RED ARROWS DISPLAY CANCELLED

● HUA HIN

While no official announcement was made this week before we went to press, the much anticipated display in Hua Hin by the crack RAF aerobatics team, the Red Arrows, was cancelled at the start of the week. We can only guess at the reasons for this, with the most likely being that the display date fell within the 30 day mourning period for Hia Majesty the King, although projected inclement weather may also have had a bearing on the decision.

Given that the team have performed in Thailand before, there is some hope that they will return at some point in the future, although it is thirteen years since they last performed in the Kingdom. Whether there will be a future planned display in Hua Hin is impossible to know. The team also cancelled their display in Singapore due to severe weather concerns.

The logisitics of mounting the extensive Asia-Pacific and Middle East Tour of the Red Arrows would have been huge, so we are sure that whatever the reason for the cancellation, the lateness of the news confirming it would have been down to attempts to allow it to continue if at all possible. The safety of the pilots and respect for the people of Thailand must take priority though. We can only hope that they will be invited back in the near future to show the strong British support that there has always been for Thailand, with the two countries sharing so many similarities, notably their monarchies. A display over the town that the King regarded as home would be a magnificent way to show this.

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

As it turns out, there are indeed mountains high enough and valleys low enough to keep you from your love.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

The stars wouldn't take the risks you do, but, hey, it's your life for the next six months or so.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

You'll be trapped in a hell of your own making, forcing you to admit that you really should have put in more bathrooms.

ARIES MAR 21 - APR 20

Your favourite T-shirt brings about your downfall when a literal-minded mob follows its instructions and fills you to the indicated line with margaritas.

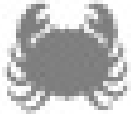
TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

Many have felt the Love Which Dare Not Speak Its Name, but you'll experience the Love That Bellows Its Name Out A Crosstown-Bus Window All Day.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

Once again, the spectre of war will dominate international news, preventing people the world over from learning how you made the world's largest apple pie.

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22



Your problem is that you have no sense of proportion, which is why you paid surgeons to enlarge your head and hands.

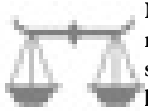
LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

Some people believe your house in Heaven is filled with all the things you lost while on earth, which explains the dead pets lying everywhere.

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

That run for the record books once again falls short when you start Boston's all-time second-largest fire.

LIBRA SEP 23 – OCT 23



Next time, when passing a note intended to find out if someone likes you, you'll know to provide more than one box to check.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

The story of the universe has always fascinated you, but the ending will leave you with a lot of unanswered questions.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

You'll never smile again after the tragic loss of your lower jaw and lips this week.

● A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

THIS WEEK IT IS..... WORSE FOR WEAR

Shabby or worn through use; drunk.

The expression 'worse for wear' is something of a linguistic oddity in that it has endured a variety of different meanings, versions and spellings during its lifetime. Let's start with the spelling indignities. 'Worse for wear' or 'worst for wear'? Both of these are found in print but, of course, the phrase is 'worse for wear', the alternative being a simple but sadly commonplace muddling of 'worse' and 'worst'. 'Worse for ware' and 'worse for where' are also sometimes seen, again occasionally using 'worst' rather than 'worse', and there's little better explanation for them other than that some people can't spell 'wear'.

Anyone familiar with etymology will have come across the redoubtable John Heywood's glossary A Dialogue Conteinyng the Nomber in Effect of all the Prouerbes in the Englishe Tongue. 'Worse for wear' is one of the older phrases in the language and Heywood included it in the book's first edition in 1546:

Al thyng is the wors for the wearyng.

The meaning there is clear - 'as things are used they deteriorate'. As it became established in the language 'worse for wear' developed into a synonym for 'worn out'. At this stage the variant 'none the worse for wear' was coined, meaning 'used but not worn out' and also dragging along its misspelled 'worst/ware/where' versions. The English poet Charles Churchill used that expression, in a rather backhand compliment to his wife, in the poem The Ghost, 1794:

Some, in my place, to gain their ends,
Would give relations up and friends;
Would lend a wife, who, they might swear
Safely, was none the worse for wear.

Worse for wearInto the 20th century and the phrase took on another meaning, that is, 'drunk'. This was taken up by the UK tabloid press in the 1960s and has now superseded 'tired and emotional' as the euphemism of choice when describing some young wag falling out of a taxi at 3am.

● DILEMMA
Here's a dilemma for you ... what would you do?
This test only has one question, but it's a very important one.
Please don't answer it without giving it some serious thought.
By giving an honest answer you will discover where you stand morally. The test features an unlikely, completely fictional situation, in which you will have to make a decision.
Remember that your answer needs to be honest, yet spontaneous. Thoughtfulness is important for this evaluation to be meaningful!
Ready? Begin!
You're in Florida... In Miami, to be exact... There is chaos around you, caused by a hurricane and severe floods. This is a flood of major proportions. You are a photojournalist working for a major newspaper caught in the middle of this great disaster. The situation is nearly hopeless. You're trying to shoot career-making photos. There are houses and people swirling around you, some disappearing under the water. Nature is showing all its destructive fury when you see a man and a woman in the water! They are fighting for their lives, trying not to be swept away with the water and debris. You move closer. Somehow the couple look familiar. Suddenly, you know who it is ... it's Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump! At the same time you notice that the raging waters are about to take them under, forever.
You have two options. You can save them or you can take the most dramatic photos of your life. You can save the life of the President-elect and a former Secretary of State, or you can shoot a Pulitzer Prize-winning photo, documenting the deaths of the two most famous people on earth right now.
Now, here's the question (please give an honest answer).
Would you select colour film, or would you rather go with the classic simplicity of black and white?

● WEDDING
During a same sex Wedding, the pastor couldn't find the right word to pronounce the couple, as he felt calling them Husband and Wife was wrong since they were both males.....
After a long time of thinking he finally said: "I hereby declare you "Man United"

● LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD
Little Red Riding Hood has been found in a critical condition. Paramedics have stabilised her condition, but she's not out of the woods yet.

● BIRTHDAY PRESENT
For a birthday present I've bought my wife a new fridge.

● ELECTED!

2016 has seen some crucial and surprising national votes around the world, most notably the EU referendum in the UK, and the Presidential Election in the USA. Thailand was meant to have an election this year, but for various reasons this has been postponed a number of times. What they did have was a referendum on the Constitution, which was carried with a 61% vote in favour of what the military government had proposed, on a 59% turnout.

Wikipedia states that "The primary difference between the 2016 constitution and the 2007 document was that the Senate would become a fully appointed chamber rather than a partially elected one during the 5 year "transitional period" stipulated in the charter. This was seen as an effort by the National Council for Peace and Order (NCPO) to retain influence once it has left office, as it will have the right to appoint the 250 members. The Senate would also be granted veto power over the House of Representatives on amending the constitution, and a Prime Minister will be allowed to be appointed from outside either house."

When the results of the vote are examined in more detail, there is what some might say a surprising number of votes in favour of the government's position in areas regarded as hostile to them, although (again according to Wikipedia) "The NCPO banned criticism of the draft constitution and prohibited monitoring of the referendum. Activists against the document were arrested, detained, and prosecuted in military courts, whilst voters who expressed their intention to vote against the draft were also arrested and prosecuted by the military regime."

Given events since the vote, it could be seen as a wise move by the current leaders to keep a strong grip on the country, but this clearly is at odds with those who argue strongly for democracy, as well as the parts of the country who are strong supporters of former Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra, and the people in the south who have been engaged in a long running campaign, violent at times, to get better treatment for the largely Muslim areas close to the Malaysian border.

Thailand is clearly going to go through more difficult times as they try to square their circle, but they might do well to heed the warnings that have been issued by the events in other countries. The Thai people are generally more accepting and less demonstrative than their western counterparts when faced with something seen as 'not fair' but there is evidence that this is changing. We hope that an equitable solution is pursued and successfully achieved for all in Thailand, and the Thais often do find a way when none seems possible, something else to love about this country.

● THE DANGERS OF DEMOCRACY

During the summer several Hull folk claimed to have seen a werewolf. Even more strange there were no reports that any of them were on their way home from the pub when the sightings occurred. The werewolf however was no stranger to the location, along the banks of an old open drain, as there have been other reports of its' appearance from time to time over the years.

But the strange beast seemed to be more active this year, even prompting teams of paranormal investigators and werewolf fans to search for it. Preferably in the dark when the drain was suitably shrouded in mist. Typical werewolf conditions in fact, but to no avail.

Then at the end of October the sightings were explained by an academic at the Gothic Manchester Festival. There a Doctor Sam George explained that the sightings all took place close to a part of the country where some of our last remaining native wolves once roamed, and that the visions could be explained as 'a result of cultural collective guilt at the extinction of an entire indigenous species.'

I think I'll stick with the idea of a real live werewolf - it sounds like much more fun.

Also in Manchester pop star Justin Bieber walked off stage during a gig because his fans wouldn't quit screaming. It seems he was trying to be serious for a change, but his fans wouldn't listen to his pleas, probably because they couldn't hear him. But he must have had a talking to by management backstage because he emerged again and grovelled to his audience, explaining that he was just trying to have 'a moment' with them. Watch out for Bieber at a Buddhist retreat near you.

November 11th is of course Armistice Day, marking the signing of the armistice which brought World War 2 to an end. It is also the day on which, in 1989, East German people began to break down the Berlin wall. Both events should remind us that people shouldn't be divided by politics, race or religion, but in the real world of course they still are, as even FIFA has recently shown. Not to mention the destruction of 'the Jungle' migrant camp in Calais.

Meanwhile a new camp has appeared in the centre of Hull. Not for migrants, but for homeless locals, who are pitching their tents at night on one of the few remaining spaces not yet affected by resurfacing work. 'Tent City' as it is known serves to highlight the lack of hostel places locally, with just 9 hostel beds available last weekend for over 20 homeless people.

No doubt Tent City will also be despatched in good time for Hulls' City of Culture year which begins in just 7 weeks, while the workmen with their orange barriers will almost certainly still be around. There are times when you have to hand it to the Thais, who can build a few hotels faster than Hull can lay paving stones, and this is one of those times.

Now, are you welcoming the return of Thai soaps to your TV screens, or just looking forward to floating your Khratong? Whatever you do on Monday watch out for a stray werewolf baying at that huge full moon.

On This Day

As already referred to in this week's column, in 1918 the Armistice was signed by the Allies and Germany at 11am on this day, ending World War 1. On another historical war note, it was also the day in 1745 when Bonnie Price Charlie's army entered England.

FEATURED GAME

SATURDAY 12TH NOVEMBER 2016
FIFA WORLD CUP QUALIFYING - EUROPEAN REGION
England v Scotland (F) 02:45

A game that is as unpredictable as the US Presidential election, as these oldest of foes face each other for the 113th time; possibly the local derby to top them all, which means throw the form book out of the window. Scottish fans and players will want this more than any other game they have played, and that will count for a lot - they will be biting into tackles and have an extra yard all over the pitch. There will be cards, inevitably, on both sides, and ultimately they may decide the outcome. We are going to predict a very narrow win for England.

WORLD CHAMPIONS

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA CONTINUES TO DOMINATE BASEBALL WORLD SERIES

● USA

The all-conquering Americans last week tightened their grip on the baseball World Series, leaving 195 other countries trailing in their wake.

This time it was the turn of the Chicago Cubs to reinforce America's total domination of the series by beating the Cleveland Indians 8-7 on a thrilling night for their millions of fans worldwide.

Since it's inception in 1903, no other country has come close to the world title as the American baseball juggernaut has rumbled over all-comers.

One of the first to congratulate the triumphant American team was president elect, Donald Trump, who spoke to reporters from Florida where he is currently on the campaign trail.

Forming an "o" with his thumb and forefinger and moving his hand up and down, Trump told reporters: "This is a tremendous win for America. It's just tremendous.

Left: Wrigley Field, famous for it's starring role in 'The Blues Brothers'

"In fact, if I were to try to tell you how tremendous this is, you wouldn't believe me. Under my presidency, this sort of tremendous event would be happening all the time.

"You would all be so proud. So proud. So proud of me and proud of your country. I can't tell you how proud you would be because you wouldn't believe me.

"However, under Hillary, none of these tremendous achievements would happen. Hillary is a crook who belongs in jail. She is not tremendous, and I will jail her. Jail…is…where…she…belongs!"

The triumphant Cubs team will now embark on a world tour of Illinois to celebrate their remarkable world-beating achievement.
