CONFUSION OVER IMMIGRATION RULES

HUA HIN, THAILAND

An announcement this week by the Hua Hin Immigration Office regarding the carrying of ID and rules concerning travel within Thailand has caused confusion and consternation among many foreigners.

Many saw the announcement on local and national expat forums, but when we contacted Hua Hin Immigration they advised us that some things had been misunderstood, so we hope to clarify those here. No new rules have been introduced, and what was announced was a reminder of laws that have existed since 1979 contained in the Immigration Act; it can be taken that these will be more strictly enforced from now on though.

There are three elements to the announcement; the first is that all foreigners in the Kingdom must always have one of the following forms of photo ID with them; (i) their passport; (ii) a Thai driving licence; or (iii) a copy of their passport's photo page and date allowed to remain until page. We have been assured that (iii) does NOT have to be stamped or certified by immigration. Failure to have this ID is liable to a fine of 2000 baht.

The second part is that if a foreigner travels and stays in another province for longer than 48 hours, the owner of the accommodation must notify the local immigration office within 48 hours. Hotels and guesthouses already routinely do this for any foreigners residing, hence asking to copy your passport on arrival. Finally any foreigner must report to Immigration within 24 hours of moving in to a new address - on your arrival card you already reported your place of stay, and if that changes you need to visit Immigration and report your new address.

We encourage everyone to contact Hua Hin Immigration in Soi 35 (Tel. 032 520 616) if they are at all unsure how these rules apply to them.

■ A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... Hoi polloi

The common masses.

This term is of Greek origin and a literal translation from the Greek οἱ πολλοί is 'the many'. There are many examples of it in print in its original Greek form, dating back to the 17th century. The earliest known is a 1668 essay by John Dryden - Of dramatick poesie: "If by the people you understand the multitude, the οἱ πολλοί"

Many believe that this term was adopted into English by the American writer James Fenimore Cooper. He did use 'hoi polloi' in his Gleanings from Europe in 1837, but before then it was in common use by those whom we might expect to have been familiar with classical Greek - scholars of Oxford and Cambridge universities. For instance, the various classes of degree of Cambridge's Mathematical Tripos were Wranglers and Senior and Junior Optimes (what we would now call First, Second and Third Class), followed by Hoi Polloi - also called Poll Men or Polloi Men. The first record found of this in print is from a listing of Cambridge degree awards in The Times, 22nd January 1833.

There are two linguistic points of interest concerning hoi polloi. The first is whether or not to precede it with 'the'. Some argue that, since 'hoi' means 'the' in Greek, then we should omit the article and just say 'hoi polloi'. Others argue that this is merely pedantic, not to say inconsistent with other uses of articles inherited from others languages; for example, alchemist, which comes from the Arabic, where al means the - and yet no one complains that the alchemist is incorrect.

The second point is that some believe hoi polloi to mean 'the upper classes'; for example, this from the Chicago Daily Herald, October 1984: "Brent Musburger, whose talks with WGN are continuing, was among the hoi polloi in the rich seats."

This usage is possibly influenced by a mistaken association with 'hoity-toity'. This is defined as pretentiously self-important, haughty or pompous. Many dictionaries also give a second meaning, that is, given to frivolity, silliness or riotousness, which was the original meaning of this term, but has now almost completely died out. Our view of what is hoity-toity now is defined by the 'looking down the nose' manner adopted by characters like Lady Bracknell, in Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Earnest.

These days we hardly expect to hear lager louts described as hoity-toity. The two meanings of the term aren't as far apart as it might seem though and one seems to have migrated from the other. The frivolousness/riotousness meaning was first recorded in Sir Roger L'Estrange's 1668 translation of The visions of Don Francisco de Quevedo Villegas: "The Widows I observ'd ... Chanting and Jigging to every Tune they heard, and all upon the Hoyty-Toyty, like mad Wenches of Fifteen."

The later meaning isn't seen until around mid to late 18th century and is recorded in O'Keefe's Fontainebleau in 1784: "My mother ... was a fine lady, all upon the hoity-toities, and so, good for nothing."

As with many reduplicated phrases, one word carries an existing meaning and the other is present for emphasis. In this case the earlier meaning of the term came from the word hoit. This is a now defunct verb meaning to indulge in riotous, noisy mirth. That in turn was formed from hoyden - a boorish clown or rude boisterous girl.

The change from one meaning to the other seems to be due to the pronunciation of hoity as heighty and the subsequent allusion to highness or haughtiness. Two 18th century dictionaries give intermediate forms:

B.E's A new dictionary of the terms ancient and modern of the canting crew, circa 1700 - "Hightetity, a Ramp or Rude Girl."

Francis Grose's A classical of the vulgar tongue, 1785 "Heighty toity, a hoydon, or romping girl."

deVere GROUP

Every week in this article Helen Couldrey, a financial consultant with the deVere Group, and also a qualified English lawyer, will give you tips and ideas of how to take advantage financially of being an expat. Helen has clients in Bangkok, Hua Hin and Cha-Am who she helps to maximise the financial benefits of living overseas.

BANG GOES THE BAHT

Being an expat makes a little economist out of all of us to a certain degree... Just one example; how often do you find yourself moving between one currency and another, or even two, three or four at once!

When Hans, down the pub, says that a decent Wiener Schnitzel costs 12 euros in his home town, most of us will find ourselves reflecting on how far the equivalent (about 500 Baht) will go on a night out around Cha Am or Hua Hin. But how often do we stop and really think about the ramifications of the currency conversions that we make in everyday life? As an expat in Thailand currency should be an important consideration for all of us as it can have a huge impact on our finances and in particular how far we can stretch our Baht (or Euro, Dollar, Pound, etc.,).

In the past 12 months alone the Thai Baht has fallen (high to low) against a range of major world currencies by as much as around 17% (Sterling), 9% (Euro) or 6.5% (USD). Of course if you have assets in these currencies, be it a property, cash deposits or investments, or if you are receiving an income, pension or otherwise, from overseas, this has been great news as you'll have seen real increases in value in Thai Baht terms.

Of course, on the other hand if you have most of your assets here in Thailand, but have commitments overseas like a mortgage, child at university or debts, you will have found these outgoings have become a bit more expensive. It is swings and roundabouts and that is only over the past year. Many of us have been here longer than a year and I am sure that many of you will remember a time when the Baht was significantly weaker against other major world currencies. (2005: 75 Baht to the pound anyone?)

For example, over the last ten years GBP has seen highs of up to 76.01 against lows of 43.80 to the Baht. That is a shift of more than 40% in the relative value of the two currencies. Meanwhile USD saw a high of 41.70 against the Baht versus a low of 28.65, a shift in value of just over 30%.

This raises two important points; Firstly, over the last ten years holding US Dollar would have proved a better option than pounds sterling because there was less volatility against the Baht. (The highs weren't as high and the lows weren't as low so there was more to lose holding sterling.) Secondly, just because holding US Dollars would have proven a better option over the last ten years doesn't mean that it will for the next. Indeed it is always easier to make a judgement about the past than a prediction of the future.

So what can be done? Well, firstly you should diversify your assets through a range of different currencies if you can. Secondly you should contact an experienced foreign exchange broker whenever you are moving money. This will mean that you have more options on which currency to move in or out of, helping you make the switch at the best time, generating better rates.

However, there's always the prospect that another series of protests may send the Baht into turmoil!

CAPRICORN Dec 22 - Jan 19
You've seen the evidence and spoken to eyewitnesses, but you still think that Bernese mountain dog puppies are just too cute to be real

AQUARIUS Jan 20 – Feb 18
The stars say that you will have a decent week, but will forget to buy milk on Wednesday and will wear the wrong shoes for the weather Friday. Seriously, there are around 200 billion stars in the Milky Way alone, and some of them can be pretty specific

PISCES Feb 19 – Mar 20
You've raised three children, started a successful business, and made peace with God, but you'll soon find out there are things duct tape just can't do.

ARIES Mar 21 – Apr 20
You'll finally discover what you were born to do when you turn out to be the only person at Gorilla Taco who fits in the combination gorilla/taco suit

TAURUS Apr 21 – May 21
For the last time: Once your first male child is dead, the next one in line does not automatically become your firstborn son, so cool it with all the sacrifices

GEMINI May 22 – June 21
You've always been afraid of someone washing your mouth out with soap, but that was before you learned they made a special mouth-soap in the form of a minty paste.

CANCER Jun 22 – Jul 22
They say it's never to late to do something meaningful with your life, which is a nice idea, but you actually have about nine days

LEO Jul 23 – Aug 22
Kindly strangers will do you a favour this week by removing your blindfold, taking away the stick, and explaining exactly what is meant by the word "pinata".

VIRGO Aug 23 – Sep 22
Smile, and the world smiles with you; cry, and you cry alone. But if you're standing over a pile of dismembered infants and there are TV cameras around, you should probably try for the opposite.

LIBRA Sep 23 – Oct 23
You will finally meet the man of your dreams, which sounds like good news until you remember some of your dreams.

SCORPIO Oct 24 – Nov 21
It's simply not true that most people think you're an anonymous loser. In fact, most people have never heard of you.

SAGITTARIUS Nov 22 – Dec 21
You will soon come into a great deal of money, resulting in your arrest and immediate dismissal from your job as a bank teller

■ IMPEACHMENT

One morning Barack Obama wakes up. He looks out side, it had snowed during the night and everything was covered in snow. He looks down and sees something written in urine on the lawn it reads
"I hope YoU GeT ImPeAcHeD".
Obama calls the FBI and says "Someone has written "I hope you get impeached" in urine on my lawn. For them to write it in the spot it's in they would have had to be on my deck. Please help me find this criminal."
The FBI agrees and comes back a week later. "Well Mr. Obama we did DNA, urine and handwriting tests. Do you want to here the bad news or the awful news first."
Obama sighs "bad I guess".
"The urine belongs to Joe Biden" Obama grabs his chest "Oh! Joe, my best friend my partner, my vice president... What's the awful news?!"
The FBI agents look at each other...
"The handwriting was Michelle's"

■ SEXUAL PROBLEM

"Doctor," the embarrassed man said, "I have a sexual problem. I can't get it up for my wife anymore."
"Mr. Thomas, bring her back with you tomorrow and let me see what I can do."
The next day the worried fellow returned with his wife.
"Take off your clothes, Mrs. Thomas," the medic said. "Now turn all the way around. Lie down please. Uh-huh, I see. Ok, you may put your clothes back on."
The doctor took the husband aside. "You're in perfect health," he said. "Your wife didn't give me an erection either."

■ CONFESSION

An old man goes to a church, and is making a confession:
Man: Father, I am 75 years old. I have been married for 50 years. All these years I had been faithful to my wife, but yesterday I was intimate with an 18 year old.
Father: When was the last time you made a confession?
Man: I never have, I am Jewish.
Father: Then why are telling me all this?
Man: I am telling everybody ...

■ TIMBER

A lady from California purchased a piece of timber land in Oregon. There was a large tree on one of the highest points in the tract. She wanted to get a good view of her land so she started to climb the big tree. As she neared the top,she encountered a spotted owl that attacked her. In her haste to escape, the lady slid down the tree to the ground and got many splinters in her private parts. In considerable pain, she hurried to the nearest doctor.
He listened to her story then told her to go into the examining room and he would see if he could help her. She sat and waited for three hours before the doctor reappeared.
The angry lady demanded " What took you so long?" and he replied "Well, I had to get permits from the Environmental Protection Agency, the Forest Service, and the Bureau of Land Management before I could remove old-growth timber from a recreational area."

WEATHER WOMEN

This week for a change THAB is aimed more at the ladies, which doesn't mean that you guys are banned from the page. Anything that helps you to get in touch with your feminine side has to be good.

So you know the feeling - yet another evening of non stop sport on TV. With BBC 1 showing over 11 hours coverage of the Commonwealth Games in just one Saturday, a switch to a different channel and a decent movie was in order. Then the neighbours fire up the BarB and begin to party loudly. Which on an evening of normal British weather wouldn't be a problem because all the windows would be closed.

Except that the windows were flung wide open, because summer has arrived with a vengeance, and the good people of Hull are wilting. At least for the time being. By the time you read this of course the heatwave could well be over. But for now even the somewhat darker skinned assistant in my local Off Licence is complaining about the high humidity. 'You don't get this in Spain or Portugal you know.' I doubt he has ever been to Thailand, because in reality we have had several days of a very acceptable 25 degrees or so, with considerably lower humidity than on an average day in Bangkok.

Brits of course are famed for moaning about the weather, and singularly ill equipped to cope with its' extremities. On a recent evening out with 'the girls' a little rain was forecast, along with 20 something degrees. In Thailand that would mean going out wearing sandals and perhaps toting an umbrella. After all our feet are waterproof, but hair requires a little protection for a night out.

To my surprise however the rest of the girls were kitted out in boots or full shoes. Some - believe it or not - even wore socks!

I realise that a lot of male expats do feel the need to wear shoes and socks sometimes. It's often a requirement of either smart dress or the golf course. And I do admire expat women who can tolerate high heels and even sometimes hosiery. But hosiery and full shoes were certainly top of my list of the things that, as an expat, I didn't miss about England.

Second on the list was probably the endless complaints about the weather.

Along with summer in the UK come all the fetes and festivals, and last week an Armed Forces Veterans Day was held in one of Hulls' public parks. Unfortunately one of the highlights of the day had to be abandoned, when it was discovered that it was impossible to land a large army helicopter on the site without the down draft blowing over a couple of marquees and a Porta Loo. Fortunately no-one was using the Porta Loo at the time, but it does show that these kinds of incidents do not, contrary to popular belief, only happen in Thailand.

A food delicacy provides our word of the week. 'Teacake' requires no explanation for native Brits, but our American, Australian and other non Brit friends may have puzzled over those dancing teacakes in the opening ceremony of the Commonwealth Games. So by way of clarification, the dancing teacakes actually represented Tunnocks chocolate covered marshmallow filled confections with a biscuit base. (Other brands are available south of the border.)

They are not to be confused with the teacakes which we toast, and which are more like a soft bagel but containing raisins instead of a hole.

The Scots of course are also famous for deep fried Mars bars, and could well be developing deep fried Tunnocks as we speak.

1. Register and log in to the official Premier League game at fantasy.premierleague.com;
2. Set up your team (name, details, pick an initial squad - this can be changed as many times as you want before the game starts);
3. Go to the AWOL website (awolonline.net) and click on 'Fantasy Football - Click To Play' which will automatically add your team to the AWOL Challenge;
4. Have fun playing against the growing number of budding Fergies!

There are extensive rules and help on the official site and any new managers would be well advised to read through them.

Every week we will print a table of the leading managers in the AWOL Challenge.

PREMIER LEAGUE PREDICTOR

AWOL has set up a new football prediction game for the English Premier League; to play you need to be registered and logged in to the AWOL website at www.awolonline.net. You will find a link to the game on that page as well.

Each week we will print a table showing the leading players as we do with the Fantasy League.

CHELSEA PENSIONER

DROGBA RETURNS TO CHELSEA TO DIE

■ LONDON, ENGLAND

STRIKER Didier Drogba is dragging himself back to Stamford Bridge to end his days, the club has confirmed.

The player, who enjoyed his glory years at Chelsea, has somehow sensed his own forthcoming demise and is limping thousands of miles to die in the place that loved him best.

Sport scientist Denys Finch Hatton said: "It's an extraordinary natural phenomenon.

"These creatures, magnificent in their prime, use some rudimentary homing instinct to find their way through a baffling maze of contracts to live out their last moments showered with applause from fans.

"It's almost as if they're intelligent."

Other footballers who have made the same journey include Henrik Larsson, whose bones lie in the 30 yard box at Helsingborg and still contribute the occasional assist.

Drogba, who is currently leading a herd of international footballers across the Asian steppes, is expected to arrive for Chelsea's first game of the season.

He will walk slowly onto the pitch, commit a last two-footed career-threatening tackle, then die when an opposing player retaliates to win his team one final penalty.

Jose Mourinho said: "It will be a majestic sight.

"Unlike Frank Lampard, who has travelled to New York to live out his final days in complete anonymity and will die there, alone and forgotten, in a back alley."
