FEARFUL SYMMETRY

TIGERS BEING REMOVED FROM 'TIGER TEMPLE'

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

The Wat Pha Luang Ta Bua Tiger Temple, located about 240 kilometres north and west of Hua Hin in Kanchanaburi province, has for many years been a popular tourist attraction for visitors to this area, but an operation carried out this week by officials from Thailand's Wildlife Conservation Office has begun removing the 137 animals and placing them in three government animal refuges elsewhere in Thailand, two of which are wildlife-breeding centres in Ratchaburi province.

The temple has long received criticism and complaints from wildlife activists, with rumours abounding about the treatment of the tigers; accusations have been made that the temple's monks have been illegally breeding tigers, while some visitors have said the animals can appear drugged, although the temple has consistently denied such claims.

There has been a long running stand off between the authorities and the Wat Pa Luangta Bua Yannasampanno Foundation, headed by Pol Col Supittapong Pakcharung, who had threatened legal action against anyone trespassing on the temple grounds, but a court order obtained on Monday allowed the authorities to search both the temple and the foundation, then remove the animals.

So far around sixty of the animals have been removed, but there have been reports of various attempts being made to hinder the process, such as releasing some of the tigers into areas where they would be difficult to sedate and catch. As we were going to press reports were also emerging that forty dead tiger cubs had been found in a freezer at the temple, with as yet no explanation for this. This depressing news does not dampen our hope that the tigers can continue 'burning bright' in their new homes.

■ A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... Fine words butter no parsnips
Nothing is achieved by empty words or flattery.
This proverbial saying is English and dates from the 17th century. It expresses the notion that fine words count for nothing and that action means more than flattery or promises. You aren't very likely to come across 'fine words butter no parsnips' as 20th century street slang - you are more liable to hear it in a period costume drama. Potatoes were imported into Britain from America by John Hawkins in the mid 16th century and became a staple in what established itself as the national dish - meat and two veg. Before that, various root vegetables were eaten instead, often mashed and, as anyone who has eaten mashed swedes, turnips or parsnips can testify, they cry out to be 'buttered-up' - another term for flattery. Indeed, the English were known for their habit of layering on butter to all manner of foods, much to the disgust of the French who used it as evidence of the English lack of expertise regarding cuisine and to the Japanese, who referred to Europeans in general and the English in particular as 'butter-stinkers'. This butter habit is evidenced in the various forms of the expression that are found in print in the 1600s - 'fine/fair/soft words butter no parsnips/cabbage/fish/connie[rabbit]'. A typical example is this verse from John Taylor's Epigrammes, 1651:

Words are but wind that do from men proceed;
None but Chamelions on bare Air can feed;
Great men large hopeful promises may utter;
But words did never Fish or Parsnips butter..

The earliest version in print is in John Clarke's Latin/English textbook Paroemiologia, 1639:
Faire words butter noe parsnips, verba non alunt familiam. [words, no family support]

We also bring you a second butter-related phrase this week - Butter wouldn't melt in his mouth
Prim and proper, with a cool demeanour
The allusion in this expression is to people who maintain such a cool demeanour that they don't even have the warmth to melt butter. This is an old phrase - here's a citation from 1530, in Jehan Palsgrave's Lesclarcissement de la langue françoyse:
"He maketh as thoughe butter wolde nat melte in his mouthe."
The phrase is usually used in a derogatory and critical sense and, in the past at least, was most often applied to women. Occasionally, it was used to denote a quiet meekness and sweetness of temper rather than emotional coldness; for example, this description of Mr Pecksniff in Charles Dickens' Martin Chuzzlewit:
"It would be no description of Mr Pecksniff's gentleness of manner to adopt the common parlance, and say that he looked at this moment as if butter wouldn't melt in his mouth. He rather looked as if any quantity of butter might have been made out of him, by churning the milk of human kindness, as it spouted upwards from his heart."

■ HOW POLITICS WORKS

I told my son, " I want you to marry a girl of my choice.
He said, "NO!"
I told him it's Bill Gates daughter!!
He said, "OKAY!"

Got in contact with Bill Gates & told him, "I want your daughter to marry my son!"
He said, "NO!"
Told him my son was the CEO of the World Bank!
He said, "OKAY!"

Went to the President of the World Bank & told him to make my son CEO of the Bank.
He said, "NO!"
Told him my son was Bill Gates Son-in-Law!
He said, "OKAY!"

And that, my friends, is exactly how Politics works.

■ CONJUGAL VISITS

A couple, age 67, went to the doctor's office. The doctor asked, "What can I do for you?"
The man said, "Will you watch us have sexual intercourse?"
The doctor looked puzzled, but agreed. When the couple finished, the doctor said, "There is nothing wrong with the way you have intercourse." And he then charged them 1000 baht.
This happened several weeks in a row. The couple would make an appointment, have intercourse, pay the doctor and leave.
Finally the doctor asked, "Just what exactly are you trying to find out?"
The old man said, "We're not trying to find out anything. She is married and we can't go to her house. I am married and we can't go to my house. The Hilton charges 3000 baht and the Marriott charges 4000 baht. We do it here for 1000 baht, and I get back 800 baht from my insurance for a visit to the doctor's office."

FOR WHOM THE BELL TOLLS

Well its all over with and Hull City FC has again been promoted to the Premier League, with a 1 - 0 Wembley win against Sheffield Wednesday.

Normally I would leave it there, but this year the Daily Mirror weighed in with criticism of the lack of City supporters at the game, after Sheffield fans had also made their feelings known about all the empty Hull seats with some nasty chanting. At least the 26,000 who travelled to Wembley to support Hull had shown willing, even though only two thirds of the seat allocation was sold.

There are some valid reasons for the allegedly poor attendance, not least of which is a recent change to the pricing structure of season tickets, which has badly hit concessions and upset supporters. Then there is the ongoing mistrust in the city of the clubs owners, and the fact that 10,000 local folk went to an important Rugby League fixture which happened on the same day.

Still, the unpopular owners can celebrate the windfall which promotion brings, and can rest assured that Hull Citys home stadium will be full to bursting on June 14th for Rod Stewart. But if word on the soi is correct there is likely to be a new owner by then anyway.

At last - a sensible take on tourist safety in Thailand from John Bell. (No - I hadn't heard of him either.)

Mr Bell is a respected travel journalist, and member of the British Guild of Travel Writers, an achievement apparently not to be sneezed at.

Speaking on the Beeb last weekend about the spate of tourist deaths in Thailand, Bell presented a realistically honest view of why things can go so tragically wrong for visitors to the Land of Smiles. Along with the undeniable lack of road and rail safety - which he has the guts to blame largely on poor vehicle maintenance - he makes a point about tourists themselves which expats will understand and often agree with. That is the type of tourists which the country tends to attract - the independent/inexperienced traveller.

You know where this is going. Those who arrive in their gap year on flight only and a tiny budget. Who opt for the cheapest form of travel, and more worryingly are tempted into taking trips by those unregulated hangers on in the tourism business. The boat owners desperate to make money when the seas are too rough for example. Those who operate poorly maintained zip lines, bungee jumps, jet skis etc, or the lad on commission recommending beach parties where anything goes in the buckets.

But while it is all well and good advising potential visitors to do their research, and be aware that safety isn't the priority which it is back home, even seasoned travellers sometimes tend to leave their common sense at the airport arrivals gate. And while Mr Bell acknowledges that Thailand does recognise the problems, and is making some progress, there is just something about the place which makes people throw caution to the wind, and is surely part of the attraction?

June 3rd 1889 saw the completion of the Canadian Pacific coast to coast railway. 127 years on both Hull and HuaHin continue to wait for their high speed rail links.

EUROPEAN CHAMPIONSHIPS

The European Championships begin next Friday 10th June, and we will have all the fixtures and group tables in next week's issue. There are six groups with four teams in each (see right), all playing each other, with the top two in each group, plus the four best third place teams, moving into the knockout stages, which begin on Saturday 25th June. The tournament is on for a month, with the climax being the Final on Sunday 10th July at the Stade De France (although this will actually be at 2am on Monday 11th July here in Thailand).

In Thailand the TV rights for the tournament are held by GMM Grammy. However in past international tournaments many of the matches have been shown on terrestrial Thai TV, so at this point it is not completely clear where matches will be available. However in the UK the matches are being shown by the BBC and ITV, so anyone who has access to these channels on their TV setup will be able to view them there.

Group A:
Albania, France, Romania, Switzerland
Group B:
England, Russia, Slovakia, Wales
Group C:
Germany, Northern Ireland, Poland, Ukraine
Group D:
Croatia, Czech Republic, Spain, Turkey
Group E:
Belgium, Italy, Republic of Ireland, Sweden
Group F:
Austria, Hungary, Iceland, Portugal

Games will be played at the following venues:
Stade de Bordeaux, Bordeaux
Stade Bollaert-Delelis, Lens
Stade Pierre Mauroy, Lille
Stade de Lyon, Lyon
Stade Velodrome, Marseille
Stade de Nice, Nice
Parc des Princes and Stade de France, Paris
Stade Geoffroy Guichard, Saint-Etienne
Stadium de Toulouse, Toulouse

MARCUS RASHFORD TO RESOLVE BREXIT DEBATE, BRING BALANCE TO THE FORCE

■ ENGLAND

After scoring 135 seconds into his debut, England supporters are calling on Marcus Rashford to end the Brexit debate and bring balance to the force.

The 18-years-old's meteoric rise has been met with typically reserved hysteria by English football fans who have hailed the teenager as the saviour of everything from football itself to the universe as we know it.

"Obviously, Marcus Rashford is the second coming," said England supporters club member Simon Williams.

"I don't want to build the kid up too much, but if we don't win the Euros, World Cup, Olympics, X Factor and the next election, then Roy Hodgson has a lot to answer for.

"People will say I'm going overboard, but being the youngest player ever to score on their England debut definitely makes him better than Jesus.

"He might not be able to walk on water, but he's clearly got trickier feet and a better eye for goal.

"Plus, Jesus never scored against a second-rate side from the Asia Football Confederation, did he."

Expert pundits also gave their verdict, with Alan Shearer saying, "Clearly the boy has more talent than I did at the same age, but has he got what it takes to foul the goalkeeper as Sol Campbell heads the winner in the World Cup against Argentina? I'm not sure he has."

Above: Marcus Rashford smiles a knowing smile in the knowledge that not only is he England's saviour but also that he can eat three Shredded Wheat
