SCHOOL REPORT

INTERNATIONAL SCHOOL OPENING IN 2015

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

The presentation held this week at the Intercontinental Resort to showcase and discuss the Hua Hin International School was well attended and informative, with around one hundred interested parties there. Of the five directors behind the project, four were in attendance, and the meeting was presented by one of them, Mr Graham Sullivan. The group are behind the series of St Andrews schools in Bangkok and other areas of Thailand, although they were at pains to point out that while the new school will be built and operated using all their previous experience, it will not be a St Andrews school due to an agreement with another partner in the existing schools.

The plan they outlined is to open the new school in August 2015 for children up to age ten/eleven initially (Early Years and Primary), although if there are enough children aged eleven and above wanting to enrol, the second phase (Secondary/Middle School) will be pushed forward to also open at the same time. The location of the new school is opposite the Black Mountain Water Park. Ballpark fees have been released, which will be in the region of 150,000 baht per term, with three terms per year.

The presentation stressed the high quality of both the education that will be available as well as the facilities and learning environment, to the same high standard as has been achieved at the well known Bangkok Patana School.

For more information on the school, please visit their website at huahinschool.com, which also has links so you can contact them directly, as well as an enrolment and mailing list to keep abreast of developments.

■ A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... Coppers (cops), Pigs, The Fuzz
Slang terms for police

Etymology is rarely an exact science. Words or phrases spring up, become popular, and eventually may find their way into print. The process takes time, and it's usually difficult or impossible to track backwards to discover where a particular word or phrase arose.

Let's start with cop. Cop the noun is almost certainly a shortening of copper, which in turn derives from cop the verb. The London police were called bobbies, after Sir Robert Peel who advocated the creation of the Metropolitan Police Force in 1828. Copper as slang for policeman is first found in print in 1846, according to the Oxford English Dictionary. The most likely explanation is that it comes from the verb "to cop" meaning to seize, capture, or snatch, dating from just over a century earlier (1704).

The derivation of the verb is unclear. Most authorities trace it to the French caper and before that to the Latin capere, to seize, take. Other English words derived from capere include capture. Thus, a copper is one who seizes. An alternative theory is that to cop comes from the Dutch kapen, meaning to take or to steal.

As with many words, there are several stories floating around positing various origins, almost certainly false. The notion that cop is an acronym for "Constable On Patrol" is nonsense. Similarly, the word did not arise because police uniforms in New York (or London or wherever) had copper buttons, copper badges, or anything of the sort.

The origin of "fuzz" is uncertain. The expression arose in America in the late 1920s and early 1930s, probably in the criminal underworld. It never quite replaced cop. Evan Morris, The Word Detective, says:

Where in the world are you hearing people refer to the police as "fuzz"? . . . I have never heard a real person use it, unless you want to count Jack Webb on the old "Dragnet." When I was growing up in the 1960s, we called police officers many things, but mostly we just called them "cops" and we never, ever, called them "the fuzz." As a matter of fact, anybody calling the cops "the fuzz" would have been instantly suspected of being a cop. It would have been a faux pas right up there with ironing your blue jeans.

There are several theories about the origin of "fuzz":

One suggests that "fuzz" was derived from "fuss," meaning that the cops were "fussy" over trifles. Another is that it is a mispronunciation or mishearing of the warning "Feds!" (Federal agents). This seems unlikely.

Etymologist Eric Partridge wonders if "fuzz" might have come from the beards of early police officers. This also seems improbable.

Evan Morris suggests the word "arose as a term of contempt for police based on the use of 'fuzz' or 'fuzzy' in other items of derogatory criminal slang of the period. To be 'fuzzy' was to be unmanly, incompetent and soft. How better to insult the police, after all, than to mock them as ineffectual?" That explanation seems as good as any, and better than most.

If you thought the term pig arose in the 1960s, you're in for a surprise. The OED cites an 1811 reference to a "pig" as a Bow Street Runner--the early police force, named after the location of their headquarters, before Sir Robert Peel and the Metropolitan Police Force (see above.) Before that, the term "pig" had been used as early as the mid-1500s to refer to a person who is heartily disliked.

The usage was probably confined to the criminal classes until the 1960s, when it was taken up by protestors. False explanations for the term involve the gas masks worn by the riot police in that era, or the pigs in charge of George Orwell's Animal Farm.

While police officers usually don't mind being called "cops," they aren't usually fond of the term "pig." A policeman's lot is not an 'appy one.

WEIRD NEWS

■ SCOTLAND Scot saves £200 on food, drink and taxis with fake 'ginger discount card'

A cheeky redhead has been using a fake 'ginger discount card' in shops, bars and taxis across Aberdeen – and he's saved £200 doing so.

Richard Macrae was given the laminated card as a gift for his 30th birthday as a joke by a friend. To his surprise, however, amused shopkeepers and bar staff have been agreeing to take money off his purchases – and Richard's even built up a reputation.

'It comes out with me more than my bank card. My reputation precedes me: once I was asked by a security guard if I was the 'ginger discount guy',' he told The Scotsman. 'I've saved a couple of hundred pounds maybe, with money off booze, taxis, food and club entries. Over four years it fairly builds up.'

A barman at one of Richard's favourite pubs said Richard was 'a good laugh' and said he thought the card was 'brilliant'. 'I gave him the same discount that we would for students,' revealed the Jamjar Pub's Rik Gillespie.

Richard, a comic book illustrator, says that people have been asking him where they can get similar discount cards. 'Plenty of folk ask about getting one,' he said. 'It's not even just ginger people. Anyone who's seen it work always asks for one – beard discount cards, the list goes on and on.'

One employee at Vue cinema said he thought Richard was 'a chancer' – but admitted he still gave him a discount.

■ USA Man 'compelled to break into homes and take hot showers'

It wasn't the jewellery or high-tech goods he was after, but rather the hot water. A man allegedly broke into a home in Lexington, Kentucky, US, to use the shower.

Ryan Carpenter, 32, was caught in the house by the homeowner, according to local reports. Carpenter allegedly broke into the home via a window.

Documents said Carpenter told police he has mental problems which makes him want to break into homes to take hot showers after his hot water runs out.

He was charged with burglary.

■ CANADA The Canadian town of Vulcan is trying to crowdfund a USS Enterprise. Well, sort of Ever wished Star Trek's famous USS Enterprise was actually real? Well it could happen if this Canadian town ever had its way – not to mention a whole lot of cash.

The appropriately-named Vulcan, in Alberta – population 1,836 – has launched a campaign to build a real, actual, fully-functioning USS Enterprise, in keeping with their annual Star Trek celebration known as Spock Days.

And they've even taken to crowdfunding via Indiegogo to apparently achieve their dream – at a cost of just $1.1 trillion (around £550 billion)

The campaign claims it is initially seeking $2bn for the chance to 'fund important research into the creation, and development, of warp-drive technology.'

'Upon reaching our initial funding goal we will construct a research centre in Vulcan that will become a repository for everything we, as a species, know about faster-than-light travel, gravity control and more,' the fundraisers add.

All sound too good to be true? Well that's probably because it is – since the Indiegogo fund has been revealed to be nothing more than a clever bit of marketing to attract tourism to what is described as 'the Star Trek capital of Canada'.

However, as the site points out: 'The campaign is meant to be filled with fun, fantasy and generate discussion and attention. Just imagine if we really COULD build the Enterprise!'

Clearly some people do seem keen to see a real version of the craft, since the venture has so far raised over $2,000 (£1,100) – all of which, the tourist board assures us, will be returned to those who donated it.

And there we were getting all excited too…

THERE'S A CURRY IN YOUR FUTURE AT S&S

Soi 94 S & S
INDIAN RESTAURANT
Curries from only 75 baht
Eat in or Takeaway 081 455 5298

CAPRICORN Dec 22 - Jan 19
You're spending less time considering your future these days, which, all things considered, is only appropriate.

AQUARIUS Jan 20 – Feb 18
Sometimes you have to do things you don't want to do. Push your grandmother in front of a bus this week.

PISCES Feb 19 – Mar 20
Time and space are both illusions, making it even more frustrating that you're always in the wrong place at the wrong time.

ARIES Mar 21 – Apr 20
You're starting to think about settling down, finding a nice little place, starting a family, maybe eventually even getting some clothes.

TAURUS Apr 21 – May 21
Don't worry: There's absolutely nothing wrong with your goals, as long as you realize they're unrealistic and you can never actually achieve them.

GEMINI May 22 – June 21
Rescue personnel will stretch the English language, the human voice, and the average person's constitution to unprecedented limits while trying to describe the horrible sounds you'll make next week.

CANCER Jun 22 – Jul 22
This is a good month to take long trips, as long as you travel in a slow, ground-based vehicle without all that much fuel in it.

LEO Jul 23 – Aug 22
The habit is certainly awkward for your friends and family members, but this would actually be a bad time to discontinue your practice of carrying a battle-ax to church.

VIRGO Aug 23 – Sep 22
The constellation Virgo has seen you gazing at her in silent supplication, and she has this message for you: Her eyes are up here.

LIBRA Sep 23 – Oct 23
You'll be astounded to learn this week that, in certain less-than-legitimate circumstances, monkeys do come in barrels, but they are no fun whatsoever.

SCORPIO Oct 24 – Nov 21
You've succeeded in breeding pandas in captivity, but the hard part will be getting them to breed with each other.

SAGITTARIUS Nov 22 – Dec 21
You always wanted to die peacefully at home in your sleep, but look at it this way: You'll be at home, all right, and the flames will spread so fast you'll only be awake for a few seconds.

■ WATCHES AND CLOCKS

A Jewish couple wanted to have their son circumcised but couldn't afford to go to the local Rabbi. Then a friend suggested that they could get it done cheaply by a Rabbi at 146 Edgware Road.

When they arrived at the address they found the shop but the window was filled with watches and clocks. Thinking they had the wrong address they telephoned the friend who insisted the address was correct. So they went into the shop and found that it was clinic specializing in circumcisions.

"Why do you have all the watches and clocks in the window" the father asked the Rabbi who replied, "What do you expect me to put in the window?"

■ LEAVING EARLY

A brunette, a redhead and a blonde all work in the same office with the same female boss. Every day, they noticed the boss left work early.

One day, the girls decided that when the boss left, they'd leave right behind her. After all, she never called or came back, so how was she to know?

The brunette was thrilled to be home early. She did a little gardening and went to bed early.

The redhead was elated to be able to get in a quick workout at her spa before meeting a dinner date.

The blonde was happy, happy, happy to be home, but when she got to her bedroom she heard a muffled noise from inside. Slowly, quietly, she cracked open the door and was mortified to see her husband in bed with HER BOSS!!! Ever so gently, she closed the door and crept out of her house.

The next day, during their coffee break, the brunette and redhead mentioned leaving early again, and asked the blonde if she was with them. "NO WAY," she exclaimed. "I almost got caught yesterday!"

■ THE POPE

The Pope just finished a tour of the East Coast and was taking a limousine to the airport.

Since he'd never driven a limo, he asked the chauffeur if he could drive for a while. The reluctant chauffeur pulled over along the roadside, climbed into the back of the limo, and the Pope took the wheel. The Pope then merged onto the highway and accelerated to over 90 mph to see what the limo could do.

Suddenly, the Pope noticed the blue light of the State Patrol in his side mirror, so he pulled over. The trooper approached the limo, peered in through the windows, then said, "Just a moment please, I need to call in."

The trooper called in and explained to the chief that he had a very important person pulled over for speeding.

"How do I handle this, chief?" asked the trooper.

"Is it the Governor?" questioned the chief.

"No! This guy is even more important!"

"Is it the President?" asked the chief.

"No! Even more important!"

"Well, who the heck is it?" screamed the chief.

"I don't know, sir," replied the trooper, "but he's got the Pope as his chauffeur."

■ TALKING PROPER, LIKE....

There once was a time when all BBC broadcasters spoke with that clipped upper crust British accent which we associate with Eton and the Queen.

Thankfully those days are long gone, and regional accents are now perfectly acceptable. But unfortunately standards have slipped a few more notches, and although we may feel more comfortable with modern BBC English, some of their presenters seem distinctly uncomfortable with the pronunciation and delivery of it. Granted you might not notice any glaring mistakes on BBC World. Presumably only the cream of the crop make it to the dizzy heights of worldwide TV broadcasting. But most days I tune in to my local BBC radio station as the only reliable source of information about what's on in my area.

As well as that much needed information, (our local rag the Hull Daily Mail being as much use as a chocolate fireguard) there is the added bonus of hearing rookie newsreaders making the kind of mistakes which make you either laugh out loud or scream at the radio.

Sports commentators especially have always had a tricky job, with football matches a particular challenge, giving rise to games of two halves and 'they think it's all overs', and it's a football match or two which provide our first recent broadcasting error. But first a little background to the event is needed in order to set the scene.

Regular readers may recall that Hull City FC finally made it to a Wembley Cup Final earlier this year. OK - so they lost - but as a result of their league status were entered into the Europa League, which began with an away match to Lokeren in Belgium last month.

On leaving the Lokeren game Hull supporters were escorted by police past a bar known to be used by local football hooligans, and were attacked. Bottles thrown - you know the kind of thing.

Needless to say there was much concern about the return match in Hull the following week, and with some 1,400 Lokeren fans due to arrive here all the stops were pulled out to ensure that our visitors had a good time and were kept occupied and safe. Reporting on preparations for the return game one local BBC radio newsreader announced that 'a number of (Hull) fans were injured in the first legover in Lokeren last week.'.

The unfortunate woman was clearly reading from a script, and went uncorrected, uttering the same 'legover' word in her next live broadcast. Maybe a typo in her script had omitted the space between 'leg' and 'over', but it's easy to conclude that she had been set up. Either way she was obviously reading parrot fashion without thinking about meaning.

Then there are the newsreaders who dither and stumble over words. Even local place names are mispronounced, with one unfortunate soul making three attempts at a well known street name. Can't they read for heavens sake? But sometimes mistakes can make a mundane news item a bit more colourful, as was the case with a report on the marriage of Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie, who 'managed to avoid the glaze of the papers'. A first for the couple in more ways than one.

By the way - in case you are wondering how Hull City FC fared in the Europa League, it's something we would rather not talk about.

Word of the week is 'contumely' - which sounds like an adjective and means insolent or insulting language or treatment. Rudeness or contempt. The word is in fact used as a noun, as in 'Fred should not be treated contumely'.

DAVID MOYES HOSPITALISED FOLLOWING PROLONGED LAUGHING FIT

■ GLASGOW, SCOTLAND

Former Manchester United Scotsman, David Moyes, is reportedly under intensive care in a Glasgow hospital after a prolonged fit of laughing left his life in serious danger.

Glasgow Royal Infirmary confirmed a 51-year-old man was admitted at around 10pm on Saturday evening suffering with breathing complications.

"We received an emergency call at around 9.30pm reporting a man rolling around in convulsions of laughter which were preventing him from breathing properly," a hospital source told us.

"A witness stated that the symptoms had started at approximately Saturday afternoon last week and had gotten progressively worse until reaching a critical point last night."

"We understand the man had been undertaking his usual routine of sitting down to watch the televised football coverage, and at this stage we believe this to be the cause of the debilitating fits of laughter."

A neighbour of Moyes, said he saw the unemployed manager receiving CPR in the front lawn of his garden, having earlier been seen skipping around it in a what appeared to be a home-made Burnley home kit. He added that the previous Tuesday he had also been seen laughing uncontrollably while wearing an MK Dons kit, and they had been keeping an eye on him since.

The neighbour told us, "He was singing 'We're going Dutch, We're going Dutch,' to the tune of 'On the Ball' by Ant and Dec."

"It was quite a sight."

A family friend of Moyes claimed he was hopeful of a return to football in the near future, eyeing a potential vacancy in the North-West region of England.

"There's a rumour the Man United mascot is being relieved of his duties for failing to inspire."

"David is confident his current demeanor brings a level of Bonhomie not seen at Old Trafford for quite some time."

"Watch this space."
