WORK IN PROGRESS

ROADWORKS CAUSE ACCIDENTS, CONFUSION AND PROTESTS

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

The ongoing attempts by the local authorities to try and fix Hua Hin's traffic problems have sparked protests and widespread criticism from both Thai and foreign residents in recent weeks, with a particular focus on the wide divider that has been constructed outside the Selasian School next to Market Village.

The stretch of Phetkasem Road running from Soi 35 by Klai Kang Won Palace south beyond the flyover has been an increasing traffic problem since Market Village was first built, as clearly no or inadequate plans were made to cope with the traffic the shopping mall would generate, nor it seems for the rapid growth of the town in general. There is, it seems, now a plan, but clearly while the extensive work is being carried out, it is both difficult to see how it will improve traffic flow as well as creating potential for more accidents.

With work continuing on the Canal Road, the Soi 112 area and long stretches of Phetkasem Road, the short term problems are mainly safety concerns, and the lack of adequate warning signs, cones and lighting, at night in particular, are key factors that need addressing.

While the protests are understandable, we believe it would not be fair to judge the effectiveness or wisdom of the work until it is complete, but we do believe that greater attention needs to be made to reducing confusion and accident risk while the work is ongoing, whether that requires more traffic police, temporary traffic lights or simply better signage and lighting in the areas concerned. We must also hope that the work is complete by the time the giant Bluport Mall near Soi 102 and the water park near Soi 112 are finished, as these will generate more traffic.

■ A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... The whole kit and caboodle

A collection of things.

The words kit and caboodle have rather similar meanings.

A kit - is set of objects, as in a toolkit, or what a soldier would put in his kit-bag.

A caboodle (or boodle) - is an archaic term meaning group or collection, usually of people.

There are several phrases similar to the whole kit and caboodle, which is first recorded in that form in 1884. Most of them are of US origin and all the early citations are American. Caboodle was never in common use outside the USA and now has died out everywhere, apart from its use in this phrase.

- The whole kit - the whole of a soldier's necessaries, the contents of his knapsack. From Grose's Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue, 1785.

- The whole kit and boodle

Although this citation is slightly later than that of the final 'whole kit and caboodle', it's worth including as it gives a 19th-century version of the meaning of the term. It may still be a step along the way - either unrecorded before 1888 or recorded in an, as yet, undiscovered work. This piece, titled 'The Origin of Boodle', is from The Dunkirk Observer-Journal, New York, September 1888:

"It is probably derived from the Old-English word bottel, a bunch or a bundle, as a bottel of straw. "The whole kit and boodle of them" is a New England expression in common use, and the word in this sense means the whole lot. Latterly, boodle has come to be somewhat synonymous with the word pile, the term in use at the gaming table, and signifying a quantity of money. In the gaming sense, when a man has "lost his boodle", he has lost his pile or whole lot of money, whatever amount he happened to have with him."

- The whole kit and boiling (or bilin')

Sinclair Lewis, in 'Main Street', 1920:

"...and some of these college professors are just about as bad, the whole kit and bilin' of 'em are nothing in God's world but socialism in disguise!"

- The whole (or whool) boodle

From J. Neal's, 'Down-Easters', 1833:

"I know a feller 'twould whip the whool boodle of 'em an' give 'em six."

From Bangor Daily Whig And Courier, Maine, 1839:

"A whole squad have got to permit to see you.
Who are they?
I don't know, a whole boodle of them."

- The whole caboodle

From the Ohio State Journal, 1848:

"The whole caboodle will act upon the recommendation of the Ohio Sun."

Which brings us finally to the whole kit and caboodle

From the Syracuse Sunday Standard, New York, Nov, 1884:

"More audiences have been disappointed by him and by the whole kit-and-caboodle of his rivals."

It is most likely that these phrases were in use simultaneously and that there isn't a clear parentage of one to another. 'Kit and caboodle' had the advantage of the alliterative 'k' sound and that's doubtless why it has outlasted the others, which are now all fallen out of use. What we can't confirm is that the word caboodle migrated from boodle in order to sound better when matched with kit. It is possible that that's what happened, but the dates of the known citations don't support it. Whole kit and caboodle, (1884) is recorded before whole kit and boodle, (1888) and whole caboodle comes well before both, in 1848. Perhaps that's just the inadequacy of either records or research and that citations with the appropriate dates will emerge later.

deVere GROUP

Every week in this article Helen Couldrey, a financial consultant with the deVere Group, and also a qualified English lawyer, will give you tips and ideas of how to take advantage financially of being an expat. Helen has clients in Bangkok, Hua Hin and Cha-Am who she helps to maximise the financial benefits of living overseas.

THE LATTE FACTOR

We all make financial decisions everyday… some big, some small, and some just verging on the ridiculous! (Yes, that inflatable pool speaker system….what were you thinking!)

Regardless of what financial decisions we make, one of the most important things to consider is the actual thought process behind that decision. Was there any thought process at all, or was that item purchased by just going through the motions? Which leads me onto the key message of this week's article: that habitual, unconscious spending can be financially dangerous… very dangerous indeed. This type of unchecked spending is often referred to as 'The Latte Factor'.

When I used to live in London my morning rituals were as follows: buy the paper (£1), jump on the tube (£5), buy a café latte (£2), buy some breakfast (£2). That's a stonking £10 before I've even said good morning to my first colleague… A quick £6 glass of wine after work, another £5 to get home…. Over the course of the working year that's more than £5,000 with everything combined, which no doubt could be much better spent.

Habitual, Unconscious Spending Can Be Dangerous.

When you think of the money we waste on non-essential, habitual purchases the mind boggles. However, putting aside just a few hundred Baht or a few dollars every day rather than splurging it on non-essentials such as drinks, magazines, snacks etc. can make a huge difference between getting richer and staying financially static.

You can very simply remedy this needless spending by sitting down and reviewing your financial decisions on a regular basis. You don't have to change your lifestyle completely or cut out every last little luxury but thinking strategically about where your money goes will help you prevent frivolous or unnecessary purchases. Just think; short term sacrifice, long term gain.

Reviewing Investment Spending

And it's not just the non-essential physical items that we sometimes flit our money away on. Many are also guilty of flitting their money away each month by not reviewing the charging structures surrounding investments. Having investments of any type usually incurs charges but are you sure that the structures you already have in place are the most cost effective? If not then you may be wasting some of your hard earned cash by not exploring other investment options. For anyone who has investments, giving them a health check every so often is never a bad idea.

CAPRICORN Dec 22 - Jan 19
While the ideal gas law is certainly important, your attempt to apply it to every situation in your life can only lead to disaster.

AQUARIUS Jan 20 – Feb 18
Former Rams quarterback Norm Van Brocklin will appear to you in a dream and explain to you at embarrassing length why you're not quite good enough for Bart Starr to appear in your dreams.

PISCES Feb 19 – Mar 20
All your hard work will finally pay off this week, but not, of course, for you.

ARIES Mar 21 – Apr 20
You'll become embroiled in a steamy office romance next week, which would be better if you weren't the trustee in charge of bringing the warden his meals.

TAURUS Apr 21 – May 21
It's going to be hectic and stressful for the next few days, but it'll all be worth it by Friday when the pope excommunicates you for the coolest reason ever.

GEMINI May 22 – June 21
You're a bit sad that you never get invited to cool parties, but you'll be downright angry when you hear about the awesome ones they hold at your place the second you leave every day.

CANCER Jun 22 – Jul 22
Remember, a bend in the road isn't the end of the road. While we're on the subject, the circular device on the dashboard can be used to turn your car.

LEO Jul 23 – Aug 22
Next week's horrifying accident inspires an outcry for more stringent safety standards in coal-fueled power plants until everyone realizes it was actually just all your fault.

VIRGO Aug 23 – Sep 22
Your whole life is thrown into a terrible new perspective when you learn that Enter The Dragon is not intended to be a romantic comedy.

LIBRA Sep 23 – Oct 23
Your troubles will all be over next week, and what's even better, it all happens so fast that investigators will agree you probably didn't feel a thing.

SCORPIO Oct 24 – Nov 21
You'll get a free beverage refill when ordering a large-sized French fries, but really that's going to be about it for you this week.

SAGITTARIUS Nov 22 – Dec 21
You should avoid making any financial decisions next week, as the pain you'll be in from all the third-degree flash burns will probably affect your judgment.

■ SCOTTISH INDEPENDENCE

Thai Immigration have advised that in the event of a breakup of the Union, Scottish nationals holding British passports will have one week to exit Thailand to return to Scotland and obtain a Scottish passport with a new Thai visa

In a related story, the Scottish Passport Office have advised that they expect to be inundated with passport applications so you should allow 3 months to receive your new Scottish passport.

In a further story, the Scottish Inland Revenue have said that non resident Scots remaining in Scotland for more than one month in any calendar year will be liable to tax on all their savings, properties and pensions.

And finally, legislation passing through the Houses of Parliament to ban the wearing of burkhas in public in England will be modified to ban the wearing of kilts too.

If Scotland gets independence what will the Duke of Edinburgh be called? "The Prince formally known as"?

Of course, the real fear for Alex Salmond is that if he takes a battering in the referendum on the 18th then the Scots will probably eat him...

Sending David Cameron, Nick Clegg and Ed Miliband to convince Scotland to vote no in the referendum is a bit like asking Oscar Pistorius to kick a door down with his blades on...

Finally, something the UK has learned from their special relationship with America.

If Scotland goes independent they can just invade them and take the oil.

■ PRAYER ROOMS

I never understood why airports had prayer rooms.

Then I found out I'd be flying with Malaysia Airlines on September 11th.

■ TERROR ALERT

ISIS have apparently threatened Christmas attacks in the U.K.

Foreign Secretary William Hague immediately sprang into action, telling the terrorists, "You can't call them Christmas attacks. You have to call them Holiday attacks."

■ BORIS JOHNSON

My wife told me that she would leave the UK for good if Boris Johnson were ever to become Prime Minister.

I start my new job as head of his campaign team tomorrow.

■ NUDE CELEBRITIES

The man who released nude photos of celebrities from the cloud last week has admittied he's on the run from the authorities.

But apparently he's been given asylum by a shadowy group ...

known only as "Blokes".

JACOBITE TIPPING

In an interesting diversion from the Scottish referendum debates, the Scottish Jacobite Society has announced that it would like to see Scotlands' border extended 174 miles south.

Founded in 1748, two years after the defeat of Jacobite Bonnie Prince Charlie at the Battle of Culloden, the Society was a secret one which remained loyal to the Prince. Now, with its' cloak of secrecy lifted, it wants to take in part of Yorkshire far enough south to include the village of Flamborough.

Flamborough is an area of great natural beauty. Home to many kinds of seabirds, its' cliffs stick out into the North Sea as a little pointy bit on the map between the resorts of Scarborough to the north, and Bridlington to the south, to form Flamborough Head.

The Scottish Jacobite Society claims that moving the boundary would enable people from west and south Yorkshire to make day trips to Scotland, thus saving a lot of journey time.

And if that sounds slightly crazy, the reaction of one or two Flamborough residents should leave you in no doubt at all about the state of a nation which some Scots want to devolve themselves from.

A local radio reporter was despatched to Flamborough to ask villagers what they thought of becoming part of Scotland. The reporter found a group of elderly residents who were waiting for a bus, and on being asked how she felt about being part of Scotland one dear lady said that the weather would be worse.

Personally I would oppose the plan for a more sensible reason. I wouldn't want to have the hassle of border controls just to visit Scarborough for a day.

Meanwhile last weekend Hull folk took to the streets for the cities' annual Freedom Festival, which commemorates the work of Hull lad William Wilberforce, who was instrumental in achieving the abolition of slavery way back when.

As with any large festival of music and performing arts there are three important needs to be met - sufficient beer, public transport, and toilets. Some of which have been a bit lacking in previous years. But again local radio was on the ball, with one presenter making frequent pleas for 'beer, buses and bogs' in the run up to the three day event.

Despite the further drop in BBC standards his pleas seemed to work. There's really nothing quite like the sight of rows of Portaloos along cobbled streets awash with rain and beer on a sodden Saturday night in Hull.

Almost as common in these parts is the sight of piles of horse 'manure' for want of a better word, which regularly appear on grassed areas and parkland. This nation wide problem has given rise to a new word, which probably isn't even in your dictionary yet.

'Fly-grazing' is the practice of tethering horses on private property. A bit like 'fly-tipping', but with an end product which is at least bio-degradable.

FOOTBALL AGENTS RETURN TO HIBERNATION

■ ENGLAND

AFTER a summer of frenzied activity, football agents have returned to their slumber on huge piles of money.

Immediately after the transfer window closed, the agents spread their black leathery wings and took flight to warmer climes where they will remain in their underground cave homes until January.

Agent-watcher Tom Booker said: "It's quite amazing to observe the migration patterns of the agent.

"As soon as the football season ends, the flock arrives. For several weeks they will circle big-name players and clubs excitedly with their distinctive call of 'Harry Redknapp, Harry Redknapp'.

"Then, as soon as they have accumulated a sufficiently large heap of money to serve as bedding for their huge reptilian bodies, they head for the Caribbean before they are forced to actually watch a game of football.

"Between now and January they will snooze atop piles of crisp twenties. If they're woken out of season, they'll force you to take Niko Kranjcar or Danny Gabbidon on loan."

This coming January is expected to be a boom for the lascivious agents, as well as there being a shift from their traditional return to London, with many of them expected to choose Manchester for their return to action; some are even speculating that their mating call will alter to 'Van Gaal, Van Gaal' in the belief that their nests will be bountifully filled.

Despite agents being widely regarded as a pest, their mating ritual of buying champagne for tables of promiscuous women in vile city clubs remains extremely effective.
