ABSENT WITHOUT LEAVE FOR THE EXPAT IN ALL OF US
What's happening, and might be happening, in and around Hua Hin

A KIND OF JUSTICE

FOUR MEN SENTENCED FOR SONGKRAN ATTACK

HUA HIN, THAILAND

The four Thai men who confessed to the attack on a British family in Soi Binthabaht during Songkran were each sentenced to four years in jail this week, reduced to two years without parole as they admitted the crime.

Many readers will have seen the CCTV video of the incident, and while it is good to see the police and courts act swiftly in this case, many have wondered if this would be the case if that footage had not gone public. Others question whether the attack was as clear cut in terms of blame as appeared at first glance, with a strong case to be made that the British tourists exacerbated the events through their own actions. Some expats also feel that while the man that delivered a kick to the woman's head fully deserves a custodial sentence, the others may have been harshly treated.

The Owen family can certainly count themselves lucky that their injuries were not more severe, and possibly that they were not themselves found culpable for their actions, but they should feel grateful to the Thai legal system for delivering such speedy judgement on their foes. Most legal systems in the world would not have been able to identify, catch and process offenders within the two months the Thais have done, regardless of any possible public relations motives lying behind that.

What is clear though, is that far from the accusations many expats level at Thailand, the authorities and the people do genuinely care about both the safety of people visiting Thailand, and what foreigners think of the Thai people, as displayed by these swift legal processes and the reaction of Thais to the incident. It also underlines the importance of tourists and tourism to the country, and it must be hoped that a line can now be drawn under what really was an isolated incident for Hua Hin.

CAPRICORN Dec 22 - Jan 19
Someday you'll inspire a whole new generation to pursue their dreams, secure in the knowledge that they couldn't possibly do any worse than you.

AQUARIUS Jan 20 – Feb 18
You'll have a hard time putting what it is you don't like about your new neighbor into words, particularly after he slices through your larynx with a cheese grater.

PISCES Feb 19 – Mar 20
Remember: It's all fun and games until someone loses an eye—not an arm, half a right leg, a lower jaw, several organs, five pints of blood, and the complete control of his central nervous system.

ARIES Mar 21 - Apr 20
An out-of-body experience will soon leave you with a deeper understanding of just how much weight you should be trying to lose.

TAURUS Apr 21 – May 21
You are about to find love in the most unlikely of places, or at least that's what the panting, neglected sociopath living in the abandoned textiles factory will call it.

GEMINI May 22 – June 21
In times of crisis you've often looked to the stars for guidance, and this weekend will be no different, aside, of course, from your utter failure to identify which one of us is Polaris.

CANCER Jun 22 – Jul 22
You will soon learn that only by hastily skimming the errors of the past can we hope to mostly avoid repeating what we dimly remember them to be in the future.

LEO Jul 23 – Aug 22
There are two sides to every story. Unfortunately, no respectable publisher is interested in putting out your account of D.H. Lawrence's 'Sons And Lovers.'

VIRGO Aug 23 – Sep 22
Approaching police sirens combined with your naturally paranoid tendencies will significantly alter the stuffing of tonight's honeysuckle white turkey.

LIBRA Sep 23 – Oct 23
They say you can't judge a man until you've walked a mile in his shoes, but after 3,000 feet, you're beginning to suspect he'd like to have his sneakers back.

SCORPIO Oct 24 – Nov 21
You will ignore the voice of reason once again this week, but that's largely because it's gone hoarse and grown nearly inaudible over the years.

SAGITTARIUS Nov 22 – Dec 21
Disappointment will be yours this week when what you first believe to be the play's curtain call turns out to be just Act 1, Scene 2.

■ A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... Away with the fairies
Not facing reality; in a dreamworld.

This phrase has its basis in the Scots/Irish Gaelic tradition of belief in a set of folk myths, the cartoon version of which is a belief in the existence of 'the little people'.

In a mythology that compares with the current fad for stories of abduction by aliens, Irish folklore had the alien role played by the Sidhe, a dominant, supernatural clan of fairies. The stories involved the Sidhe appearing from some hidden place, either their underground lair or from an invisible world, equivalent to contemporary science's notion of a parallel dimension, and spiriting people away. In another link to current scientific understanding of relativity, the stories usually involved the victim returning after what seemed like a few hours only to find that many years had passed in the world of humans.

The everyday belief in a nether world populated by fairies, elves, pixies, leprechauns, goblins and the like was commonplace in mediaeval Europe, as was the belief in their interaction with the real world. A letter to the Scottish poet William Drummond, dated October 1636, contained the following:

As for the Fairy Queen, of whom you wrote to me, her Apparitions of late have bewitched so many, that I find sundry ready to dance with the fairies.

The belief in people being taken away by the fairies was very well-established by the time that the phrase 'away with the fairies' first came to be used - which isn't until the 20th century. This earliest example of the expression that can be found in print is in the New Zealand newspaper The Otautau Standard and Wallace County Chronicle, May 1909. This retells a story from Ireland, in which a Michael Coyne attempts to convince onlookers that he hadn't murdered his rival, James Bailey:

[Coyne] "Don't mind your son; that is not him you see there." Bridget Bailey understood that he meant that her brother was away with the fairies.

The phrase didn't begin to be used in its current figurative sense until the late 20th century. This item from The Washington Post, June 1987, is typical of the examples of the phrase that are commonly found from the 1980s onward:

"Still away with the fairies, the fey and gentle Incredible String Band epitomised the hippie ideals of the Sixties."

■ A BUDDHIST JOKE SERIES
What did the Buddhist ask the hot dog vendor?
"Make me one with everything."

The Buddhist gives him a thousand baht note, and the vendor pockets it. The Buddhist asks for change and the vendor replies 'Change comes from within.'

The Buddhist pulls out a gun. "Whoa," the vendor exclaims. "I thought you guys were about inner peace!"
The Buddhist replies, "This is my inner piece."

The vendor replies, "No need to get violent. Do you want the thousand back or something valuable I recently found?"
The Buddhist replies, "What did you find?"
The vendor holds up a small peppermint chocolate with a hole in the middle, holds it up to the sun until a small light shines through the hole, and says "A light in mint".

The Buddhist chips a tooth on the mint and so he goes to the dentist. The dentist goes to give him Novacaine but the Buddhist declines because he wants to transcend dental medication.

■ ELEPHANTS
Do you know why you never see elephants hiding up in trees?
Because they're really good at it.

■ QUICKIES
What did the pirate say when he turned 80?
Aye Matey!

Ever noticed that glass tastes like blood?

Why do mirrors look like eyes really close up?

■ STAR WARS
Why did Star Wars episodes 4, 5, and 6 come before 1, 2, and 3?
Because in charge of scheduling, Yoda was.

■ POLICE STOP
Heisenberg, Schrodinger and Ohm are in a car.
They get pulled over. Heisenberg is driving and the cop asks him "Do you know how fast you were going?" "No, but I know exactly where I am" Heisenberg replies.
The cop says "You were doing 55 in a 35." Heisenberg throws up his hands and shouts "Great! Now I'm lost!"
The cop thinks this is suspicious and orders him to pop open the trunk. He checks it out and says "Do you know you have a dead cat back here?"
"We do now, asshole!" shouts Schrodinger.
The cop moves to arrest them. Ohm resists.

■ BOOK
I just read a book about Stockholm Syndrome.
It was pretty bad at first, but, by the end, I liked it.

KING OF THE ROAD?

With homelessness an increasing problem in the UK, some city and town councils are taking controversial action in an attempt to alleviate the problem.

The first reaction from many people to homelessness is that it is self inflicted, which of course can be true. And that the homeless could get themselves out of that situation, which is not so easy. In fact there are homeless folk who choose to live that way, even in our climate. Some 20 years ago I knew one such man, who simply liked to be free to move from one place to another. Unencumbered by property, belongings and bills, during his time in Hull he left his pension book in our office safe, collecting it every week to draw his pension, until one day he didn't fetch it back again. We knew he had moved on and were even sad to see him go, but respected his way of life.

That man of course had his pension income to cover his basic needs. Most don't, and rely on begging, which is where the problems arise. Because let's be honest, how can you be sure the person wrapped in a blanket in a shop doorway really is homeless? You can't.

In fact the rise of the 'professional beggar' in the UK is quite understandably a cause for concern, and needs to be dealt with.

Which is where the 'PSPO' comes in. The Public Space Protection Order was introduced two years ago as part of the Anti Social Behaviour, Crime and Policing Act. PSPO's can be used to prohibit pretty much anything which has a detrimental effect on the quality of life in any specified area.

Fair enough. Anti Social behaviour is sadly a problem in most parts of the UK, where we see alcohol and drug abuse all too often on the streets. But the PSPO is also used to prohibit the feeding of pigeons in public places in the London borough of Hillingdon, as well as outlawing the possession of golf equipment in one Derbyshire park. (We know all about 'going equipped' - but that one takes the biscuit.)

Hull, along with over 10 percent of all councils, has stirred things up by introducing a written agreement which effectively criminalises behaviour linked to homelessness. Police have the job of issuing the orders, which the homeless have to sign, agreeing to go straight to a hostel for the night. What they often don't realise - or understand - is that they have signed up to a PSPO which bans them from sleeping rough at all, and that breach of the order can result in a fixed penalty of 100 pounds. (Much more if their case subsequently goes to court.)

Hostels do of course try to provide help and support, but, like the courts, are overstretched, and can do little when someone disappears after just one night. So are PSPO's being used as sledgehammers to crack nuts?

On June 10th 1963, President John F Kennedy signed the US law which gave equal pay to both men and women who were doing the same jobs. What a shame that back then people like the late - great - Mohammed Ali were still having to campaign for racial equality.

And finally. Any upcoming UK entrepreneur who fancies getting into the people smuggling business need look no further than our tabloid press for advice. There they will quickly learn what make and model of boat to buy, how much they can expect to pay for it, and the going rate to charge their cargo of illegal immigrants. A nice little earner that might appeal to beggars who want to avoid PSPO's.

In Thailand the TV rights for the tournament are held by GMM Grammy. However in past international tournaments many of the matches have been shown on terrestrial Thai TV, so at this point it is not completely clear where matches will be available. However in the UK the matches are being shown by the BBC and ITV, so anyone who has access to these channels on their TV setup will be able to view them there.

VOUS ÊTES UN EMBARRAS

ENGLAND TEAM STRUGGLING TO MASTER CONVERSATIONAL FRENCH

■ ENGLAND

THE England squad is under pressure to master the subjunctive tense before travelling to France for Euro 2016.

While the majority of the 23-man squad can capably order a crepe and describe their hobbies to a pen-pal in French, manager Roy Hodgson fears their lack of grammatical nous will be shown up in the tournament.

He said: "It's a young squad, and I'm not expecting them to effortlessly gender nouns after a couple of weeks together.

"But if we're still confusing the indefinite and partive article when we take to the pitch in Marseille we're in big trouble.

"No, Marcus, no! He's your bloody teammate, you don't need to use the formal form of address! Tu, for goodness sake, tu!"

Another player said to be letting the side down is Wayne Rooney, who is yet to master French numbers, although he is apparently word perfect in the French for 'How much for a shag?'

Above: England manager Roy Hodgson tells critics of his side's language ability 'Pardon my French but please help yourself to just two of the complimentary baguettes'

Harry Kane said: "The pundits write us off, but I honestly believe we can correctly use any modal verb on our day and lift La Championnat d'Europe.

"Wait, I meant Le Championnat d'Europe. Damn."

Meanwhile Jermain Defoe has demonstrated why Hodgson shoud have selected him for the squad by recording a new disco version of the Bill Wyman classic 'Je suis un rock star', where the words 'rock star' are replaced with the word 'footballeur', while the B-side is a collaboration with Daft Punk on 'Je t'aime… moi non plus', originally made famous by Jane Birkin and Serge Gainsbourg.
