MURDER & TRAGEDY

FATAL INCIDENTS IN BOTH HUA HIN AND CHA AM

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

Last week saw two foreigners die in separate incidents locally, one a murder, the other a tragic accident. The first occurred in Cha Am on Thursday (2nd April) at Lek's Restaurant Switzerland, where two Norwegian men, Lars Arne Fjeldsbo, 54, and Stine Somchai Husoy, 59, who were apparently business partners in Norway, argued over a loan that couldn't be repaid. This ended when the older man fetched a gun from his motorbike and shot Fjeldsbo dead with two bullets behind the ear, before turning the gun and shooting himself in the face. Husoy survived and is in hospital under police guard.

The second incident took place on Friday (3rd April) when, according to reports from a variety of sources, a Scottish man, Iain Mackay, 40, went to the pool shop and bar, Master Cues, run by the Thai girl he had been seeing, Patty Patrick, at around 3am, after drinking heavily, and then proceeded to smash what is presumed to be a window at the bar by kicking it; in doing so he tragically severed an artery in his leg which resulted in him bleeding to death, despite the best efforts of an ambulance crew and Hua Hin Hospital. Some reports have suggested that Mr Mackay was angry because he had seen Ms Patrick with another man, but she gave an interview to the press and stated that they had separated amicably and at his suggestion some time after his arrival in Thailand on 22nd March.

Incidents such as these are not common in this area, which is why it is so surprising to have two so close to each other, but it is often said that high temperatures do lead to a statistical rise in murders and accidental deaths, however we would suggest that alcohol also played its part, certainly in Mr Mackay's case, and probably in Cha Am too. We offer our sincerest condolences to all family and friends of the deceased.

You thought you were powerless to deny a pretty face, but damn, not when it's sitting on top of 350 lbs of blubber.

AQUARIUS Jan 20 – Feb 18

Everyone has a part to play in God's plan. For instance, your job is to create a distraction so that God can get away with the money in all the confusion.

PISCES Feb 19 – Mar 20

They say hard work never hurt anyone, and that's true, as far as it goes. The work you do at the combination gasoline refinery and drill-bit plant isn't exactly hard.

ARIES Mar 21 - Apr 20

Your belief that everything happens for a reason may remain unshaken in the face of personal tragedy, but you'll certainly be upset when you find out the reason is "to get the Zodiac some chicks."

TAURUS Apr 21 – May 21

This is a great time for romance to bloom at work, because they're about to lay everyone off and inspire an office shooting spree, so hey, gather ye rosebuds.

GEMINI May 22 – June 21

You're wasting your potential by living life as you do now, but not as much as you're wasting your potential energy by not falling from high places.

CANCER Jun 22 – Jul 22

You're not the kind of person who lets social conventions dictate how you live your life, but it would be nice if you could pull that off without being such an asshole.

LEO Jul 23 – Aug 22

The FBI will have to ask you some tough questions next week, such as whether true love really exists and what happens after we die.

VIRGO Aug 23 – Sep 22

You've tried everything you can think of to get that special person to like you, which of course explains why you're fleeing a nationwide manhunt.

LIBRA Sep 23 – Oct 23

It turns out there are actually plenty of problems you can't solve with a smile, a sincere heartfelt talk, or a large, heavy piece of lumber.

SCORPIO Oct 24 – Nov 21

In hard economic times like these, people tend to spend more money on booze and entertainment, but they don't have to as long as you're there to go into hilarious convulsions after drinking wood alcohol.

SAGITTARIUS Nov 22 – Dec 21

They say you can never step into the same river twice, but thanks to crocodiles and your refusal to learn how to swim, once is all you'll need.

■ A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... Rumpy-pumpy
Sexual intercourse, especially that of a casual and saucy nature.
This reduplicated term sounds as though it might come from one of Shakespeare's more baudy scenes, but is in fact of quite recent coinage. I can't find any mention of it in print prior to the entry in the 1968 Scottish National Dictionary:

Rump, Rumpie-pumpie, a jocular term for copulation.

We don't know who coined the term. Whoever it was didn't need to look far for the inspiration though. The comedy radio show Round The Horne was a a highly popular in the late 1960s. Barry Took and Marty Feldman created the character of Rambling Syd Rumpo for Kenneth Williams and each week he would sing a stream of delightfully nonsensical innuendo, usually to an authentic English folk melody; for example, The Highland Lament - a song of the Highland Turv-croppers, from April 1967:

Ye nurves and bogles of Bonnie Glen Postule
Oft have I greebled amongst your trees
And whirdled my lassie among your nettles
I swore my devotion and stung both my knees

For we bogled and grundled and grundled and bogled
I grottled my muckles for bonnie wee June
And now she's run off with a plumber from Sidcup
So I lurk in the forest and whirdle alone

The use of suggestive comic gobbledegook was used extensively by radio scriptwriters, notably Took/Feldman and Spike Milligan, as a device to sneak 'unsuitable' content past the BBC censor. The sexual imagery of 'rump' and 'pump' leaves little to the imagination and, whilst Rambling Syd Rumpo didn't explicitly list rumpy-pumpy as one of his pastimes, it isn't difficult to imagine that it would have been.

PROPER GRAMMAR

For his 66th birthday a Texan was given a voucher by his wife for one consultation with the medicine man on the local indian reservation.

This medicine man was renowned for his success in treating erectile dysfunction, so the Texan eagerly booked an appointment.

When he described his problem the medicine man made him up a potion and told him," take only one teaspoon of this when you want to perform, and say 'one, two three.' Then you can go for as long as you want, and to stop you or your wife must say 'one, two three, four'.

This all seemed very simple so the man hurried home to try it out. He showered, shaved and called his wife into the bedroom for a real treat. As she lay on the bed he took a spoonful of the potion and said, "one, two, three" and he rose magnificently to the occasion.

"Oh, Honey, that's terrific!" his wife cried, " but what was the 'one, two, three' for?"

The moral of this story is that you should not end a sentence with a preposition or you will find yourself with a dangling participle.

BUCKET

A beautiful, voluptuous woman went to a gynecologist. The doctor took one look at this woman and all his professionalism went out the window.

He immediately told her to undress. After she had disrobed the doctor began to stroke her thigh.

Doing so, he asked her, "Do you know what I'm doing?"

"Yes," she replied, "you're checking for any abrasions or dermatological abnormalities."

"That is right," said the doctor.

He then began to fondle her breasts.

"Do you know what I'm doing now?" he asked.

"Yes," the woman said, "you're checking for any lumps or breast cancer."

"Correct," replied the shady doctor.

Finally, he mounted his patient and started having sexual intercourse with her.

He asked, "Do you know what I'm doing now?"

"Yes," she said. "You're getting herpes; which is why I came here in the first place."

WEIRD NEWS

■ CHINA A schoolboy with a sore throat was found to have a leech growing inside him

A schoolboy who went to the doctor complaining of a sore throat was found to have a 7cm-long leech growing inside him. Xiaobo Chien, 11, had been walking home from school in China's Sichuan Province when he stopped to drink some water from a bucket by the side of the road – unaware that it contained leech larvae.

So when he went to the doctor complaining of a dizziness and a sore throat he was shocked to discover that a 7cm-long leech was lodged in his respiratory tract and had been growing inside him for weeks.

'At first we thought he had flu as he said he was felling dizzy and had a sore throat,' said the boy's mother, Xiang Tung, 33. 'He hadn't told us about the water-drinking so it never occurred to us that he may have picked up something.'

Fortunately, the leech hadn't caused an infection and doctors were able to extract it without too much trouble. 'I won't be drinking water from a bucket again,' said Xiaobo.

■ SPAIN If aliens exist than they're absolutely massive, scientist claims

The alien of today would leave Marvin the Martian quaking in his tiny space boots. That's because, according to new research, they're absolutely massive. A study by cosmologist Fergus Simpson, a scientist at the University of Barcelona, concludes that extraterrestrials could weigh up to 300kg (nearly 50 stone), if they exist.

The theory behind it was spawned through observations of our own planet. Here on Earth, larger animals need more resources and are therefore less abundant. Earth is considered a planet dominated by smaller lifeforms – including humans. The scientist used body sizes on Earth to come up with a distribution of body sizes of other organisms in space and concluded aliens could be pretty huge. While other experts agree with Mr Simpson's average size calculation, some have disputed the findings on the grounds of a lack of data.

Seth Shostak, a researcher at the SETI Institute, said: 'It's interesting, but there's really no concrete data to work with.' He added Mr Simpson did not take into account gravity or evolutionary theories.

MAGS MEANDERINGS: FROM SOM TAM TO MUSHY PEAS

RAILING AGAINST BUREAUCRACY

If you deplore the state of Thailands' railways you can now rest assured that some long overdue safety issues with Hua Hins' rail crossings are to be addressed.

And while you wait for that to happen, here is a brief comparison with the operation of the UKs' Network Rail, the company responsible for looking after our tracks.

Over here there are always plenty of moans about the assorted failures of our rail system, especially in the north of England, where travellers feel increasingly left out of plans for high speed rail links, and where heavy rain can close a crucial line for several weeks on end.

But as a close neighbour of the main line out of Hull I was amazed to learn that Network Rail has a department for Vegetation Management Works.

You really couldn't make it up.

It is routine for us track side dwellers to receive notices from Network Rail warning of any upcoming night time track work, and I have commented before on the high level of track maintenance here compared to that of Thailands', but the notice of Vegetation Management Works during mid April was a new one on me. And it gets even better. After the usual grovelling explanation of the whys, wherefores, and noisy equipment involved, there follows a reassuring paragraph on how the resulting piles of chopped down vegetation will be dealt with.

This includes the use, where appropriate, of logs and branches to create a safe track side habitat for wildlife.

There will even be an ecological survey carried out before work begins, and a 24 hour helpline.

It goes without saying that Thailands record for rail safety isn't good, and that there are huge problems with its' hundreds, if not thousands, of barrierless crossings.

No doubt some of those problems could be eased simply by removing any trees and bushes which obscure clear views of the tracks. But if - and when - that does happen, let's hope that Thailand just gets on with the job without the same level of bureaucracy and political correctness which blights the UK. That way there could still be a chance that their rail fares remain affordable to the majority of the population.

This week we take a look at two Hull folk who made names for themselves. First is Judo champion Karen Briggs, born in the city on 11th April 1963.

Karen represented Great Britain at the 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona, the first time that women's judo was included as an Olympic sport. Unfortunately she sustained an injury which ruined her chances of a medal there, but made up for it by being four times World Champion, six times European Champion, five times Paris Multi-Nations Champion, and twice winner of titles at the Commonwealth Games.

Our second person wasn't born a Hull-ite, and wasn't quite so athletic. But we still count playwright and author Alan Plater as one of our own.

Born on 15th April 1935, Plater came to live in Hull when his family moved here in 1938. His many works for stage and screen included 'Z Cars' (some of the cast seen above), the spin off 'Softly Softly Task Force' and the adaptation of 'The Barchester Chronicles' and he was best known for portraying ordinary folk in ordinary down to earth settings. Much like his adopted home town! Plater died in 2010, but I doubt there is a reader from the UK that won't have seen some of his work at some point in their life.

Word of the week is 'ashram'. You might feel like finding one of these this weekend to escape the chaos - because an ashram is a Hindu retreat. Failing that option have a safe and enjoyable Songkran.

FEATURED GAME

SUNDAY 12TH APRIL 2015
PREMIER LEAGUE
Man Utd v Man City 22:00
The Manchester derby sees two sides in vastly different form, and city need a result here to keep their slim chances of defending the title alive. Both will be hoping that Chelsea slip up in the West London derby, but a draw will be no good for either in this game, so we expect a thumping match with both teams going hell for leather. And we can't look beyond the home side to get the win, as LVG has got them playing like a proper team again, and has even to some extent sorted out their defensive frailty, largely helped by the superb De Gea. City are falling apart but are still a good side, and the occasion may well mean they raise their game, but they won't be able to raise it enough.

PFA CLAIMS SUCCESS IN SEXUAL CONSENT COURSE

The Professional Footballers Association is claiming success after 60% of its members earned a passing grade C or above on their new Sexual Consent Course.

The first exams were taken by players at Brighton Hove Albion FC, and the PFA has hailed the fact that more than half of the footballers who attended are now qualified in gaining appropriate levels of consent from prospective sexual partners.

A spokesperson for the PFA told reporters, "For too long the image of footballers as overly wealthy rape-hungry animals has been commonplace in society, but this course will go a long way to changing that perception."

"Already the results are clear, over 60% know when not to rape someone, and with exam retakes over the summer we expect that figure to be over 80% – which is frankly brilliant considering where we started."

Above: Wayne Rooney struggles with the question "Should you have sex with a prostitute when you are already married?"

"I hope that one day everyone in society will be able to interact with a footballer without the slightest concern that they might get raped."

"Of course, some people are focussing on the 40% who failed this first course, but no-one talks about the 10% who actually got grade As. I guarantee they won't rape anyone, ever."

Pedagogical experts have criticised the course's syllabus, insisting that simply presenting a number of scenarios with 'have sex' and 'do not have sex' as a multiple choice answer does little to expand the students understanding.

As one explained, "It won't take long, even for a footballer with limited intellect, to realise that answering 'do not have sex' in every situation will get them a passing mark."

"But then again, maybe I'm giving them too much credit?"
