above their front teeth.

Police say the dangerous practice is called: "e by gum"

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

Fears of being exposed as a fraud will be realized this week when you're revealed to lack the fluid colour, strong lines, and playful style of Matisse's trademark works.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

A hand crank, two steel hooks attached at opposite ends of the oral cavity, and brute force will soon leave you with a giant smile on your face.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

When life gives you lemons, why not blame them on your troubled upbringing and consequent inability to show affection? It sure beats making lemonade.

ARIES MAR 21 – APR 20

They say there's nothing like the bond between a mother and her child, but then they have yet to see your experimental new adhesive compound.

TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

The stars, in their infinite wisdom, recommend that you check yourself this week, as not doing so might lead you to wreck yourself in the future.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

While it's been ages since you last cried about having no shoes, you'll still keep running into that creepy man without feet every other week.

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22

Forty thousand years after you were cryogenically frozen, scientists will at last bring you back to life when they discover a cure for goddamn stupidity.

LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

The stars were going to predict the beginning of a lifelong romance for you this week, but they couldn't get through it without bursting into laughter.

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

Most firearm accidents occur in the home. Avoid becoming a statistic by getting shot repeatedly at work.

LIBRA SEP 23 – OCT 23

Scientists around the world will come to praise you as a true trailblazer in the field of Incorrect Particle Physics.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

Wild peals of laughter will burst forth this week when you're unexpectedly struck in the nuts by cancer.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

Your imagination is the limit! Try visualizing what your future would look like as head garbageman!

MONKEY ON HIS BACK

ROY HODGSON TO USE WORLD CUP FRIENDLIES TO EXPERIMENT WITH IRISHMAN IN BAR JOKE

LONDON, ENGLAND

Following his successful use of the NASA monkey joke to motivate the England team to victory over Poland, England manager Roy Hodgson has confirmed he will use the friendly matches in the run up to the World Cup next summer to give chances to other fringe jokes in his repertoire.

With World Cup qualification now confirmed, Hodgson said it was now the time to give a chance to other jokes on the periphery of his routine, to see if they could be relied upon in the heat of Brazil.

He told reporters, "The jokes I've used in qualification have served me well, but there's little more I can learn about them."

"Now is the time to experiment and try some younger jokes and find out if their ready."

"I've got a great joke about a penis transplant using a baby elephant's trunk, and I'm excited to see what it can do."

Left: Hodgson had courted controversy by suggesting Andros Townsend should make better use of his banana shot, but has defused the situation with a string of quips about Brazilians

There has been clamour for Hodgson to call-up the new joke about Cadbury's oriental chocolate bar, and Hodgson insisted age was no barrier to a call up.

The England manager explained, "It's a new joke, for sure, but if it's good enough then it's old enough."

"But that works the other way too – I've got a great Jimmy Tarbuck joke from 1968 that I'm not afraid to use if the circumstances call for it."

"There are still a few positions to play for, and hopefully during the friendlies a few one-liners will step up and leave me with no choice but give them a place on the plane to Brazil."

"It's all to play for."
