EVERYONE'S A WINNER AT CHARITY GOLF DAY

HUA HIN, THAILAND

The charity golf day at the Banyan Golf Club for the Hutsadin Elephant Foundation took place a couple of weeks ago, and the organisers have now provided us with both pictures and details of the day.

The aim of the day was to raise much needed funds for the elephants of the Foundation. Kozy Haskey desrves much praise as the driving force behind the event, while thanks must go to the main sponsor, Mr Gary Bennett from BEKK Solutions, who provided all players with quality shirts. Tony Haskey provided all players with goodie bags of Hat, Towel, Balls and Tees.

The event took place on Friday 25th October and was attended by a total of 80 players with various handicaps. Thankfully the rain stayed away and play started at noon. Big thanks go to Kozy and Trevor, who ensured that the players received copious amounts of both water and beer!

As with all charity golf events, everyone is a winner but as with all competitions there has to be a winning team. Congratulations to Nick Page, Caroline Page, Phil Night and Gary who represented team Butterfly who won the Team event. The winner of nearest the Pin was Bob McHale from the Bridge Bar in Kao Takiab. All winners received Trophies for their efforts, and well done to all of them. The presentations were held at the restaurant, where there was a buffet, and also a small auction and raffle.

Kozy would like to say a big Thank you to all Players, helpers, and staff at the Banyan who made the day very special. Over 100,000 Baht was raised for the friends of the Hutsadin Elephant Foundation. Work is already

KEEP ON MOVING

By Roger Norwood

It is rare indeed nowadays to meet someone who does not possess some form of mobile communications device, be it phone, smartphone or tablet, and this has long been the case in Thailand, where they are both almost essential (due to the paucity of pay phones) and a vital fashion /status symbol.

Many people, and more often females, will have more than one mobile phone, and back in the noughties I frequently encountered a Thai (male) pool hustler who must have had about four or five phones attached to his belt like a modern day gunslinger! I once asked him why he had so many phones, and after furtively glancing around, he whispered 'Gambling'.

I never had a mobile phone until I came to Thailand; in the UK I had a landline and answerphone at home, and a landline at work. If I was neither at home nor at work then I was either travelling between them or someplace else where I felt I had no need of a phone. It is strange how I now feel almost naked if I don't have my phone with me, although I am sure if I went 'cold turkey' I could get back to how I used to be.

But I wonder how legions of younger people would cope without their devices? They become almost the centre of people's lives, particularly the more advanced models with greater storage - hours of music and video can be kept, emails accessed, free instant messaging and calls worldwide, thousands of games available and for business people documents can be stored, saved and edited, among a host of other things. If the infrastructure supporting them suddenly failed, or was switched off, what would happen? Would there be mass panic as people actually had to speak to each other? Would people remember how to write letters and would there be a postal service that could cope? Do they even still teach children how to write letters and address envelopes?

Don't get me wrong, I think the technologies available now are wonderful, but that is because I have something to compare them against - most teenagers now do not have that to fall back on.

A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.
This week it is..... Pulling one's leg

To deceive someone in a humorous or playful way.

'You're pulling my leg' was a common slang expressions in the 20th century, but is rather going out of use these days. To 'have your leg pulled' means to be misled or teased in a mild and benign way. It is natural, or at least seems to be natural, as almost everyone that claims to know the origin of the phrase does it, to locate its source in a situation where an actual leg is pulled. But, like those other 'leg' phrases 'an arm and a leg', 'shake a leg' and 'break a leg', there's no evidence to show that the limb in question when the phrase was coined was anything other than imaginary.

The two most commonly repeated of the literal 'leg pulling' theories are:

1. Thieves used to pull at people's legs to trip them and then use the quarry's disorientation as an opportunity to rob them. This was supposed to have taken place in 'Victorian London', 'medieval markets' or anywhere else that the storyteller chooses to site the story. The lack of consistency counts against this being correct - were it a genuine explanation there wouldn't be a need to vary the location in the retelling. Needless to say, as is always the case with this form of theory, the sort that the younger amongst us might describe as 'random', there's no evidence to support it.

2. Until 1783 Tyburn was the principal place of execution in England. Many notables were hanged there, including Oliver Cromwell, although he was blissfully unconcerned about it as he had spent the previous three years buried in Westminster Abbey and had to be exhumed in order to attend. The 'pulling my leg' theory is that people, the so called 'hangers on', were hired at Tyburn executions to hang onto the victim's legs in order to give them a quick end. The practice of 'hanging-on' might or might not have happened, but the idea that it is the source of 'pulling one's leg' is implausible and is generally discounted as folk-etymology. Firstly, it bears no relation to the expression's meaning. Secondly, as we shall see, the expression wasn't known during the centuries when public 'suspension' hangings (as compared to 'long drop' hangings, which wouldn't have required hangers-on) took place. It would seem odd for the phrase to have originated at hangings, many of which were of celebrities and reported in minute detail, but not to have been recorded in print at that time.

As to the actual origin of 'pulling my leg', it isn't really known, only an approximate date and location. Surprisingly to some, who might think it sounds British, the phrase is American. It was coined in the 19th century and the first time it is found in print is in The diary of James Gallatin, secretary to Albert Gallatin, a great peace maker, 1813-1827, recording an incident that was said to have taken place in 1821:

Mr. Adams is not a man of great force or intelligence, but his own opinion of himself is immense. I really think father, in a covert way, pulls his leg. I know he thinks little of his talents and less of his manners.

The diary was published in 1914 from notes Gallatin claimed to have been given to him by his grandfather. It is now generally accepted to be a fake and the contents invented by Gallatin. The use of the expression 'pulls his leg', which isn't found anywhere else in print for many years, hardly adds to the diary's claim of authenticity.

The real date of origin is more like 1880 and the earliest example found of it in print is from the Ohio newspaper The Newark Daily Advocate, February, 1883:

It is now the correct thing to say that a man who has been telling you preposterous lies has been "pulling your leg."

The fact that the phrase needed to be explained to the paper's readers is clear evidence that it was a neologism (as far as Newark, Ohio was concerned at least) in 1883, so if that example isn't the earliest use it must be close to it.

What is unequivocally British is the extended version 'pull the other one, it's got bells on'. That of course means 'don't try and fool me with that crazy story, I'm not that stupid'. It has been in use in Britain since at least the 1960s, which is when the first appearances in print are found. The 'bells' are probably a reference to a jester's costume.

Is there an English phrase or saying that you would like to know more about?

■ HOLIDAY TO THE COUNTRY

A rich city bloke thinks he won't go abroad this summer, he'll just go up to Yorkshire for a spot of shooting.

When he gets there, he unpacks his rifle and goes hunting for ducks. Seeing a flock of them flying past he aims and shoots one down, and sees it fall down into the next field. When he goes over to get it, he sees the farmer has picked it up and is walking off with it.

'What are you doing? Give me my duck back.' says the city man.

'If it lands in my field it means its my duck, so no', replies the farmer.

'There must be some kind of arrangement we can come to? We're both reasonable men, my old chum', says the city boy.

The farmer answers 'Well yes, actually, lets settle this the traditional country way. I get to hit you three times, then it's your turn, then mine again and so on until one of us surrenders. The winner get the duck. Interested?'

The city man agrees, so the farmer punches him in the stomach so hard he doubles over. Then he kicks him in the face, mushing up his nose, and the city boy falls to the ground in pain. Then the farmer stamps on his face.

'OK' says the rich city man, 'now its my turn.'

The farmer laughs and says 'No, its ok. You have the duck'

■ THE MEDICAL

During a lady's medical examination, the doctor says:- "Your heart, lungs, pulse and blood pressure are all fine. Now let me see the bit that gets you ladies into all kinds of trouble."

The lady starts taking off her underwear but is interrupted by the doctor.

"No! No! Don't remove your clothes... Just stick out your tongue!"

■ PRECIOUS

Two ladies happened to start up a conversation during an endless wait in the departure lounge of LA airport. The first lady was an arrogant Texas woman married to a wealthy man.

The second was a well-mannered elderly woman from the South. When the conversation centred on whether they had any children, the Texas woman started by saying, "When my first child was born, my husband built a beautiful mansion for me."

The woman from the South commented, "Well, isn't that precious?"

"When my second child was born, my husband bought me a beautiful Mercedes-Benz."

"Well, isn't that precious?"

"Then, when my third child was born, my husband bought me this exquisite diamond bracelet."

"Well, isn't that precious?"

"What did your husband buy for you when you had your first child?"

"My husband sent me to charm school," declared the Southern woman.

"Charm school?" the first woman cried, "Oh, my God! What on earth for?"

"Well for example, instead of saying, "Shut up you boring snob" I learned to say, "Well, isn't that precious ..."

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

You'll be torn a new asshole this week by some of the top reconstructive surgeons in the country.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

Long after your mind's shut down, your unconscious body will continue to have a great time on top of that trampoline.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

When times are tough and the world around you seems grim, don't be afraid to turn to religion for a good, hearty laugh.

ARIES MAR 21 – APR 20

It is said that the eyes are the windows to one's soul, which helps explain why so many damn birds keep flying into them.

TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

After years of disappointment, you'll suddenly realize this week that satisfying sex has always been within arm's reach.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

You will experience debilitating pain, unspeakable agony, and the loss of all of your hair when a voodoo doll bearing your likeness falls into the hands of a 5-year-old girl.

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22

So ashamed will you be about falling down the stairs that you'll lie to friends and family, telling them your husband beat you instead.

LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

You will be fired this week from your job at Staples just for taking home a bunch of office supplies.

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

Being a Durex quality-control tester might be the best job in the world, but you'll soon leave it all behind to spend more time with your 87 children.

Remember: You can only run away from your problems for so long before they catch up to you, tackle you, drag you into a nearby alley, and ultimately slit your throat.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

You'll be amazed this week by the lengths some people are prepared to go to just to escape from a burning textiles factory.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

Covered only partially in Vaseline and shrieking nearly coherent obscenities about the Jews, you'll be amazed by the amount of progress you've made in therapy.

FEATURED GAME

SUNDAY 10TH NOVEMBER 2013
PREMIER LEAGUE
Man Utd v Arsenal 23:10
Moyes men are eight points behind their visitors today, and while a loss in this game does not rule them out of the title race, it would be a significant blow. However good Arsenal are looking at the moment, they do tend to suffer against United, and they do have frailties at the back. We think this could be where the home team start to show a title contending performance with a surprisingly comfortable win.

HIGH SPEED REDS

MAN UTD FANS BACK HS2 RAIL SERVICE FROM LONDON PROPOSAL

LONDON, ENGLAND

Manchester United fans have backed the government's report on the benefits of HS2, admitting that the new high-speed link from London to Manchester will make match-days far more convenient.

It had been a bad week for the government's HS2 rail plans as MPs voted on funding, with revisions to the predicted benefits and pressure from opposition both inside and beyond Parliament. However, David Cameron has received support for the project from an unexpectedly vocal source.

Manchester United supporters groups have declared they will be lobbying for the project to go ahead in its current proposed format, citing that the high-speed rail link will reduce the time it takes for supporters to see their team play at home.

According to Simon Williams, secretary of MUFC Season Ticket Holders Guild, "This new rail line will make access to home games so much easier for our members."

"Currently it takes me over three hours to get from Wimbledon to Old Trafford on match days, add in a couple of hours at the ground and the return journey and that's basically the whole day gone."

"The new high-speed route will cut about an hour out of each journey, making it far more feasible for fans from Man Utd strongholds such as Tunbridge Wells and Hemel Hempstead to make the trip."

"Without doubt, the possibility of travelling up in a Eurostar-style first class compartment would appeal to your average Man Utd fan."

"If they can provide some sort of Lexus-only parking at Euston, that would be even better."

Asked to consider the negative aspects of the proposal, Williams was concise, "The only downside I can envisage is that eating on the train might result in a fall in demand for prawn sandwiches at the ground,"

"But I'm sure the club could balance the books by introducing another kit or something."
