LOCAL SPORTS LEAGUES - AN IMPORTANT SOCIAL ELEMENT FOR EXPATS

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

Regular readers of AWOL will be familiar with our pages devoted to the variety of local sports groups in the area, and most who either take part or have an interest in them will often take them for granted. The Hua Hin Darts League season ended this week with their normal individuals tournament and presentations, and we felt it was time to properly acknowledge the work done by both the organisers of that league, and all the other competitions that take place every week.

While there will often be gripes made to these organisers over fees, rules and everything else under the sun, all of the people putting in the work do so in their own unpaid time, and they do it because they understand the value of these activities. The social and community value is often overlooked, but for many of the individuals taking part in the leagues and societies, they provide two important elements often missing in expat life; a regular social interaction and a 'safety net', particularly crucial for the many expats who live here on their own. There will be regular contact with other team members, and if one of the team does not turn up on match day, or can't be contacted, this will normally trigger at least one of the team to make sure everything is OK, something that in their home country would be done by family, friends or neighbours but is often lacking for expats.

So please join with us and say 'thank you' to the organisers of the numerous leagues and societies, both past and present, with a particular nod to the Finn who started the very first pool and darts leagues here, Osmo, who is no longer in Thailand, and to the Brit, Bernie, who has been, and still is at the heart of the Hua Hin Golf Society. Special mention also for Oil at Jungle Juice for her unwavering support of the Hua Hin Darts League, Martin who organises it now, and to Barry and Jill Moore who ran it for so many years.

If you run a league or other group and want to be featured in AWOL, please email us on info@awolonline.net with the details.

I'M RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG

By Roger Norwood

An interesting piece in The Nation this week, entitled "How to wean yourself off the drug of partisan politics" by Pravit Rojanaphruk got me thinking about both Thailand's political woes, as well as how similar the pattern is in many other countries.

Most nations on earth have adopted the same adversarial system of politics, and it must be presumed that this happens naturally as it is seen so widely, with the norm being two large political parties who battle to gain power. There are exceptions to this of course, but even when there are lots of smaller political parties they will align themselves into two larger groups, and this is mainly because of the parliament and congress systems, with both generally leading to just two main power blocks.

The parliamentary system in particular leads to the unedifying spectacle seen frequently in the UK's House Of Commons which becomes more like a school playground than an arena for serious political discussion, and this is also seen in other countries as well.

My belief is that partisan politics and the two party system does not deliver the kind of government that the people really want, and also encourages the type of confrontation that is being seen right now in Thailand. It also has, unfortunately, seeped into the mindset of the people that there can be no middle ground or compromise - 'you're either with us or against us' is a commonly held view, and this surely cannot be the right way, particularly in Thailand with their Buddhist beliefs. When it leads to violent attacks and murders the political protagonists should be the first ones to step back from the brink and try to compromise.

Fighting an opponent rarely results in anything other than a more entrenched position, and even 'victory' does not usually lead to anything except martyrs and dreams of revenge - as Jack Nicholson says in 'Mars Attacks!' - "Why can't we all just get along?"

A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... Don't look a gift horse in the mouth
Don't be ungrateful when you receive a gift.
Proverbs are 'short and expressive sayings, in common use, which are recognized as conveying some accepted truth or useful advice'. This example, also often expressed as 'never look a gift horse in the mouth', is as pertinent today as it ever was.
As horses develop they grow more teeth and their existing teeth begin to change shape and project further forward. Determining a horse's age from its teeth is a specialist task, but it can be done. This incidentally is also the source of another teeth/age related phrase - long in the tooth.
The advice given in the 'don't look...' proverb is: when receiving a gift be grateful for what it is; don't imply you wished for more by assessing its value.
As with most proverbs the origin is ancient and unknown. We have some clues with this one however. The phrase appears in print in English in 1546, as "don't look a given horse in the mouth", in John Heywood's A dialogue conteinyng the nomber in effect of all the prouerbes in the Englishe tongue, where he gives it as: "No man ought to looke a geuen hors in the mouth."
It is probable that Heywood obtained the phrase from a Latin text of St. Jerome, The Letter to the Ephesians, circa AD 400, which conatins the text 'Noli equi dentes inspicere donati' (Never inspect the teeth of a given horse). Where St Jerome got it from we aren't eve likely to know.
Heywood is an interesting character in the development of English. He was employed at the courts of Henry VIII and Mary I as a singer, musician, and playwright. His Proverbs is a comprehensive collection of those sayings known at the time and includes many that are still with us:
- Many hands make light work
- Rome wasn't built in a day
- A good beginning makes a good ending

and so on. These were expressed in the literary language of the day, as in "would yee both eat your cake, and have your cake?", but the modern versions are their obvious descendents.
We can't attribute these to Heywood himself; he collected them from the literary works of the day and from common parlance. He can certainly be given the credit for introducing many proverbs to a wide and continuing audience, including one that Shakespeare later borrowed - All's well that ends well.

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

The stars had something important to tell you, but California's gay marriage ban was just overturned so they're going to get drunk and go dancing instead.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

They thought they had you pegged. They thought they could screw you over and you'd just take it lying down. They were wrong. You're thrashing about in ecstasy like a crazy person. It's a little freaky.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

Your life will continue on pretty much the way it always has.

ARIES MAR 21 – APR 20

You will soon embark on a long journey over water by night, which will be extremely romantic until you figure out how low the pilot is flying.

TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

You will find work in a strange office in which everyone is happy, no one makes irritating small talk about reality TV, and the work is challenging and rewarding.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

Your life will be cut tragically short next week by the untimely discovery that your breadmaker can also be used to make doughnuts.

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22

Love flickers, love fades, and love can gutter and die, but love is still better than those bloody compact fluorescent bulbs.

LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

You claim to be a champion of truth and beauty, but you still can't name three poems by Dean Young.

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

Future archaeologists will find your desiccated skeleton exactly where you starved, midway between two 64-ounce bags of Lays.

LIBRA SEP 23 – OCT 23

You may be heartbroken, but you can no more stop him from leaving than you can stop the toaster from falling into your bathtub Thursday.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

It's time you learned to treat people as individuals instead of mathematically predictable members of an aggregate set, no matter how well that works.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

The men in lab coats will once more come for you one dark night this week, but it's just because they left one of their lab coats at your place last time.

■ NAG NAG NAG (thanks to Maureen)

An attorney arrived home late, after a very tough day trying to get a stay of execution. His last minute plea for clemency to the governor had failed and he was feeling worn out and depressed.

As soon as he walked through the door at home, his wife started on him about, 'What time of night to be getting home is this? Where have you been? Dinner is cold and I'm not reheating it'. And on and on and on.

Too shattered to play his usual role in this familiar ritual, he poured himself a shot of whiskey and headed off for a long hot soak in the bathtub, pursued by the predictable sarcastic remarks as he dragged himself up the stairs.

While he was in the bath, the phone rang. The wife answered and was told that her husband's client, James Wright, had been granted a stay of execution after all. Wright would not be hanged tonight.

Finally realizing what a terrible day he must have had, she decided to go upstairs and give him the good news..

As she opened the bathroom door, she was greeted by the sight of her husband, bent over naked, drying his legs and feet.

'They're not hanging Wright tonight,' she said.

He whirled around and screamed, 'FOR THE LOVE OF GOD WOMAN, DON'T YOU EVER STOP?'

■ RETIREMENT GIFT

My very talented musical friend has just retired from his day job in the Bomb Disposal Corps.

On reflection, they now feel that the choice of a metronome as a surprise retirement gift was maybe not the most diplomatic option to have selected.

AMBIGUOUS

Just when you think you've got to grips with the whole Ladyboy/transgender/transexual/bisexual thing, and have accepted the right of same sex couples to marry and to adopt chidren, society throws a curve ball.

I don't know how the concept of 'gender neutral parenting' has managed to slip beneath my radar for so long. Apparently it began in the 1970's along with the rise in feminist issues, but appears to be having a bit of a 21st century comeback.

According to one website the aim of gender neutral parenting (GNP) is to avoid pigeonholing a child into a specific gender based solely on their biological sex. The premise being that by not forcing any preconceived gender norms onto a child, they will 'find their own comfort spot on the continuum we call gender.'

Clearly someone ate 'Sociology Themes and Perspectives' for breakfast on the day they wrote that, followed by Freud for lunch. Nevertheless there are some valid arguments for enabling children to explore their own interests and identity, without being led by tradition down the path of pink and dolls for girls, blue and trains for boys stereotype. Not least that they might realise their own potential to move into jobs which are more commonly the domain of the opposite sex.

So far so good. But is it really a good idea for a very young child, maybe only a year old, to be offered the choice of boys or girls clothes for example? A recent case of GNP in the UK shows a two year old boy who has a wardrobe of dungaries and cowboy shirts, dresses and pink tutus at his disposal, and who allegedly chooses to wear whatever takes his fancy. Which is fine for 'dressing up' play - as most of us did as kids. But what happens when the child starts school and is allowed that same freedom of choice?

Perhaps more to the point, we no longer live in a society which demands that women wear skirts to work, or set their sights only on working in a typing pool. We have female astronauts, scientists, engineers, surgeons and Prime Ministers (if only caretaker ones sometimes,) while men can excel as chefs and hairdressers. Thanks to equal opportunities and pay there should in theory be no limit to what either sex can achieve - provided that they have the motivation. Whether that motivation will be helped by GNP remains to be seen. And as for baby pinks and blues, surely they only still exist for the benefit of people like myself who need a clue as to the sex of the child we are about to coo over?

And so to this weeks' word. 'Disambiguation'. It sounds like a surgical procedure, but is really just a long word for the process of making things more simple to understand. 'The act of making something clear by removing ambiguity'.

In other words to clarify a word or statement by adding a word. Clear as mud!

FEATURED GAME

SATURDAY 22ND FEBRUARY 2014
PREMIER LEAGUE
Chelsea v Everton 19:45
Current leaders Chelsea will want to make a statement in this match against an Everton side who seem to be falling off the pace somewhat; however this would be an ideal chance for the away team to renew their credentials as a top four challenger and at the same time open the title race up once more. We think this will in the end be a hard fought, physical draw.

WEBB OF DECEIT

WEBB EXILED TO LIVERPOOL

■ LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

THE Referee's Association is to make Howard Webb live in Bootle for three months.

Webb waved play on after Luis Suarez was brought down in the penalty area, on the basis he was probably asking for it.

Arsenal went on to win the game despite Liverpool's best efforts to have Steven Gerrard kick as many people as he could.

Before the match, fans highlighted Liverpool's poor success rate for games officiated by Webb, although this has to be placed in the wider context of Liverpool's general awfulness.

Bootle resident Wayne Hayes said: "We will give Howard the kind of welcome you'd expect for a Yorkshire-born ex-copper with an inflated sense of self-importance.

"Every piece of animal excrement placed on, in or near his house will be indicative of our trademark sense of humour."

Guards will be posted outside the new Howard residence, situated opposite local pub The Kop & Grudge-Holder, but have been instructed to not notice blatant offences against him.

Webb said: "Oh no, is everybody talking about me instead of the football?

"I hate it when that happens. What else are they saying about me?"

West Ham fans are reportedly furious that Webb was not made to live in Green Street, Upton Park and force fed jellied eels after the red card he issued to Andy Carroll against Swansea, and have launched a legal challenge in a bid to get the Liverpool decision overturned.
