ABSENT WITHOUT LEAVE FOR THE EXPAT IN ALL OF US
What's happening, and might be happening, in and around Hua Hin

HERE WE GO AGAIN

NEW SCAM HITS TOWN

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

AWOL has been informed that last weekend dozens of bars in the area were confronted by a gang of up to a dozen Thai men claiming to be employees of Cable Thai Holdings (CTH) and were met by demands for payments to be made for broadcasting live Premier League football to customers at their premises.

The men were carrying official looking CTH identity cards but were very reluctant to either have them examined or be photographed, instead insisting that the bar owners speak to 'the boss in Bangkok' on the phone; however no phone number was given, just an already connected mobile phone, with the person on the other end apparently confirming that some sort of licence fee or fine was due, as well as some sort of check being carried out on a computer to verify this. The business owners were then asked to accompany the group to Hua Hin police station and were told this was just 'to sort the licences out'. Many owners agreed to do this, only to find themselves or their Thai staff who went, threatened with being held at the police station until payments were made, and we gather these varied between twenty and sixty thousand baht, and then being given a 'licence'.

The CTH office in Hua Hin has denied any involvement in this, and has confirmed that no special licence and no extra payment is required for businesses to publically broadcast their programmes, just the business must be properly registered with CTH and pay for the appropriate package. Even those who are not properly registered can just contact CTH Hua Hin to sort this out and may only have to pay a small fee to do so. Just to be clear, if you are approached by a group of Thai men in your business demanding money for some licence or telling you that you need to go to the police station, the chances are they are criminals trying to scam you.

CAPRICORN Dec 22 - Jan 19

You'll actually have an extremely pleasant day Friday due to the extremely powerful narcotics given to you in the severe burn ward.

AQUARIUS Jan 20 – Feb 18

Be more sensitive to the wishes of others this week, as your indifference to them is affecting your career as a magic-lamp genie.

PISCES Feb 19 – Mar 20

Mars rising in your sign indicates you are something of a coward, mostly because of the way you keep flinching at it.

ARIES Mar 21 - Apr 20

The Virgin Mary will appear in a dream and tell you to go forth in the world to help the poor and needy, causing you to wake up screaming in a cold sweat.

TAURUS Apr 21 – May 21

Your crude and primitive sense of humour will offend lots of people, but just wait until they get a look at your crude and primitive sense of justice.

GEMINI May 22 – June 21

You're good at thinking on your feet, which means next week's encounter with the bear trap will leave you somewhat dull-witted in addition to everything else.

CANCER Jun 22 – Jul 22

They say celebrities die in threes, which will be cause for alarm when you achieve sudden fame right after the Tom Cruise/Tilda Swinton murder-suicide.

LEO Jul 23 – Aug 22

You'll learn the value of patience, compassion, and tolerance next week and be rather disappointed that it's actually so low.

VIRGO Aug 23 – Sep 22

Please stop exclaiming "That's my jam!" whenever a good song comes on. Everyone knows you can only have one jam.

LIBRA Sep 23 – Oct 23

Disregard your suspicions: People aren't secretly plotting to murder you. You can tell by the open, friendly way they say they will murder you right to your face.

SCORPIO Oct 24 – Nov 21

You used to think you were pretty dark on the inside, but a run-in with a chainsaw will show there's plenty of purple, green, and yellow bits in you too.

SAGITTARIUS Nov 22 – Dec 21

You'll finally decide to try that new restaurant around the corner this week, thrilling the stars no end, as they were wondering if you were ever going to give them something to say.

A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... Top dog

One who is dominant or victorious.

Top dog' is synonymous with the similar, if now archaic, phrases, 'upper dog' and 'over dog'. It is also the antonym of 'under dog' (now usually spelled as a single word) and its synonym, 'bottom dog'.

We have here a golden opportunity for those who consider plausibility to be enough evidence to hang a phrase derivation on and the following explanation has been widely repeated. When wooden planks were sawn by hand, two men did the job using a two-handed saw. The senior man took the top handle, standing on the wood, and the junior took the bottom, in the saw-pit below. Add to this the fact that the irons that were used to hold the wood were called dogs and that the bottom position was much the more uncomfortable, and we can jump from this scene to the origin of 'top dog' and 'underdog'.

That may be true. The problem with it as an explanation is that no one has found evidence to back it up. There are printed references to saw-pits and to this form of work going back to the early 15th century in England and the 19th century in America. None of these makes any mention of 'top dog' or 'under dog'. It is hardly likely that everyone, including Shakespeare, who referred to saw-pits in The Merry Wives of Windsor, 1600, would have ignored these colourful phrases had they been in use at the time. In fact, there are no known references to 'top dog' or 'under dog' in the context of wood sawing until well after the practise was superseded by mechanical sawing.

What citations there are to these terms that date from the days that the pits were still in use all refer to fights of some sort, particularly dog fights. The earliest record found of a figurative use of 'top dog' is a 20th century one, in The Speaker; a review of politics etc., 1900:

"The most popular argument in favour of the war is that it will make the individual Briton top dog in South Africa."

While the saw-pit theory as the origin of 'top dog' and 'under dog' is attractive, the complete lack of evidence to support it renders it as mere speculation. There appears to be little reason to doubt that 'top dog' had a literal derivation - 'a dog that is top'.

Wife: "What does that mean?"
Husband: "Adorable, beautiful, cute, delightful, elegant, fashionable, gorgeous, and hot."
Wife: "Aw, thank you, but what about IJK?"

■ DEER

A man kills a deer and takes it home to cook for dinner. Both he and his wife decide that they won't tell the kids what kind of meat it is, but will give them a clue and let them guess. The dad said, "Well it's what Mommy calls me sometimes." The little girl screamed to her brother, "Don't eat it. Its an asshole!

■ TEACHER'S PET

After picking her son up from school one day, the mother asks him what he did at school. The kid replies, "I had sex with my teacher." She gets so mad that when they get home, she orders him to go straight to his room. When the father returns home that evening, the mother angrily tells him the news of what their son had done. As the father hears the news, a huge grin spreads across his face. He walks to his son's room and asks him what happened at school, the son tells him, "I had sex with my teacher." The father tells the boy that he is so proud of him, and he is going to reward him with the bike he has been asking for. On the way to the store, the dad asks his son if he would like to ride his new bike home. His son responds, "No thanks Dad, my butt still hurts."

MAGS MEANDERINGS: FROM SOM TAM TO MUSHY PEAS

■ TALK IS CHEAP

As the debate about licensing hours and Lao Khao continues, a new month brings with it a new crackdown announcement. This time on prostitution in illegal premises.

The stated aims, to tackle human trafficking and child prostitution, are unarguably worthy ones, but you have to wonder why illegal premises are allowed to exist in the first place.

Perhaps there is a clue in the other aim, which is to also address the problem of any police who turn a blind eye to illegal goings on.

It is already turning out to be quite an interesting year for Thailand, and I fear the worst for tea funds.

Meanwhile the UK begins to really rev up now for its' general election in May, starting with a bit of a hissy fit between the BBC and our current leaders. In case this one passed you by, in the run up to our last general election, American style TV debates between major partys were introduced. Which was all fine with the said major partys before UKIP began to win seats.

Following threats from one party in particular not to participate in this years debates if UKIP were allowed to, auntie BBC dealt with the problem quite easily. The debates will go ahead regardless of which partys do or don't turn up for them. A rather nice fait accompli which happened to coincide with an elaborate display in honour of the man who is still seen as responsible for winning Britain its' freedom from oppression. Winston Churchill.

How many people can you think of who have had a re-enactment of their funeral? Even Richard 111 is still waiting for his.

Hopefully that sums up the current political state of the UK at the moment. Like Thailands', you couldn't make it up. At least we have that wonderfully camp new BBC 3 series about Bangkok Airport to keep us in touch with reality.

And now another peek into Hulls' history. Not at a person this time, but a trawler. On February 8th 1974 the trawler 'Gaul' was lost at sea with all 36 crew. It was the biggest ever loss of life in the UK fishing fleet. Coming just 18 months after being launched the Gaul disappeared without trace in the Barents Sea.

To the people of Hull it was like the Titanic going down. Such a new modern trawler didn't just disappear. Accusations of Russian involvement were rife - this was still during the time of the Cold War - and the loss of the Gaul only compounded the outcries and grief of just 6 years earlier, when three other Hull trawlers were lost within two months.

It wasn't until 1997 that the wreck was discovered, and despite two formal inquiries into the disaster over the years, the first of which concluded that heavy seas were the cause, many people still refuse to believe that the sinking was simply an accident.

Word of the week is 'obfuscate' - to make something hard to understand.

WEIRD NEWS

■ USA Someone is letting out an igloo for just £7 a night on Airbnb

Ever wanted to sleep in an igloo, but don't possess the skills required to make one (or there just isn't enough snow where you live)?

You're wait is over, because someone is now offering one on AirBnB, and it's yours for just £7 a night.

The igloo is situated in the garden of Pierre, who also built it, near Boston in Massachusetts.

Due to the massive snowfall the area has received recently, Pierre thought he could capitalise on the weather phenomenon by making a cosy little igloo that 'comfortably fits one, or two if curled up'.

Payment includes the 'use of a tarp and yoga mat to sleep on' (but you'll have to bring your own sleeping bag) and you can even use the kitchen and bathroom facilities in Pierre's house.

Anyone eager to know what it is like to sleep inside a hollowed out ball of snow will have to be quick however, as the igloo is expected to melt as soon as spring arrives.

■ SPAIN Humans have been caning hard drugs such as opium and shrooms for 9,000 years

People have been blitzed on hard drugs for most of human history, researchers have revealed.

Ever since prehistoric humans first tripped out on hallucinogenic cacti and opium 9,000 years ago, people have been absolutely out of their gourds, University of Valladolid researchers revealed.

Associate professor Elisa Guerra-Doce reviewed archaeological literature from around the world, and found that many ancient human societies used hallucinogens, stimulants and other drugs regularly.

Even Europeans were out of their skulls on opium from around the sixth millennium BC.

'Apart from its use as a food plant, there is also uncontested evidence for the exploitation of its narcotic properties,' Guerra-Doce wrote.

Guerra-Doce's research shows that magic mushrooms, hallucinogenic cacti, marijuana and opium were used around the world, alongside booze.

The new review, 'Brings together data related to the early use of drug plants and fermented beverages all over the world,' Guerra-Doce wrote.

FEATURED GAME

SATURDAY 7TH FEBRUARY 2015
PREMIER LEAGUE
Tottenham v Arsenal 19:45
In a weekend of big derbies and big games, and an important week for al teams, this 5th versus 6th North London affair trumps the lot. Both teams are in good form and either could potentially go fourth (or even third in Arsenal's case) if other results go the right way. This will be a pulsating affair likely to be decided by the odd goal in several, and we think that once again it will be the Gunners who come out on top.

RAMPANT CONSUMERISM CELEBRATES 49TH CONSECUTIVE SUPER BOWL VICTORY

■ USA

Marketing professionals are celebrating yet another magnificent victory in yesterday's Super Bowl XLIX, after securing unprecedented levels of coverage for their range of tawdry products.

In a match between the New England Patriots and the Seattle Seahawks, which was won by one of them 28-24, all eyes were on the brands that could most successfully exploit their exposure to tens of millions of American wallets.

NFL spokesperson Walt Gamington told us, "Each year we wonder where we are going improve on the previous year's successful extraction of income from US workers, and yet we continue to do so, time and again."

"We've got sponsored cameras, sponsored drinks providers, sponsored breaks, sponsored time-outs, sponsored lines on the pitch."

"It's absolutely brilliant."

Gamington continued, "We are running out of things to sponsor, admittedly, but I have faith in our nation's capitalists to wring several million dollars more out of someone in time for next year's event."

"What about 'sponsored' sponsors? 'This McDonald's advert was brought to you by Ford' – that's surely an option?"

English sports fans watched the Superbowl in wide-eyed bemusement, as the action was endlessly interrupted by marketing messages from companies promising to make your life immeasurably better, for a price.

Manchester United fan Simon Williams told us, "I know it's difficult to comprehend, but watching the NFL's Super Bowl makes watching the Premier League seem like it's staged in 1950s communist East Germany."

There are also concerns among fans, after reports that Premier League boss Richard Scudamore spent the entire evening watching the action whilst repeating the mantra, "Amazing, just amazing."
