COUP DE GRÂCE?

CURFEW EASED BUT FUTURE IS BLURRY

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

It is still too early to know what the long term effects on Thailand will be of the military coup, but in the short term the curfew, despite its easing this week to midnight until 4am, is clearly having an impact on business and tourism across the country.

Hua Hin and the surrounding areas are probably faring a little better than most in this regard, but the hospitality and nightlife sectors have once again borne the brunt of the hardship. The only saving grace is that the timing of the coup was kind, whether planned or by chance, so that it is in what is historically the lowest part of the low season, but equally the knock on effect for the European and American summer holiday season in July, August and September and the next high season could be devastating, with people in those areas looking to book now likely to look elsewhere. A major drive by the tourism authorities will be required to try and rescue the situation, if and when the country is returned to non-military leadership.

Hopefully this week's easing of the curfew will be followed swiftly by a complete end of it, as there are several other noticeable effects - fresh fruit and vegetables, and other produce is showing some signs of being in short supply as the major markets in Bangkok have been unable to trade, with most of them normally operating in the small hours and thus unable to at present. Equally no freight or passenger trains are running during the night, so deliveries of other raw materials and goods are being limited. Inter provincial bus travel is still outlawed as well, presumably in an attempt to prevent protestors gathering.

WEIRD NEWS

■ SOUTH KOREA South Korea introduces extra-large parking spaces for women

Are women worse drivers than men? South Korea certainly seems to think so. The capital city, Seoul, has introduced larger parking spaces just for lady drivers marked out in pink paint with a mini-skirted logo.

Apparently this is part of a $95 million to make the city more friendly to women. These 'lady-friendly' parking spaces, like disabled spaces, are closer to entrances and lifts. That is not all – the city has also installed squishy stiletto-friendly pavements near the spaces.

Not at all patronising.

■ USA Burger King car park flasher blames itchy brozilian and bad flatulence for indecent exposure

What do you say if you are caught by the police naked in a bush in a Burger King parking lot? Tough one one to talk yourself out of… but we all like a trier. The 'hero' of this tale came up with best answer he could when caught in flagrante. He told police he was hiding naked in the bush because he needed to fart – and didn't want to do it in his car. His elaborate excuses for his public nudity did not stop there. Officers had contacted the man to follow up on complaints that the flatulent flasher had previously exposed himself while driving. His explanation for this separate exposure was equally audacious. Our windy pal claimed that his 'brozilian' wax had left his genital area on the itchy side. For the uninitiated, a brozilian is the male version of the all-off Brazilian wax, where the hair is ripped from man's most intimate parts, including the testicles.

Officers refused to buy the excuse after checking his car and finding a neatly folded blue towel on the driver's seat with an open packet of condoms on the passenger seat. 24-year-old David Foskette was subsequently charged with a count of indecent exposure and booked into jail.

■ NORWAY 'Artist eats his own deformed hip' after it's removed by doctors

A man has reportedly eaten his own hip after originally telling doctors who removed it he was going use it for art Alexander Selvik Wengshoel, from Norway, had the deformed bone cut out four years ago and replaced with a metal one. Prior to the operation he was only able to move using crutches and a wheelchair.

The 25-year-old has now revealed he feasted on his hip instead of using it in an art project as he originally intended to. 'I just wanted to use it in my art. I didn't know at that time that I would boil it and eat it,' he told The Local. 'I had to boil off the meat to get to the bone, and when I started scraping off the meat, I took off a little piece and I thought, why not do it.'

A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... Raze to the ground
To destroy and sweep completely away.
The expression 'raze to the ground', like 'bated breath' and 'just deserts', is often spelled incorrectly. The sources of these misunderstandings are the homophones 'bated' and 'baited', 'deserts' and 'desserts' and, in 'raze to the ground', 'raze' and 'raise'. Added to that is the fact that the correct spelling in each case is of an archaic word that is rarely used elsewhere.
As a child, I heard stories of WWII and of cities like Dresden and Hiroshima being, as I thought, 'raised to the ground'. That seemed odd to me. How could destroying them with bombs raise them? Were these cities underground? It makes a little more sense when we understand that 'raze' is the verb that gave rise to the noun 'razor'. What's being said is akin to 'razored (that is, shaved) to the ground'. It seems that others are similarly confused - there are currently (Oct 2009) many hits in Google for 'raise the the ground'.
Raze is hardly a common word now (in the UK at least - there is more use of it in other countries, notably the USA), but it was in the 16th century; for example, Henry Howard, the Earl of Surrey, used it in Aeneid II, 1547, in a context that makes the 'razored/erased' meaning evident:
"I saw Troye fall down in burning gledes. Neptunus town clene razed from the soil."
Shakespeare also used it in Henry VI, Part II, 1592:
"These are his substance, sinewes, armes, and strength, With which he ... Razeth your Cities, and subverts your Townes."
The earliest example that I can find of the precise 'raze to the ground' form is in The Glory of England, written by Thomas Gainsford in 1620:
"King Lewis held nothing in Italy but the lanterne of Genes, which afterward the Genouais razed to the ground."
If you invite your neighbours to a barn raising, you had better get the spelling right, or the consequences might be unfortunate.

THE FINANCIAL BENEFITS OF BEING AN EXPAT...BENJAMIN FRANKLIN STYLE

Every week in this article Helen Couldrey, a financial consultant with the deVere Group, and also a qualified English lawyer, will give you tips and ideas of how to take advantage financially of being an expat. Helen has clients in Bangkok, Hua Hin and Cha-Am who she helps to maximise the financial benefits of living overseas.

LOOKING TO THE LONG TERM ….
Saving money. A thing we all think about every day. However, whilst thinking about saving money in the short term is commonplace, saving for the long term is often overlooked. So, as expats, what are the types of things that we should all be saving for?

Retirement
A scary amount of people neglect their retirement savings thinking it is something that they will get around to. The cost of delay is high and absolutely everyone should be making provisions for when they retire.
Medical emergencies
Many expats have medical cover. However, for those who don't, make it a priority to get an insurance policy sorted or, at the very least, have a slush fund that you can dip into if something were to go wrong.
Children's University Fees
With university fees rising at a scary 7.5%, putting money aside for this expensive life expense is key… especially if you have to pay expat prices, which can be 3 times the normal cost.
Repatriation and periods of unemployment
If you were to leave Thailand, whether planned or on a whim, ensure you have enough set aside to repatriate… and to find a new job in your new location.
Life events
Of course we should all be saving for the long term, however make sure that you still find the cash to treat yourself. Don't do this too often of course. Save for one big treat or event such as a car, a piece of art or an item of jewelry. This can actually end up being an investment in itself.

Top tips for saving

- The first rule to effective savings is 'save before you spend'. People often splurge and then if, and only if, they have anything left over then squirrel it away. Take control of your finances and resist the temptation to aimlessly spend.

- Make sure that you allocate a realistic percentage of your money per month to your savings. The general rule of thumb is to save at least 15% of your salary, with this percentage increasing as your salary rises. And if you get a bonus, resist the urge to splurge! Save it for a rainy day.

- Finally, prioritize your savings. Good financial planning means you will have access to emergency money, normally 6 months of living expenses. Next, put your cash into anything with a matched contribution scheme or an account with tax advantages. Your financial advisor can help you to set one up.

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

You can't understand why people keep telling you they're tired of your act. Why, the costume changes alone are nothing short of breathtaking.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

Take heart—there is absolutely nothing wrong with love. However, be warned that love is not exactly what you're feeling for those poor terrified nurses.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

You will indeed live fairly fast, and you'll die relatively young, but no one will be able to say you left a beautiful corpse.

ARIES MAR 21 – APR 20

It's very principled of you, not to mention brave, to stand by your beliefs, but by week's end you'll have graphically conclusive proof that bullfighting is not fake.

TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

This week's revelations will be especially traumatic for you unless you get it through your thick head that sex is natural and that there's absolutely nothing wrong with transvestism.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

You were just being clever when you said "Either this wallpaper goes or I do," but the wallpaper will use its powerful social connections to have you ostracized from polite society.

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22

You've always believed that everything happens for a reason, so there's probably a perfectly reasonable explanation for what most would call your senseless death next week.

LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

It was probably a little cynical for you to have used such base physical tactics to get a husband, but on the other hand, he doesn't seem to mind.

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

You've always thought your life would be better if you could go back in time and tell yourself a few things, so it'll be pretty depressing this week when you find out you've tried that already.

LIBRA SEP 23 – OCT 23

You've never claimed to be a genius, but you have a nagging suspicion that you should have known sheets could be changed.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

Your drug experimentation phase enters an exciting new phase when you find one that makes the throbbing pain in your head subside almost completely.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

You will find precious little to live for now that the age of the extended synthesizer jam is well and truly over.

■ COLONIAL PAST

In the greatest days of the British Empire, a new commanding officer was sent to a jungle outpost to relieve the retiring colonel.

After welcoming his replacement, and showing the courtesies that protocol decrees (gin and tonic with cucumber sandwiches), the retiring colonel said, "You really must meet Captain Smithers, my right-hand man. God, he's really the strength of this office. His talent is simply boundless."

Smithers was summoned and introduced to the new CO, who was shocked to see a toothless, hairless, scabbed and pockmarked specimen of humanity, standing less than three feet tall.

The retiring Colonel said "Smithers, old man, tell your new CO about yourself."

"Well, sir, I graduated with honours from Sandhurst, joined the regiment and won the Military Cross and Bar after three expeditions behind enemy lines. I've represented Great Britain in equestrian events and won a Silver Medal in the middleweight division of the boxing Olympics. I have researched the history of … "

Here the Colonel interrupted, "Yes, yes, yes; never mind that, Smithers; the new CO can find all that in your file. Tell him about the day you called the witch doctor a twat."

■ YAYA

The owner of Manchester City goes into the changing room to show Yaya Toure some love.

"I'm very sorry, Yaya," he says. "It was disrepectful to forget your birthday. I've done my research, and I now know everything about you. Ask me anything..."

"OK," shouts Yaya, from the other side of the room. "Why are you talking to Micah Richards?"

■ OLD LADY'S PHONE

An elderly lady phoned her telephone company to report that her telephone failed to ring when her friends called - and that on the few occasions when it did ring, her pet dog always moaned right before the phone rang. The telephone repairman proceeded to the scene, curious to see this psychic dog or senile elderly lady.

He climbed a nearby telephone pole, hooked in his test set, and dialed the subscriber's house. The phone didn't ring right away, but then the dog moaned loudly and the telephone began to ring.

Climbing down from the pole, the telephone repairman found:

1. The dog was tied to the telephone system's ground wire via a steel chain and collar.
2. The wire connection to the ground rod was loose.
3. The dog was receiving 90 volts of signaling current when the phone number was called.
4. After a couple of such jolts, the dog would start moaning and then urinate on himself and the ground.
5. The wet ground would complete the circuit, thus causing the phone to ring.

Which demonstrates that some problems CAN be fixed by pissing and moaning.

■ TACTICAL DEMOCRACY

A young relative embarked on her first trip to Thailand early this month, much to the consternation of her Dad. Especially when he realised that, rather than travelling in relative safety with her boyfriend, she was going for three weeks flight only with a female friend. The anxiety was only eased a little when she announced that the pair had booked an adventure trip in advance with an Australian company.

Unfortunately my assurances that they would be fine - that the adventure would probably involve whizzing through jungle on zip wires - didn't really help much. I can't understand why. News of an outbreak of Swine Flu in the Land of Smiles didn't do much to ease the pain either.

But more was to come. As the intrepid travellers arrived in Bangkok a 6 point something earthquake hit some Northern provinces, followed a short time later by the removal of the Prime Minister from office.

The two events were not connected, and still not enough to spoil a holiday. Until of course the last couple of days in Bangkok, and the prospect of a severely curtailed nightlife. But hey - it was still a great adventure, and the pair would soon be back home in a country where nothing much ever happens, and where the biggest news (after the FA Cup Final) is the weather.

How wrong can you be. Not only had Prince Charles almost single handedly started World War 111, but the UK Government was left battered and bruised by the election successes of UKIP, the UK Independence Party. For those who are not familiar with recent goings on over here, or were simply sidetracked by the search for a Chang after 10 pm, last weeks elections were twofold. Everyone voted for their choice of MEP, (Member of the European Parliament), while at the same time some also voted separately for their local Councillors. I say 'everyone', which isn't strictly true. Almost everyone has the right to vote. Many can't be bothered, don't believe it does any good, or simply won't brave the rain. I have to wonder though why our coalition Conservative/LibDem leaders didn't see it coming. (The election results that is - not the rain.) While UKIP made some reasonable gains in the local Council elections, they really stormed to victory in the European Parliament, winning more seats than any other UK party, leaving our deputy Prime Minister and LibDem leader Nick Clegg looking as if he was about to cry, while his boss David Cameron dismissed the whole event as tactical voting.

Which perhaps it was, along with that of many other European countries where the electorate have also swung to far right 'anti establishment' parties. Only time will tell. But what we are seeing is an excellent example of democracy at work.

It seems only right that this weeks' word should be 'democracy'. A straightforward no frills word which describes a form of government in which people are free to vote for the representatives who they want to govern

GET YER YAYA'S OUT

YAYA TOURE HANDS IN TRANSFER REQUEST AFTER MAN CITY FAIL TO COMPLIMENT NEW JACKET

■ LONDON, ENGLAND

Manchester City midfielder Yaya Toure has handed in a transfer request after club officials failed to compliment him on his new jacket.

Toure claims to have spent hours looking for a new jacket, only to find that the club's billionaire owners didn't care enough about him to tell him how great he looked when wearing it.

His agent Dimitry Seluk explained, "This is Yaya Toure we're talking about, not some youth team player. He deserves to have his fashion choices recognised like the grown adult he is."

"Did you know that when Roberto Carlos got a new haircut the owners of his club Anzhi sent him a text message to say he looked amazing? And they sent him a lifetime supply of hair gel."

Left: Man City's midfield dynamo YaYa Toure wants to leave the club after a 'series of snubs' by the club.

"We're not saying Yaya wanted a text, but some sort of acknowledgement of how he looks would have been nice. Especially after all the effort he went to in spending 0.000001% of his wages on the jacket."

City fans have reacted with anger at the club's lack of concern for the fashion decisions of its star player.

Fan Simon Williams told us, "I'm season ticket holder of however many years it's been since we got good, and I cannot believe the terrible behaviour of the club in this matter."

"It's like they actually want him to leave!"

However fans of other clubs have reacted with surprise that something so trivial is a story in the first place.

As one explained. "A grown man paid over £200,000 a week is upset because he didn't get a compliment from his boss? This is a joke, right?"
