LONG RUNNING BEACH DISPUTE ENDING?

■ HUA HIN, THAILAND

A legal dispute between property owners and local authorities over the stretch of coast between the Fishing Pier at the north end of Naresdamri Road and the Chaomae Tubtim Shrine (also known as the Chinese Temple) appears to be heading towards a conclusion, thirteen years after a court case was brought by the Hua Hin Municipality and the Marine Department against the owners of the 52 buildings.

In 2014 the Prachuap Khiri Khan Provincial Court ruled they had violated the 1979 Building Control Act and had to dismantle the structures, issuing arrest warrants for several of the defendants for failing to comply with the Supreme Court's ruling. However, to date police had not arrested any of them while the Hua Hin municipality had not enforced the demolition order.

Pol Col Chatchai Riamek, acting commander of Prachuap Khiri Khan provincial police, said on Monday that he had instructed Hua Hin police chief, Pol Col Chaiyakorn Sriladaecho, to coordinate with the municipality and report the progress in the case. Hua Hin district chief Sutthipong Khlai-udom said a joint team of officials, including police of the Natural Resources and Environmental Crime Division, soldiers from the Internal Security Operations Command and officials from the Department of Special Investigation (DSI) and the Office of Public Sector Anti-Corruption Commission, would descend on the encroached beach and enforce the ruling. Mr Sutthipong added, "They will also take action against responsible officials who have violated Section 157 [of the Criminal Code] for dereliction of duty because some encroachers are investors with close links to certain local politicians and influential figures. So local officials have not enforced the court order."

Hua Hin mayor Nopporn Wuthikul urged caution as the information used during the trial might no longer be accurate, because of ownership changes and other modifications. We await to see what action transpires.

■ A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

This week it is..... One for the road

A final drink taken just before leaving on a journey.

The suggestion that this phrase derives from the supposed practice of offering condemned felons a final drink at pubs on the way to the the place of public execution in London - The Tyburn Tree, isn't supported by historical record. The phrase isn't known until the mid 20th century, long after Tyburn ceased to be a place of execution. It appears to have originated just as a colloquial reference to a departing drink in English pubs, just as 'a quick one' refers to a one taken in haste. The earliest citation that can be found of 'one more for the road' is from The Times, March 1939:

"Propaganda should be employed to train and fortify public opinion in the condemnation of persons who drink before driving - above all to discourage the practice of 'one for the road'."

That piece is as reproachful as a second citation from the same year is comical. This report, of a court case in England, was reported in the Canadian newspaper The Lethbridge Herald, in December 1939:

A cultivated English voice which said, "Come on, let's have one for the road." led a Weymouth innkeeper into court. Police outside his inn heard this remark - after closing time. So Landlord Frank Roe received a summons, The landlord's father explained in court that police had heard the English-speaking announcer of the German Zeesen radio station popularly known as "Lord Haw Haw." The summons was dismissed.

The phrase really took hold when Johnny Mercer used it in the lyrics of his song One for My Baby (and One More for the Road), which he wrote for Fred Astaire in 1943:

Its quarter to three
There's no one in the place 'cept you and me
So set em up Joe
I got a little story I think you oughta know

Were drinking my friend
To the end of a brief episode
So make it one for my baby
And one more for the road

The phrase has proven popular as a title. It has been used for a 1984 Harold Pinter play, a Stephen King short story and an album title by The Kinks (1980), April Wine (1984), Trouble (1994) and Ocean Colour Scene (2004). It was also the name of a 1995 British television series, starring Alan Davies.

The Australians, ever linguistically inventive, prefer to have 'one more for the bitumen'.

■ ROMANCE

An older couple were lying in bed one night. The husband was falling asleep, but the wife was in a romantic mood and wanted to talk.

She said: "You used to hold my hand when we were courting."

Wearily he reached across, held her hand for a second and tried to get back to sleep.

A few moments later she said: "Then you used to kiss me."

Mildly irritated, he reached across, gave her a peck on the cheek and settled down to sleep.

Thirty seconds later she said: "Then you used to bite my Neck."

Angrily, he threw back the bed clothes and got out of bed.

"Where are you going?" she asked.

"To get my teeth!"

■ BLOCKBUSTER

Steven Spielberg was discussing his new project - an action docudrama about famous composers starring top movie stars. Sylvester Stallone, Steven Segall, Bruce Willis, and Arnold Schwarzenegger were all present. Spielberg strongly desired the box office 'oomph' of these superstars, so he was prepared to allow them to select whatever composers they wished to portray, as long as they were famous.

"Well," started Stallone, "I've always admired Mozart. I would love to play him."

"Chopin has always been my favorite, and my image would improve if people saw me playing the piano," replied Willis. "I'll play him."

"I've always been partial to Strauss and his waltzes," said Segall. "I'd like to play him."

Spielberg was very pleased with these choices. "Sounds splendid." Then, turning to Schwarzenegger, he asked, "Who do you want to be, Arnold?" Arnold in a slow deliberate voice replied, "I'll be Bach."

"Doing business without advertising is like winking at a girl in the dark. You know what you are doing but nobody else does."

LIFE ON MARS

HOW TO SURVIVE AS AN ALIEN IN THAILAND

WORKING ON MARS

Many foreigners come to Thailand with the dream of buying or setting up and running a business here, as well as the thought that they will be able to work and earn a living here.

The reality is that this is neither a straightforward nor an easy thing to achieve, and this often leaves some either working illegally, or unable to sustain their business because of the financial barriers the law in Thailand imposes.

Some complain bitterly about this, and there is certainly an argument to be had that the regulations could be eased to encourage foreigners to start businesses and employ locals; however it seems that the authorities are acutely aware that such an easing may not reap the benefits some proclaim, and in a country where unemployment rates are so low (1.01% as of July 2016) it is easy to understand that thinking.

Given that a change in the regulations is unlikely then, foreigners will have to continue to work within them or face the consequences, but as with many laws here, they are not written or enforced in a very strict way much of the time, and there are also some little known 'wrinkles' that can make them less of a burden. For example, if a foreigner is married to a Thai, and the Thai is named as the Managing Director of the registered company employing the foreigner, the law stipulating a minimum of four Thai employees for every work permit issued is cut in half.

Anyone contemplating working in Thailand should both acquaint themselves with the relevant laws, and consult a good law firm to handle the process for them, for example Legal Services Hua Hin (see ad on page 12), unless you are lucky enough to have an employer who will do all this for you. The penalties for working illegally can be very high, ranging from fines of up to 100,000 baht to being thrown in jail for up to 5 years, and sometimes both, and given the number of people who have been caught doing so over the years, and the condtions in Thai jails, it seems like a crazy risk to take.

PROGRESSION OF TIME

This weeks date in history should need no explanation, because it is of course 15 years this Sunday since '9/11'.

I wasn't sure whether the recently unveiled Maka Nakhon building in Bangkok was intended as a homage to the Twin Towers, or just an unfortunate architectural oversight. But now it seems that the design of the building satisfies the needs of Feng Shui by wrapping it in the form of a dragon, which will generate positive energy.

Let's hope it works, because the building could also be at risk from the spirits in the cemetery next door. (Not the liquid kind - that's banned near sacred places isn't it?) Fortunately though the developer has the spirit problem covered as well, re-assuring potential occupiers that blessing ceremonies were carried out covering all bases - Buddhist, Christian and Brahmin. So that's alright then.

Now all we need to worry about is whether the Dutch architect responsible for the Maka Nakhon will escape prosecution for a breach of work permit rules, and, more importantly, what kind of development might replace that British shrine on Wireless Road. Because the British Embassy is selling up.

Five months ago a 'save the British Embassy' online petition was begun, but with only a pathetic 320 signatures it has clearly failed. The 23 rai (9 acre) site is expected to fetch at least 18 billion baht. A few million pounds for the UK Treasuries pot, but at the cost to Bangkok of the inevitable loss of another green space. That's progress.

There was progress in Hull last weekend as well, as the 9th annual Freedom Festival fought for space in the city centre with the orange barriers (see previous AWOLs for 'orange barriers'.) The Freedom Festival is a celebration of the abolition of slavery, in which Hull MP William Wilberforce was instrumental, and it is growing by the year. It doesn't do any harm to grab a bit of culture, and the festival is always good for spectacular music and firework displays, as well as much smaller quirky arty installations. This year was no exception, with what looked like a Tuk Tuk towing a bath tub filled with small children around the streets. The kids were armed with water pistols and of course enjoyed themselves, while the crowds taking photos of them probably hadn't been vetted at all.

Talking about vetting, you might want to avoid tuna for a while. With the 2,700 tonnes of illegally caught tuna seized in Phuket at the end of January having now been unloaded from its' equally illegal trawlers, it can only be a matter of time before some of it arrives in ChatChai market.

And finally - remember how expats always used to be advised to check the tyres on buses before getting on board? The passage of time might - hopefully - have seen some improvement in that department, but with the recent incident of a shredded tyre on a Nok Air plane out of Don Muang, a re-think of those tyre checks could be in order.

Quick thinking authorities insisted that there had been no debris on the runway that could have caused the tyre damage, which only leaves one other possibility.

The Cha-Am and Hua Hin Hash House Harrier Clubs meet alternate Saturdays for around an hour's. run/walk in the surrounding countryside followed by a social gathering. If you would like to come along then visit our website http// www.h2h3-cah3.weebly.com or Facebook at wwwfacebook.com/H2H3CAH3 for full details and directions. Please note that people attending and participating do so entirely at their own risk.

NEXT RUN NEXT RUN Saturday 10th September 2016 Meeting @ 4:00 pm.
Cha Am House Harriers (CAH3) Run #292
Hares: Space Cowboy
Location: Hua Hin, soi 6, AKA Bo Fai.
GPS: N 12* 37.868' E 099* 55.833'
Directions: From Petchkasem or from the Klong Road, turn west across the klong. Zero your odometer if you need to use it. From the klong you go 2 km to car park on the right side. Follow any HHH signs posted along the way. However, you do not turn off of soi 6 at any time until you see the HHH stop sign at the car park.
Get to the run site in plenty of time to deposit your hash taxes in the blue tax collection box provided. Put your tax payment into an envelope indicating the names of hashers paying up and the total amount included in the envelope. You need to have your taxes paid before the pre-run circle which will be at about 25 minutes after 4.
Taxes are: (This is brand new info so read it closely)
150 baht: Beer drinkers(with no discrimination made to sex at birth or any time later)
50 baht: No beer, unless you choose to bring your own.
25 baht: Young hashers over 8 years and under 18. (If you are drinking beer you bring you own)

On After: Remember Burger 3 just a short distance south of soi 6 on the left side going south? We have not had an On After there in many months but only because it has been closed. The grand re-opening is scheduled for Friday, 9 September. We'll go there on the 10th. It has a new name, La Marmite.

NO LEG TO STAND ON

MAJORITY OF PARALYMPIANS 'FIT ENOUGH FOR WORK', CLAIMS WORK AND PENSIONS SECRETARY

■ GREAT BRITAIN

Workshy Paralympians face cuts to their disability benefits under tight new proposals from Work and Pensions Secretary, Damian Green.

Green says he will target inspirational athletes with a broad spectrum of disabilities who 'take the benefits system for all they can get'.

"No one is more proud of our Paralympians than I am", he told us.

"However, if you can compete in the 2000 metres steeplechase with a prosthetic limb, chances are you can get on a bus and make it down to the Job Centre.

"Yesterday, I saw a so-called partially sighted archer hit a bullseye from a distance of fifty metres. Are you seriously telling me that person needs a guide dog?"

Green also had a message for the wheelchair bound athletes, as he introduced new proposals in line with the Government's continuing package of austerity measures.

"Just because you get a puncture does not entitle you to claim for money to cover a puncture repair kit, nor for someone to fix the pncture for you, even if you get down on your knees, err stumps, and beg."

Green is keen to target a 'small minority' who see the Paralympics as a free lunch or high-energy carbohydrate drink.

He added, "The lesson for scroungers is that if you are fit enough to propel yourself around in a modified go-kart, relying solely on the power of your upper arms, then you're well enough to train as a bricklayer who specialises in low-level walls.

"Providing it's not cash in hand."
