Happy Birthday to His Majesty The King

HUA HIN REJOICES

THOUSANDS FLOCK TO ROYAL CELEBRATIONS

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

At times of national unrest, the Thai people have always turned to their monarch as the true protector of them and their country. Politicians come and go, demonstrations begin and end, but His Majesty The King has been the rock of stability for as long as most Thais can remember.

This week they have descended on the royal town of Hua Hin to celebrate his 86th birthday and were to be rewarded with a grand audience at Klai Kangwon Palace, their Majesties home in Hua Hin. Phetkasem Road and the Canal Road were at times elongated car parks in the days leading up to the 5th December, and on the day itself (yet to come at time of writing) the town was expected to come to a standstill.

Rehearsals for the big occasion have been taking place all this week, with hundreds of soldiers in ceremonial uniforms being brought in, and other finishing touches being applied, such as resurfacing part of Phetkasem Road near the palace.

Pomp and circunstance will have been in full flow on Thursday, with most of the country only able to see it on television, while the thousands that witness it in person here in Hua Hin will have stories to tell their grandchildren for years to come. A sincere happy birthday to His Majesty from all at AWOL - Long Live The King!

TOURIST TRAP

By Roger Norwood

It struck me this week as the anti-government protests were ongoing in Bangkok that these type of events always seem to be in the run up to Thailand's peak tourist season. Certainly the last three such events have been, and it made me wonder if this is a deliberate or coincidental move?

On discussing it with others, most seemed to be of the opinion that it was the latter, with a couple chipping in that not many Thais have much idea of planning ahead. However an event of that size must surely involve some planning?

The timing of the events remains though, and raises another question - if the people behind such events do plan them and their timing, are they not harming the average Thai person in choosing this time in particular? At least 30 countries' governments have already issued travel warnings, which in turn render invalid any travel insurance held, so people will naturally be more inclined to either cancel their trip or change their destination.

This will of course have a knock-on effect for Thailand's tourist industry and the hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of Thais who are in some way connected to it. Official statistics normally try to downplay the importance of tourism to Thailand, but rarely do they include the 'indirect' spending by tourists, often done in the shadier end of the economy, whether that is picking up a bar girl or buying counterfeit goods, and everything in between. There are no accounts or tax returns on these transactions, so the figures available are not a true representation of reality; Thai politicians and demonstrators will therefore believe that they are not harming their fellow countrymen very much when foreigners decide not to come and spend their money as a result of their actions.

I (and many others) believe the reality is that a continuing political turmoil, and rule changes adversely affecting foreigners, such as the most recent decision on foreign couples staying on a retirement visa, or the proposed 500 baht 'tourist tax, will eventually bring Thailand to its knees economically. I hope not but it is the path they are on.

WEIRD NEWS

■ MINNESOTA, USA Man unsurprisingly fails to win back estranged wife by throwing $1,000 into crowd

Instead of writing her a letter or giving her a phone call, a lovesick husband took the rather unusual step of throwing $1,000 (32,000 baht) worth of single dollar bills off a shopping centre balcony in an attempt to win back his estranged wife.

Serge Vorobyov had hoped to impress his wife with the stunt, which was accompanied by performers singing Dean Martin's classic Christmas song Let It Snow, but was instead reprimanded by police for disorderly conduct.

The 29-year-old was also banned from the Mall of America in Minnesota for a year.

A YouTube clip of the stunt shows Mr Vorobyov dropping the money from the top floor of the mall, with people at the bottom grabbing the notes as they fall.

He later explained he was 'going through a horrible divorce' and he didn't see how the stunt amounted to disorderly conduct.

And no, his wife did not show up to the mall after being invited along.

■ BEIJING, CHINA Stunned doctors discover dandelion growing inside baby's ear canal

Doctors made an unexpected discovery when they found a dandelion growing inside a young baby's ear canal.

Stunned medical staff in Beijing, China, found the flower when the 16-month-old girl's worried parents took her to hospital.

They say the girl has been suffering from an ear infection for more than four months and finally decided to see a specialist when she began scratching it regularly.

Her mother saw 'something' inside her daughter's ear, but told doctors she was unable to get it out. It was later surgically removed.

According to the Beijing Morning Post, the flower had grown to nearly 2cm long, with the humid conditions in the ear canal encouraging its growth.

'Even the slightest bit of pressure put her at risk for internal bleeding so it had to come out,' explained physician Gu Qinglong.

A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.
This week it is..... A stitch in time saves nine

A timely effort will prevent more work later.

This is nothing to do with rips in the fabric of the space-time continuum, as some have ingeniously suggested. The question usually asked about this phrase is "saves nine what"? The 'stitch in time' is simply the sewing up of a small hole or tear in a piece of material, so saving the need for more stitching at a later date when the hole has become larger. Clearly, the first users of this expression were referring to saving nine stitches.

The proverbial expression was clearly meant as an incentive to the lazy. It's especially gratifying that 'a stitch in time saves nine' is an anagram for 'this is meant as incentive'.

The Anglo Saxon work ethic is being called on here. Many English proverbs encourage immediate effort as superior to putting things off until later; for example, 'one year's seeds, seven year's weeds', 'procrastination is the thief of time' and 'the early bird catches the worm'.

The 'stitch in time' notion has been current in English for a very long time and is first recorded in Thomas Fuller's Gnomologia, Adagies and Proverbs, Wise Sentences and Witty Sayings, Ancient and Modern, Foreign and British, 1732:

"A Stitch in Time May save nine."

Fuller, who recorded a large number of the early proverbs in the language, wrote an explanatory preamble to this one:

"Because verses are easier got by heart, and stick faster in the memory than prose; and because ordinary people use to be much taken with the clinking of syllables; many of our proverbs are so formed, and very often put into false rhymes; as, a stitch in time, may save nine; many a little will make a mickle. This little artiface, I imagine, was contrived purposely to make the sense abide the longer in the memory, by reason of its oddness and archness."

As far as is known, the first person to state unambiguously that 'a stitch in time saves nine', rather than Fuller's less confident 'may save nine', was the English astronomer Francis Baily, in his Journal, written in 1797 and published in 1856 by Augustus De Morgan:

After a little while we acquired a method of keeping her [a boat] in the middle of the stream, by watching the moment she began to vary, and thereby verifying the vulgar proverb, "'A stitch in time saves nine."

WILDLIFE IN A DAY

LOCAL FOUNDATION INTRODUCES DAY TOURS

The Wildlife Friends Foundation Thailand (WFFT) was established in 2001, and the Wildlife Rescue Centre less than an hour from Hua Hin is the focal point of their varied activities.

The main objectives of the WFFT are to rescue wild animals from places where they are maltreated and/or neglected, and help them to spend the rest of their lives in a sanctuary as close to the natural environment as possible with the best possible care. In particular, provide sanctuary for those animals that no-one else is prepared to care for, e.g. the sick and disabled.

They aim to rescue those animals who have suffered at the hands of humans, rehabilitating and releasing where possible, and caring for those who are unable to be returned to the wild.

Educating people, particularly children, to stop cruelty to animals, is another key aim, and in particular campaign against the illegal trade in wild animals for the pet industry and discourage the use of animals for entertainment, for example in performing animal shows. This education now takes on a new form with the recent introduction of full and half day tours of the centre.

The tours are suitable for the whole family, and incorporate seeing recovering animals, helping to feed them and learning both how these and other animals have been mistreated and what the foundation does to help them.

WFFT also promotes the prevention of hunting and highlights conservation of all natural resources, fauna and flora alike. WFFT also cooperates with and assists the Royal Forestry Department and other organizations concerned with the rescue and conservation of wild animals.

Currently the WFFT runs several projects from hands-on wildlife rescue, medical care, wildlife rehabilitation, research on wildlife and marine mammals as well as the release of wild animals back to the wild.

The Centre is built on temple land; the abbot of the Kao Look Chang temple generously gave a huge plot of forest for the animals to live in.

If you want to get more info on how you can support WFFT, or make a donation please contact them at info@wfft.org, where you can also find directions and much more information.

For information or bookings for the tours, please call 082 245 8598 (English) or 032 458135 (Thai/ English), or email daytrips@wfft.org.

■ A SPECIAL MOMENT

I'll never forget how happy I was when I saw my missus walking down the aisle towards me.....

My heart was beating fast and the excitement was unbearable.

It seemed to take an age, but eventually there she was, standing beside me.

I gave her a loving smile and said,

"Get that trolley over here love. They're doing 3 cartons of Leo, for the price of 2."

■ IMPLANT

Apple announced today that it has developed a breast implant that can store and play music. The iTit will cost between 13,000 and 18,000 baht, depending on cup and speaker size. This is considered a major social breakthrough, because women are always complaining about men staring at their tits and not listening to them.

■ PIRATE

(thanks to Maureen)

A pirate walked into a bar, and the bartender said,"Hey, I haven't seen you in a while. What happened? You look terrible."

"What do you mean?" said the pirate, "I feel fine."

"What about the wooden leg? You didn't have that before."

"Well," said the pirate, "We were in a battle, and I got hit with a Cannon ball, but I'm fine now."

The bartender replied, "Well, OK, but what about that hook?"

"What happened to your hand?"

The pirate explained, "We were in another battle. I boarded a ship and got into a sword fight. My hand was cut off. I got fitted with a hook. But I'm fine, really."

"What about that eye patch?"

"Oh," said the pirate, "One day we were at sea, and a flock of birds flew over. I looked up, and one of them did poo in my eye."

"You're kidding," said the bartender.

"You couldn't lose an eye just from bird poo."

"It was my first day with the hook."

■ GYNAECOLOGIST

A gynaecologist decides to quit his job after becoming disillusioned with working in hospitals. He thinks he will have a complete change of career and signs up at the local tech to learn how to be a mechanic.

He loves the course and throws himself into it and when he sits his final exams he's sure he's done well; even so, he is taken aback to see he has been given a score of 150%.

He goes to speak to his course tutor and asks if it is perhaps a mistake. The tutor says: "No, that's your mark right enough - you took the engine apart perfectly, that's 50% of the mark, and you put it back together again faultlessy, which is another 50%. I gave you the extra 50% because you did it all through the exhaust pipe and I've never seen that in my life before!"

HAVING YOUR CAKE AND EATING IT TOO

Janet Street Porter is one of those great British eccentrics who people either love or hate. A journalist, author and broadcaster who doesn't mince her words, her latest tirade is against the cup cake.

On this occasion I have to agree with her, that the cup cake is a 'lump of cacky fattening sponge with something sickly sweet on top', although Ms Street Porter has clearly never encountered Thai cakes, which must run a very close second in the sickly sweet stakes.

Quite how cup cakes became so fashionable is a mystery, but there seems to be no end to the variety of toppings and cup cake making equipment now available. Just recently of course there were Halloween versions in the shops, which were closely followed by Guy Fawkes and soon Christmas trimmed ones.

There is a serious side to this cup cake condemnation though. Despite the ever increasing popularity of cookery programmes in the UK many people still struggle to throw a cake or a simple meal together. We watch contestants on programmes like the Great British Bake Off and Master Chef produce food which looks like works of art, with purees, jus or spun sugar arranged in gravity defying little piles on the plate. Can we replicate those dishes at home? Do we even want to? Probably not. And yet last weeks' final of the Great British Bake Off attracted over 9 million viewers.

It is claimed that the average Brit can produce only 5 dishes from scratch without referring to a cookery book, which really isn't much to be proud of. The increase in out of town supermarkets providing ready meals and convenience foods, together with the need for more and more women to combine work and childcare, have led to a whole new way of shopping - and cooking - in the UK. The huge weekly one stop shop is the norm, which inevitably results in overspending and waste.

Now Tesco, possibly as a reaction to a drop in their UK profits, has come up with some quite alarming figures on the percentage of their fresh food sales which is wasted. Two thirds of their bagged salads, 45% of bakery goods, 40% of apples, and a fair amount of bananas and grapes amongst other things are estimated to end up in landfill. But all is not lost. It is a relief to hear that Tesco will solve the problem by stopping their two for one offers on bagged salads, and by providing guidance to customers on food storage. They are accepting a tiny part of the responsibility, at no cost to themselves, while placing most of the blame for food waste firmly in the hands of their customers. There is no mention of the huge waste most supermarkets create by insisting they are supplied with perfectly uniform fruit and vegetables with which to grace their shelves.

Could all of this happen in Thailand? Even in a country where many people still buy only the food they need fresh every day, large western style supermarkets are already well established. They not only provide comfortable, air conditioned, dry places to shop, together with fairly cheap and cheerful cafes, but also the all important status which accompanies western culture.

Change is inevitable, but not all change is progress. Let's hope that however smelly they may be, those noisy, colourful Thai food markets, and the pickup trucks piled high with gluts of durian fruit, are around for many more years to come.

Curries from only 75 baht
Eat in or Takeaway 081 455 5298

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

Despite seemingly insurmountable odds, you will once again manage to talk your way out of sounding interesting this week.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

The alignment of the stars and the planets this week can only mean one thing: You're looking at a very simplistic, two-dimensional model of our solar system.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

You've never really imagined yourself as the committed type, but a state-appointed psychiatrist will soon prove you wrong.

ARIES MAR 21 – APR 20

Your bold, take-no-prisoners attitude has made you who you are today: one of the least successful criminal prosecutors in the country.

TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

Despite your attempts to make it look like an accident, investigators will immediately suspect you of burning down your wife for the insurance money.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

Your inquisitive nature will soon see you demanding answers to a series of questions ranging from "Huh?" to "Who the—?" and "Whazzat?

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22

An agonizing and seemingly endless disemboweling will soon show you exactly what you're made of.

LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

You will soon meet the greatest love of your life, which, unfortunately, has less to do with the quality of the former than the brevity of the latter.

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

An old adage will be proven wrong this Thursday when bad things come to you in two-hundred-and-forty-threes.

LIBRA SEP 23 – OCT 23

Your perfectionist streak will consume you this week when you attempt to posit the world's single most precise chaos theory.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

Who's to say what's right and what's wrong, except maybe for all those police officers, the presiding district court judge, and a horrified jury of your peers.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

After decades of soul-searching and inward reflection, you'll finally realize this week that the question of God was always intended to be rhetorical.

FEATURED GAME

SUNDAY 8TH DECEMBER 2013
PREMIER LEAGUE
Arsenal v Everton 23:00
At time of writing these two are first and fifth although the midweek games that take place after publication may change that. Regardless this is a big game that both sides will not want to lose. The Gunners have been in outstanding form, while Everton are also playing well and have only lost one game all season. We think Arsenal will just about edge this one but it will be close, with a few goals to boot.

LIVERPOOL FANS WELCOME RETURN OF UTTER HOPELESSNESS

■ LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

SUPPORTERS have applauded Liverpool's return to comedic woefulness following last weekend's defeat at Hull.

Protestors outside the KC Stadium had demanded that the Liverpool board bring back the slapstick style of play that fans have enjoyed over the last few decades.

The demonstration was headed by former player and beloved physical comedy performer Djimi Traore, who managed to fall over three times and accidentally set fire to his banner.

Manager Brendan Rogers said: "We rested Danny Sturridge to make sure he stopped his run of scoring goals and Skrtel continues to be the most brilliantly uncoordinated man I've ever worked with, so it all went to plan.

"It's one thing losing to quality teams like Southampton and Arsenal but if we really want to challenge for a bottom-four place we have to be having our arse handed to us by the small boys, too."

Left: Kolo Toure argues with the opposing ant that blocked him off for the second Hull goal

The presence of Jon Flanagan and the return of Joe Allen to the side, whom fans affectionately refer to as 'Like if Xavi had a stroke', and the continued existence of Iago Aspas, all bode well for Liverpool's future mediocrity, but most agree that Suarez needs to leave as soon as possible.

Liverpool fan Wayne Hayes said: "He may be an abusive cannibal with a dubious centre of gravity near the penalty area but the way he controls the ball and makes it go in the net just isn't the Liverpool way.

"Igor Biscan. Jan Kromkamp. Bjorn Kvarme. Now they were proper old-school bags of crap."
