CHANGING FACES

A NEW LOOK AS AWOL PASSES ANOTHER MILESTONE

● HUA HIN

As some of our readers will be aware, we have been running a survey on a redesign for AWOL; this has now closed and the results have led to what you are reading right now, as we launch the new look AWOL. Thank you to everybody who responded to the survey, and we hope that you will all like the updated look, which has been quite extensive, although the content of the paper will remain as before.

The milestones we have passed recently were our 400th issue last week, and completing 8 years of publication in early October; we were planning to hold a party to celebrate both of those and the new look, but due to the current period of mourning in Thailand this has been postponed, and we will bring you news of the rearranged event as soon as we feel it is respectful to do so.

Please send us your comments and opinions on our new design, not just the front page but throughout the paper, as well as ideas, suggestions and constructive criticism for our content, and comments on local news; you can do so through a multitude of channels - by email to info@awolonline.net, to our Facebook page (AWOLexpat), via the 'Contact Us' button found on our website (www.awolonline.net), or on our Forum at www.awolonline.net/forum. We do want to hear from you, and if we get enough feedback every week, we would like to introduce a letters page, but this is entirely dependent on you, our readers.

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

Nothing will be what it seems this week, especially breakfast sausages.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

Were it officially sanctioned, judged by an impartial panel, and taking place somewhere other than your kitchen late at night, you'd pretty much shatter all existing hot dog eating records.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

You said you'd never forget all the little people who helped you along the way, but since becoming rich and famous you haven't thought about those midgets once.

ARIES MAR 21 - APR 20

Turns out it's not your relationship with your father that's been eating you up inside, but rather a three-foot long parasite lodged directly below your kidney.

TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

It takes a real man to admit when he's made a mistake. However, now that you're a woman, you can blame the sex-change operation on someone else.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

Due to its high incidence of hijinx, tomfoolery, and puns, you'll finally decide to stop answering doors during knock-knock jokes.

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22

The stars, in their infinite wisdom, indicate that the cute blonde you've been pointing them out to couldn't be more bored if she tried.

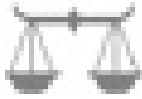
LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

You'll continue to grow as a human being this week, much to the relief of all those geneticists.

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

Home is where the heart is. Specifically, beneath the floorboards of the common room.

LIBRA SEP 23 – OCT 23



Every day on Earth is like a beautiful gift from God, which is thoughtful and all, but you'd probably prefer something you can actually use.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

Juggling three young children isn't easy for any mother, but then, that's why you start with tennis balls and bowling pins first.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

Take heart: There are people with bigger problems than yours, and acting like you care about them will get you laid.

● A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

THIS WEEK IT IS..... OLD CHESTNUT

A story that has been told repeatedly before, a 'venerable' joke. Hence, in extended use, anything trite, stale, or too often repeated.

Old chestnutThe phrase 'old chestnut' has only an indirect association with chestnut trees or with their fruit. The derivation of the expression turns out to be a contender for old chestnut status itself. The story goes like this: in 1816, a melodrama called Broken Sword, by the playwright and theatrical manager William Dimond, was performed at the Royal Covent Garden Theatre, London. The play contained this exchange:

Zavior: I entered the wood at Collares, when suddenly from the thick boughs of a cork tree...
Pablo: (Jumping up.) A chesnut, Captain, a chesnut... Captain, this is the twenty-seventh time I have heard you relate this story, and you invariably said, a chesnut, till now.

Despite a drubbing from the critics, the play was a success and later transferred to theatres in the USA. So far, so factual.

Here's where we move from fact to plausibility. In the 1880s, many American newspapers began using 'chestnut' in the way we do now, to refer to hoary, oft-repeated stories, and the term became established in the common lingo thereafter. The 'old' was added later as an intensifier.

In April 1896, the Ohio newspaper The Daily Herald took it unto itself to explain the phrase's origin. It published a story about the actor who had played Pablo in early productions of Broken Sword:

William Warren, who had often played the part of Pablo, was at a 'stag' dinner when one of the gentlemen present told a story of doubtful age and originality. 'A chestnut,' murmured Mr. Warren, quoting from the play. 'I have heard you tell the tale these 27 times.' The application of the line pleased the rest of the table, and when the party broke up each helped to spread the story and Mr. Warren's commentary.

The play itself, although popular in its time, was 80 years old by 1896 and Warren was long dead, so the Daily Herald story was (at best) based on Chinese whispers or (at worst) pure invention. However, even if that stag dinner wasn't the first use of the 'chesnut' expression and Warren didn't originate it, someone else could easily have used the same source. The gist of the tale, that 'old chestnut' derives from the play Broken Sword, hovers somewhere between plausibility and fact and many choose to believe it.

● TICKLE ME ELMO
Betty is hired at the Tickle Me Elmo factory and she reports for her first day promptly at 8am.
The next day, at 8.45am the foreman throws open the personnel manager's office door and begins ranting about the new employee.
He complains that she is incredibly slow and the whole line is backing up, putting the entire production line behind schedule.
The personnel manager decides he should see this for himself, so the two men march down to the factory floor.
When they get there the line is so backed up that there are Tickle Me Elmo's all over the factory floor and they're literally beginning to pile up.
At the end of the line stands Betty, surrounded by mountains of Tickle Me Elmo's. She has a roll of plush red fabric and a huge bag of small marbles. The two men watch in amazement as she cuts a little piece fabric, wraps it around 2 marbles and begins to carefully sew the little package between Elmo's legs.
The personnel manager bursts into laughter. After several minutes of hysterics he pulls himself together and approaches Betty.
"I'm sorry", he says to her, barely able to keep a straight face, "but I think you misunderstood the instructions I gave you yesterday. Your job is to give Elmo two test tickles."

● DANDRUFF
Blonde : "My husband's suffering from dandruff and nothing we've tried seems to work."
Brunette : "Oh, that's no problem. I gave mine Head and Shoulders and that did the trick."
Blonde : "How do you give shoulders?"

● SCANDAL
I saw a midget climb down the wall of a prison yesterday and glare at me.
I thought, "That's a little condescending."

● CLOWN
If you are attacked by one of these evil clowns there is only one way to defend yourself.
Go for the Juggler

● CLOWN AGAIN
Why aren't moderate friendly clowns speaking out against these extremist killer clowns?!

● HALLOWEEN
Just thought I'd nip over to my Nan's, and fair play to her, at 96, she had all the Halloween decorations up, cobwebs and insects in the windows and a skeleton on the couch.
She always makes a big effort, but there was no answer...I'll pop back next year.

● EVERY BREATH YOU TAKE

We have touched on the subject of driving in Thailand before in this section, and no doubt it will come up again in the future, because so much of life here revolves around road transport, whether you are driving yourself or taking the various forms of private and public road transport.

When you are driving yourself, you will be very lucky never to have any dealings with the supposed custodians of the road, the Thai Traffic police. While many of these are good, honest, competent and sensible officers, there is a sizable minority that trash all the good work the others do.

Chief among those in that part of the police force who are seen as either incompetent, or worse, corrupt, are the ones who control the traffic flow, either by manipulation of the traffic lights or by hand signals. Traffic lights have been around for a very long time, and are generally pre-programmed to follow a set pattern; manual override is obviously necessary on occasion, but most of the time the lights can be left to run on their own. In Thailand, however, and in Hua Hin in particular, every major junction with lights has a police box with an officer sitting in it, and they have a particular penchant for pushing the buttons to override the set sequence, regardless of whether the traffic flow requires it.

Some might say that they do so in order to catch drivers who regularly pass through that junction out, in order to extract a fine from them, although we couldn't possibly confirm that. Others might say that they just don't know what they are doing, and as a consequence drivers find themselves falling foul of the law, and certainly our experience of officers attempting to direct traffic in the street suggests that this might be the case, as frequently traffic jams are worse when the police take control.

The Thai people themselves have very little time for the police here either, and comments we have heard often include the words 'lazy', 'corrupt' and 'useless', but it is unfair to label all police as being the same. Some are incredibly dedicated and industrious, and would not be out of place in most Western police forces, and they must get as frustrated as the people at the actions (or inaction) and incompetence of their colleagues.

If the powers that be wanted to ensure a lasting popularity with both the electorate and foreigners visiting Thailand, then it need do no more than sort out the Thai police - train them better, pay them better and be more ruthless in getting rid of those officers who drag down the reputation and practices of the rest of the force. We don't think it is likely to happen, but it is always good to have a dream, isn't it?

● SCARY THOUGHT

This weekend is set to be a long drawn out celebration of Halloween here in the UK. As often happens when these events fall on a Sunday the population tends to react by spreading the festivities over at least three nights, which makes the supermarkets very happy.

This year one supermarket is selling life size models of witches, with skeleton faces that cackle when you walk past them, which can be yours for a mere 60 pounds, or around 2600 baht in these days of the weak pound. Who says that our economy is struggling?

But why do we celebrate October 31st at all? We are carrying on ancient traditions begun by the Celts, Pagans and Gauls which have merged over time and gained a sprinkling of Christianity along the way.

The Celts and Pagans believed that All Hallows Eve, the evening before All Saints Day on November 1st, marked the end of summer and the passage of light to dark. It was a time to celebrate the harvest and to take stock of supplies in preparation for the long, dark, frightening days ahead. After all they wouldn't have been sure that their food supplies would last, or even if there would be another Spring.

For the Gauls it was also a dangerous night, because on All Hallows Eve the boundaries between the living and the dead were at their weakest. The dead would return and wreak havoc on the crops, so they must be appeased, and one way to show them respect was to dress up as spirits.

All very sensible precautions at a time when people didn't understand how the world worked, and not too dissimilar to Songkran and the use of spirit houses today. But an event which expats might not be too sorry to miss out on this year.

Talking about crops and harvests, as Brexit drags along some British farmers are worrying about losing their cheap labour. Traditionally those labour intensive fruit and pea picking jobs were tailor made for gap year students, but with gap year full moon parties taking priority the work passed to European migrants, who, it is feared, could now also disappear due to proposed visa restrictions. (Sound familiar?)

With re-assurances from the government that new rules won't affect existing migrant workers falling on deaf ears, one solution has been suggested which sounds far too sensible to have come from within the Palace of Westminster. Use prisoners instead. Charge the farmers the minimum hourly rate, pay the prisoners their even lower wage for working, and use the profit to help maintain the prisons. Give that person a Knighthood!

Seriously though, if Brexit continues to force people to come up with such sensible and obvious solutions to what many thought would be a disaster, then surely it will succeed?

On This Day

On October 29th 1986 the then Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher opened the M25 motorway, hailing it a splendid achievement. It is fair to say that 30 years on there is a bit more traffic on it.

FEATURED GAME

SATURDAY 29TH OCTOBER 2016
PREMIER LEAGUE
Man Utd v Burnley 15:00
It has been a miserable week for Jose Mourinho and his team after being humiliated on his return to Stamford Bridge, and at press time the result of their League Cup tie against Manchester City was unknown, but we imagine this resulted in another loss. Here is a chance to redeem themselves in a game most will expect them to win, but Burnley are no pushovers. United are not scoring many goals so we expect a tight affair, with the away team defending in numbers and attacking on the break. Expect the boos to ring out as we predict a shock narrow Burnley win.

UNITED WE FALL

GARY NEVILLE REFUSING TO COME DOWN FROM OLD TRAFFORD ROOF

● ENGLAND

GARY Neville has been sat on the roof of Old Trafford since midnight on Sunday, police have confirmed.

The former United defender was seen climbing the side of the stadium last night with an Alex Ferguson doll under one arm, swatting at moths caught in the security lights as if they were biplanes.

Inspector Nikki Hollis said: "He's said he's not coming down until scientists work out a way of cloning Gary Pallister.

"I got one of my officers to sing the 1994 Status Quo hit Come On You Reds to try and soothe him, but when he got to the 'keep us at the top where we belong' bit he started throwing roof tiles at him."

Police negotiators have been unable to coax Neville down after an intense 45-minute conversation involving Paul Pogba's fee and Wayne Rooney's wage bill convinced them he had a point.

Above: Psychiatrists have been concerned about Gary Neville's mental health for some time

Alternative solutions are now being suggested including building a commentary box on the roof or waiting for the local weather to eventually 'rinse' him off the building.

Hollis said: "We've got until Saturday to get him down safely or cover the whole place with safety netting before United play Burnley."

Pundits are widely predicting another heavy defeat for Mourinho's men, and hopes are dwindling that Neville will ever be coaxed off the roof.
