What's happening, and might be happening, in and around Hua Hin

SINKING FEELING

THE INEVITABLE ANNUAL HEAVY RAIN LEADS TO THE INEVITABLE ANNUAL FLOODING

HUA HIN, THAILAND

While parts of Hua Hin getting flooded in the last couple of weeks is newsworthy, and particularly for those living in, or planning to move to, the affected areas, given the rainfall that is normally experienced and has been subsequently falling, it should not really come as anything of a surprise, much like the 'fallen leaves on the tracks' that always used to be trotted out by the railway operators during Autumn in the UK as a reason for train delays and disruption.

Our sympathy goes out to those who have been flooded out of their homes, but in the worst affected area every year, around Soi 102, the residents and businesses there could maybe point to a specific problem that has exacerbated or even been the actual cause of this year's bad flooding, namely the drainage system in place.

Anyone who has gone up Soi 102 in the last month or two may well have noticed the giant hole that has appeared opposite Bobby's Bar, and alongside a new development of shop/townhouses, and it seems as if the construction of these has played some part in the drainage not working as well as it could, when an existing drainage ditch was filled in during construction. As it stands remedial work is being attempted, with a large concrete tank being built at the site of the hole, as well as storm drains leading to it, and other efforts being made further up the street to improve things. Few drainage solutions can cope fully with the quantities of water involved, and all they can do is attempt to disperse it as quickly as possible, often not helped by high tides preventing the water escaping. Let us hope that the current work can resolve the problem for good.

Poppy Collection boxes Remembrance 2014

It is particularly poignant this year as 2014 marks the 70th Anniversary of the disastrous Operation Market Garden which attempted to secure the Rhine bridges at Arnhrm and Nijmegen between 17 and 25th September 1944. An estimated 17,000 casualtieswere reported from mainly British and US forces, the majority from airborne units of 1st Airborne Division (British) and 101st Airborne Division (USA).

■ A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... Murphy's Law

The so-called law is usually expressed as 'If anything can go wrong, it will'.

Murphy's Law parallels two other common terms for what is essentially the same pessimistic idea - Sod's Law and Finagle's Law. Of these three, Murphy's Law is by far the more commonly used. The notion that 'if anything can go wrong, it will' is the simplest version of a notion that has been expressed in numerous ways. Many of these pre-date 'Murphy':

- Once a job is botched, any attempts to fix it make it worse.
- Bread always falls buttered side down.
- Whatever can go wrong will go wrong, and at the worst possible time, in the worst possible way.

The list of names for the supposed phenomenon is also arbitrarily long and, as well as the above 'laws', includes: The Fourth Law of Thermodynamics; Newton's Fourth Law of Motion; The Inverse Midas Touch, etc, etc.

In the use of Murphy, Sod and Finagle and also the less common Reilly's Law, the coiners of these names seem to have settled on a theme which calls on perceived negative allusions to the Irish. There is, in fact, nothing to link any of those names to anyone Irish, but they certainly sound as though there could be.

In reality, Murphy is commonly thought to be Captain Edward A. Murphy, an American aerospace engineer, who performed studies on deceleration for the U.S. Air Force in 1949. During the experiments, in which he had a less than cordial relationship with other members of the research team, he noted that if things could be done wrongly, they would be. In subsequent interviews, various team members have stated that they referred to the notion as 'Murphy's Law'. The expression wasn't put into print by them at the time though and the earliest citation of it is in Anne Roe's book The Making of a Scientist, 1952:

"There were a number of particularly delightful incidents. There is, for example, the physicist who introduced me to one of my favorite 'laws,' which he described as 'Murphy's law or the fourth law of thermodynamics' (actually there were only three last I heard) which states: 'If anything can go wrong it will.'"

Other sources have questioned that the Murphy in the name was an actual person. In his memoire Into Orbit, 1962, John Glenn states that:

"We blamed human errors like this on what aviation engineers call 'Murphy's Law'. 'Murphy' was a fictitious character who appeared in a series of educational cartoons put out by the U.S. Navy... Murphy was a careless, all-thumbs mechanic who was prone to make such mistakes as installing a propeller backwards."

The case for Edward A. Murphy being the source is fairly strong, but perhaps not quite 'beyond all reasonable doubt'.

Sod and Finagle certainly weren't real people. Sod's Law isn't known until later and the first example of it that I can find is from The New Statesman, October 1970:

"Sod's Law... is the force in nature which causes it to rain mostly at weekends, which makes you get flu when you are on holiday, and which makes the phone ring just as you've got into the bath."

This is a stronger variant of Murphy's Law, using the expletive 'sod' for accentuation. The term is, of course, short for 'sodomite', although the word had weakened into a general non-sexual term of abuse by 1970 - along the same lines of 'bugger'.

Finagle's Law follows a similar pattern. Finagle has been used in the USA, as a verb meaning 'to obtain a result by trickery; to deceive; to wangle'. A finagler is recorded in the American Dialect Society's Dialect Notes, 1922 as:

"One who stalls until someone else pays the check"

Soon afterwards (1926), Harold Wentworth listed it in the American Dialect Dictionary as 'US political cant.

The term probably had its origin in England. The English Dialect Dictionary lists the words fainaigue and feneague - meaning 'to cheat'.

The first example I have of 'Finagle's Law' in print dates from The Indiana Gazette, April 1979, although there are assertions that it dates from the 1940s. There's some evidence to show that Finagle's Law, while no doubt having been influenced by Murphy's Law, is not merely the same notion under another name. Finagle's Law is more often applied specifically as a spoof version of the Second Law of Thermodynamics and is stated as 'The perversity of the Universe tends towards a maximum'. This pseudo-science background also applies to 'Finagle's Constant' - a mythical mathematical constant which is added to one side of an equation to obtain a result when the facts don't match the theory.

CAPRICORN Dec 22 - Jan 19
You'll discover a brilliant legal loophole that will both get rid of that annoying guy at work and force the Department of Justice to serve you any meal you want.

AQUARIUS Jan 20 – Feb 18
You firmly believe that everything has a soul, which explains why you think your tape dispenser is a bad person.

PISCES Feb 19 – Mar 20
The jury won't be able to really feel disgust at your habit of eating your murder victims, because, hey, who doesn't love deep-fried food on a stick?

ARIES Mar 21 – Apr 20
The rest of the year will seem to fly right by, along with a few hundred others, after you're frozen in a giant block of ice.

TAURUS Apr 21 – May 21
Despite the efforts of literally hundreds of singers to tell you "let's go," you have yet to actually go.

GEMINI May 22 – June 21
You'll come face-to-face with many of life's mysteries next week, none bigger than why the Angel of Death looks like a younger, slimmer Roy Kinnear.

CANCER Jun 22 – Jul 22
You're not usually the kind of person who cries at weddings, but this one's of a former lover, you're at a strange place in your life, and soot gets in your eyes when the whole church burns down with everyone inside.

LEO Jul 23 – Aug 22
It's sad to think that when they tell your life story, you'll only be remembered as one of two guys whose most notable achievement was to walk into a bar.

VIRGO Aug 23 – Sep 22
You and a man with no arms will be stuck in a lift for six hours, but after only eight minutes you'll annoy him with insensitive questions about ass-wiping.

LIBRA Sep 23 – Oct 23
Just when you start to think that you haven't seen the strange men in lab coats for a while, bam, there they are in line with you at Bed, Bath, and Beyond.

SCORPIO Oct 24 – Nov 21
After your 17th time around as an underpaid office worker in the late-20th-to-early-21st centuries, you're really starting to become disenchanted with the whole reincarnation thing.

SAGITTARIUS Nov 22 – Dec 21
Sometimes you actually hate yourself for going out and drinking until five in the morning, but most times that's just what you tell people.

■ SUICIDE

I was walking across a bridge one day, and I saw a man standing on the edge, about to jump off. So I ran over and said "Stop! don't do it!"
"Why shouldn't I?" he said.
I said, "Well, there's so much to live for!"
He said, "Like what?"
I said, "Well...are you religious or atheist?"
He said, "Religious."
I said, "Me too! Are you christian or buddhist?"
He said, "Christian."
I said, "Me too! Are you catholic or protestant?"
He said, "Protestant."
I said, "Me too! Are you episcopalian or baptist?"
He said, "Baptist!"
I said,"Wow! Me too! Are you baptist church of god or baptist church of the lord?"
He said, "Baptist church of god!"
I said, "Me too! Are you original baptist church of god, or are you reformed baptist church of god?"
He said,"Reformed Baptist church of god!"
I said, "Me too! Are you reformed baptist church of god, reformation of 1879, or reformed baptist church of god, reformation of 1915?"
He said, "Reformed baptist church of god, reformation of 1915!"
I said, "Die, heretic scum", and pushed him off.

I THINK I'M A MOTH

A guy walks into a dentist's office and says, "I think I'm a moth."
The dentist replies "You shouldn't be here. You should be seeing a psychiatrist..."
The guys replies, "I am seeing a psychiatrist."
The dentist says, "Well then what are you doing here?"
And the guy says, "Your light was on."

■ WRITING'S POWERFUL MESSAGE

There was once a young man who, in his youth, professed a desire to become a "great" writer.
When asked to define "great" he said "I want to write stuff that the whole world will read, stuff that people will react to on a truly emotional level, stuff that will make them scream, cry, wail, howl in pain, desperation, and anger!"
He now works for Microsoft writing error messages.

■ NIGEL FARAGE

By a happy coincidence, Nigel Farage's initials are NF.

Nigel Farage says that homosexuality makes most people over 70 uncomfortable. I'm guessing they're just not using enough KY Jelly.

Nigel Farage has written to all Scottish MPs asking them not to vote on English matters,
Quite right! What do they know about Sharia Law anyway?

TATTY TOURISM PLAN

You might have noticed a news item recently about a new sculpture installed in Birmingham, once part of the UKs industrial heartland, and its second city.

Situated outside the main library, the sculpture depicts what is meant to be a typical family in 2014, consisting of two single mothers, each with a child, while one of the women is heavily pregnant with another addition to the family.

Many people are less than pleased with this image, which they claim gives the wrong impression of Birmingham. Some even demand to know where the fathers are, a sentiment probably echoed by many a single mother.

Apart from that it seems to be a very well executed piece of sculpture, and if Birmingham doesn't want it I'm sure there are suitable sites in Hull where it wouldn't look out of place, and where no-one would even notice that the fathers were missing, apart perhaps for the Child Support Agency.

Maybe the critics could channel their outrage more constructively by demanding an explanation as to why the £100,000 sculpture, (around 5.2 million baht,) needed to be made in China.

Meanwhile Thailands tourism industry seems to be a bit of a mystery to the people who run it. Some reports claim that last months tourist figures were as much as 20% down from the previous year, which, given the present regime, may not be too much of a surprise.

Hua Hin is certainly experiencing a downturn, and while there will no doubt be some of the regulars migrating to escape winter at home followed by the much needed 'high end' Christmas holidaymakers, there is a sense of anxiety in the tourism business.

TAT shares that concern, and is so concerned that its Governor wants to promote Martial Law Tourism with a campaign entitled '24 hours Enjoy Thailand.'

At first I had visions of tourists being taken on conducted tours of barracks and the like for a day. Maybe even being allowed to play with armoured vehicles and AK47's, and shown a video of Thailands Coups - a potted history.

But the title of the TAT campaign is misleading, and actually means that tourists should feel safe in the hands of the military for 24 hours a day. Which is fine for expats and regular visitors already accustomed to seeing armed police on the streets. After a while the guns can even become a re-assuring presence and you tend to forget about the level of training involved.

No doubt visitors from other countries where armed police etc are the norm won't bat an eyelid either. Brits however can be quite jittery around firearms, which are only acceptable if they have two barrels - both pointed at a grouse. So for them the TAT campaign could be a hard sell.

This weeks word is 'inchoate'. No, I don't have a clue how to pronounce it either, but it refers to a vague idea which is not yet fully formed or developed.

FEATURED GAME

SATURDAY 8TH NOVEMBER 2014
PREMIER LEAGUE
Liverpool v Chelsea 19:45
Despite their recent run of poor results, a win for Liverpool here would likely put them in the top six, while significantly reducing Chelsea's advantage over the chasing pack. Chelsea were not exactly at their best in their last game, but still did enough to win, and without their leading scorer Costa. There is still some doubt whether he will play in this one, but Didier Drogba has stepped in to good effect in his absence. Both teams will be jaded following European games but we think the Reds might just sneak this one and get their season going again.

BOOK 'EM JOSE

ENTIRE CHELSEA CROWD WAS READING SPORTING AUTOBIOGRAPHIES

■ ENGLAND

SATURDAY'S Chelsea-QPR game was silent because fans were immersed in this year's sporting memoirs, it has emerged.

Occasional bursts of applause or booing were caused by particularly thrilling passages in books by Roy Keane, Kevin Pietersen and Dennis Bergkamp.

Jose Mourinho said: "I looked at the crowd and saw a sea of serious, determined faces.

"Not their faces – the faces of Alex Ferguson and Luis Suarez on the covers of their mass-market hardbacks.

"No sound could be heard, even though their lips were all moving because they are not strong readers.

"It is no wonder that we conceded a goal because the team lost focus, and also because Thibaut Courtois was on chapter six of Andrea Pirlo's I Think Therefore I Play."

Above:Harry Redknapp thinks he may have read one, or possibly two, books.

Visiting manager Harry Redknapp spent the entire time reading his own new book in the hope of picking up some management tips.

Fan Julian Cook said: "I can only allot so many hours per week to sport, so the game seemed an ideal opportunity to multi-task.

"Decent game, was it? I can't wait to read all about it in Eden Hazard's autobiography Caution! Hazard, out October 2015 from Hachette."
