THE JELLYFISH ARE OUT THERE; SOMETHING NEEDS TO BE DONE

● THAILAND

Reports this week of tourists who were stung by jellyfish in Pranburi have served as a timely reminder to everyone that jellyfish are a real and present danger to those people who enjoy swimming or even paddling in the sea along this coastline.

The threat is somewhat seasonal, but this time of year is known to be worse than others, and all kinds of jellyfish have been seen in the waters of the area, including the deadly box jellyfish. It is advisable to either avoid swimming in the sea, or if you must, to wear sswimuits and/or clothing that covers most of your body, as the stings are not only potentially deadly, painful and unpleasant, but can also leave some nasty scarring. Parents should actively discourage their children from swimming in the sea at this time of year.

The incident last weekend occurred along a six kilometer stretch of beach between Pak Nam Pran and Khao Kalok, which is approximately 15 kilometres south of Hua Hin, with eight foreign tourists requiring medical treatment at Pranburi hospital. In this case, rescue workers said the Chrysaora jellyfish were found in the sea and washed up on the beach. Warning signs were to be erected in that area, but it does seem that, year on year, the problem with jellyfish in the seas around Hua Hin is getting worse. Given that both the authorities and businesses are keen to attract more and more people to visit the area, it is perhaps time to consider measures to prevent the jellyfish coming into areas where people like to swim, as well as more warning signs and information to ensure that those going to other more secluded beaches know about the possible risk. The beach and sea is one of the attractions for people visiting this region, so it is time, for once, for those in charge to try and think ahead.

● A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

THIS WEEK IT IS....MIDDLE OF THE ROAD

Something unadventurous or inoffensive; opting to go neither one way or the other.

This phrase conjures up similar images to that of 'sitting on the fence', that is, portraying something that is not sure enough of itself to go one way or the other. It seems a rather odd choice of words to describe something that is bland and safe - surely the middle of the road is the last place to expect safety.

The figurative use of the phrase began in America towards the end of the 19th century. It was used to describe the policies of political parties who attempted to avoid alienating any particular set of voters by saying very little of substance which might annoy them (nothing changes). The term was especially aimed at The Populist Party (or People's) Party. There are early references in print to 'middle of the road' which aren't specifically political in nature but they are considerably outnumbered by those which are; for example, this piece from the November 1891 issue of the Californian magazine Overland Monthly:

"He wanted the people with him. He kept in the middle of the road, and he kept his party there; and he walked in the light and in safety."

Middle of the road is now often used these days to describe bland and undemanding popular music. This is also of US origin and is known there since the 1950s; for example, this piece from the Ohio paper The Lima News, December 1956:

"He [Randy Wood - head of Dot Records] put out some records of local musicians—not country music or downright jazz but what he called "middle of the road music."

By the 1970s this term was well-enough established to spawn its own, if slightly inaccurate, acronym - MOR..

YOUR STARS

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

You'll realize that you hallucinated that everyone was wearing business casual all weekend, which explains why Halloween was so awkward last year.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

Romance will once again pass you by when the love of your life decides to go with a person who makes better mixtapes.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

You will get a reasonably good deal on a necessary household item, which is frankly more than an asshole like you deserves.

ARIES MAR 21 - APR 20

After taxes, overhead, and legal fees, that million-dollar idea you've been working on for years will wind up costing you several thousand dollars.

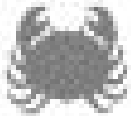
TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

You'll finally realize a dream you've had since childhood when a huge scary monster comes out from under your bed and eats you all up.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

The reason for your recent crises of conscience becomes clear this week when you realize the angel from your right shoulder and the devil from your left have been sleeping together for a year now.

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22



Next week won't be the best you've ever had, but it will advance medical understanding of genital implosion by leaps and bounds.

LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

A good friend will be a pillar of strength and selflessly support you in a harrowing crisis. Show your appreciation by sending them a note that says "Thanks for your support."

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

You'll continue to get away with your horrendous crimes against humanity without suffering consequences, although they will eventually get you for the tax evasion.

LIBRA SEP 23 – OCT 23

You won't be absolutely certain you like the changes in yourself, especially as you'll appeal to a whole new group of people, after they make a 12" dance remix or you.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

There's nothing wrong with being a belt-and-suspenders-type, but you should probably reconsider being a leather-shorts-and-no-shirt type as well.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

The FDA will realize their mistake too late to prevent your death after they accidentally name you as part of a complete breakfast.

'I'd like some nails,' Michael requested of the travelling tinker. 'How long would you like them?' asked the man.

'Forever, if that's all right with you,' said Michael.

O'Gara was arrested and sent for trial for armed bank robbery. After due deliberation, the jury foreman stood up and announced, 'Not guilty.'

'That's grand,' shouted O'Gara, 'Does that mean I get to keep the money?'

Passport CAFE HUA HIN THAILAND ADMITTED TO EAT AND DRINK FEBRUARY 2015

Please note that we will be closed for a family vacation from Sunday 3rd September to Tuesday 12th September

Directions: From Hua Hin go north on the Klong (Canal) Road through the traffic lights and turn left at the blue bridge with the water tower next to it, then immediately right before the 7-11. Follow this road for approximately 1.5 km and you will find us on the right opposite Tropical Hill.

● ISLAND LIFE

This week we leave Hua Hin and Hull for a while, to take a look at life on Easter Island through the eyes of a woman who was born there 90 years ago.

Her name is Reina. She has lived on that remote volcanic Pacific rim island all her life and seen a lot of changes, not all for the good, in the place she knows by its' real name, Rapa Nui.

Easter Island had been considered too remote for most countries to bother with, but eventually, fearing that it might be colonised by France, Britain stepped in and gave the go ahead for Chile to annex it, which in 1888 it did. Then in about 1895 Chile leased 90 per cent of Rapa Nui territory to the Williamson- Balfour company, the Chilean based subsidiary of Balfour Williamson and Co, a shipping company based in Liverpool.

The lease was for 50 years, allowing Williamson-Balfour to turn their 90 per cent of the island into a sheep farm, and during those years the islanders were largely confined to a small, fenced off corner of the land, where they lived in slave like conditions until the 1960's. It was there, in 1927, that Reina was born to a local mother and Scottish father. Her father had already spent several years in Chile, where he probably worked for Williamson-Balfour before moving to Easter Island. He stayed there long enough to produce three children, daughter Reina and two sons, but when Reina was five years old her father moved to another part of the island to dip sheep, before returning to Chile. She was sent to live with a great aunt and uncle, and didn't see her father again until the 1960's.

Part of Easter Island culture was that raising children was a community activity, and for the next 9 years Reina was passed on to other households. By the age of 10 she still had little schooling, having to spend time gathering food or clearing rocks for whichever family she was with. There was never enough to eat. Families were given a sheep now and then by Williamson-Balfour, who also provided them with flour but little else. Of those childhood years Reina says 'that was a time of bad living. We used to go hungry all the time'. There had also been an epidemic of illness which, with no doctor on the island, killed many people including her uncle.

When she was 14 years old Reina was 'married' to another islander. 'That was criminal' she says. '(In the past) you were obliged to marry, some as young as eleven...I didn't even know what it meant. Since legally we weren't allowed to marry because we were minors we were simply sent off to live together'.

During the years which followed Reina had eleven children, concerning herself with raising and educating them so that they didn't have to go through what she had. There was no help from her husband, who beat her and put one of their sons to work at the age of seven. She did think about leaving, but had nowhere else to go. Williamson-Balfour and their sheep still occupied most of the island, not giving up their lease until synthetics had begun to reduce the demand for wool after the war, so she sold chickens, butter and cheese to support her children.

When the the land was finally returned to the islanders it was in very poor condition. Fields had been burned to encourage the renewal of grazing pasture for the sheep, and in turn the sheep had provided fertilizer. Easter Island had already suffered de forestation in the 1600's, when trees had been used in part to provide a way of moving the iconic stone heads - or Moai - into place. In fact when the trees ran out the carving of Moai ceased, so fires had to be made using corn cobs and cow dung.

Reina is at pains to point out that the local men were lazy womanisers who drank all the time, but things have improved in more recent years. One of her sons owns a hotel. The statues are now protected, tourism has been encouraged and there are more trees, along with a familiar sounding dual pricing policy for visitors to the Moai. Chile now helps Rapa Nui financially, and rightly so. But it has taken some very strong women like Reina to think about the future of the island and its' children, and to some extent that battle still goes on, as islanders try to ensure the continued teaching of their native language for future generations.

Increased tourism and movement of the local people to Chile for work has also led to more island women marrying foreign men. One of those women was raised by Reina in addition to her own brood of eleven, because she had been born the youngest of another large family, and considered too small and weak at birth for her own mother to cope with. That girl also moved to Chile for work, where she met and married her own farang tourist - my brother.

On This Day

Our date in history is about another volcanic Pacific rim island. Krakatoa, where on August 26th 1883 the volcano eruption brought unprecedented disruption. The resulting 120 foot high tidal wave killed 36,000 people on nearby islands, and the volcano blasted 5 cubic miles of earth up to a height of 50 miles.

5,000 orange ecstasy pills shaped like Donald Trump have been seized by police

A batch of drugs fashioned to resemble US President and general laughing-stock Donald Trump have been seized by German police.

Roughly 5,000 orange ecstasy tablets, which feature Trump's distinctive hairstyle and have his name on the back, were confiscated in the city of Osnabruck.

A 51-year-old Austrian man and his 17-year-old son were arrested during the seizure after their vehicle was searched by the police.

Police believe the class-A drugs would have been sold online using the slogan: 'Trump makes partying great again.'

The drugs were worth roughly €40,000 (£37,000), and were seized along with a large quantity of cash that was found in the vehicle.

It is thought the 'Trump pills' originated in the Netherlands.

Suspect with drugs up his backside didn't go to toilet for nine days

A man has been jailed for drugs offences after he avoided evacuating his narcotics for nine days.

Mounkadir Mustapha, 25, from Coulsdon, Surrey, was kept under round-the-clock observation by police waiting for him to pass his stash.

Eventually he was charged with intent to supply with a class A drug.

He has now been jailed for three years and five months after pleading guilty to supplying heroin, crack cocaine and cannabis.

Police said that he was spotted in Bournemouth on April 12 with another man and people suspected that he was dealing drugs.

A day earlier an off-duty police officer who had previously searched him saw him approach a teenager for a suspected drug deal near McDonald's.

They arrested him after finding a sock containing 10 wraps of cannabis in his boxer shorts. During a search they discovered another package had been 'secreted in Mustapha's bottom'.

Police also found messages on his phone relating to drug dealing, leading to his conviction.

Home that used to be a public toilet on the market for £330,000

A semi-detached house that used to be a public toilet has gone on the market for £330,000 – nothing to those flush with cash.

The one-bed home was converted in 2016 and is said to 'boast' an open-plan kitchen, living area, and cloakroom.

It has under-floor heating, a contemporary glass staircase leading to a double bedroom with an en-suite shower room, and a courtyard enclosed by a brick wall.

It is presumed its toilet facilities are also pretty special.

The public convenience had been set for demolition but a residents' campaign put a stop to that and instead the site was converted into two apartments.

The house in Ewell Village, Surrey, has been listed on the Rightmove property website for £330,000 by Mark Anthony Estate Agents.

According to GetSurrey the property had been sold just last year for £285,000 suggesting strong growth in the housing market given the 16% jump.

The block, called Bourneview, backs onto a green open space that includes the Grade II listed Bourne Hall.

The toilets had been auctioned by Epsom and Ewell Borough Council in 2012 for £68,000.

Man jailed for taking theory tests for other drivers

A man has been jailed after sitting theory tests for prospective drivers 'who could not read English signs'.

Swallaxadin Bashir, 39, had charged people £500 to complete their exams and had already been locked up twice for the same offence. His latest crimes were committed last year when he was out on licence. Bashir was caught when two DVSA test centres became suspicious and sent his details to the DVSA investigator Paul Chinery.

The father-of-one would arrive for tests with his customers' provisional licenses, before forging their signatures and answering a series of security questions.

Bashir, from Coventry, admitted to two charges of fraud by false representation at Warwick Crown Court, and was jailed for 18 months.

Kevin Saunders, defending, admitted his client was proficient at what he had did. He added: 'He's a one-trick pony. He required money for accommodation for him and his son, and this was all he knew. He needs to learn new skills.'

MATCH REPORT NONTHABURI FC 0 – 4 HUA HIN CITY FC

We were coming into this game riding high on the back of 2 consecutive victories, but the team news was not good. 3 stalwarts of the rejuvenated side would not be starting due to illness. Ali G, Ratchapark and Amos (who did make a 2nd half appearance) were all unwell. However, such is the quality of the Hua Hin squad these days, replacements would just slot into the side, and we would hardly notice the join. Coach Sebastien has the entire squad playing as a well drilled unit. Nonthaburi would probably be looking at the team sheet, and think they were in for an easy day at the office.

Natchapon looked to be attracting extra attention from the goalkeeping coach just before the start, and we were worried that he'd picked up an injury during warm up. However, he started, and despite picking up 2 early injuries, went on to keep his 3rd clean sheet of the season.

From the start, Hua Hin took command, and enjoyed the early chances, although Natchapon was called upon to make a very important save early on. The first half was fairly even, with Hua Hin being slightly on top.

I don't know what happened at half time, but Hua Hin came out in the second half, and had pushed the game up a few notches. It was nice to see Dorian on for an entire match, and some of his cheeky flick-ons were splitting the opposition's defence in half.

Wuttichai opened the scoring, followed quickly by a lovely header by Katchatip. Nonthaburi tried their best to get back into the game, but left themselves open to the counter attack, which Arnon gratefully capitalised on, grabbing a brace to make him the clubs leading goal scorer.

Arnon's 2nd goal was courtesy of Poranarong, who could have just as easily have taken the shot himself, but generously laid the ball off.

A very satisfying result, which shows how far we have come in a short time. Nonthaburi had beaten us twice already this season, but the tide has truly turned. Hua Hin are playing some great football.

FEATURED GAME

SATURDAY 26TH AUGUST 2017
PREMIER LEAGUE
Manchester Utd v Leicester City 23:30
Leicester will surely be a tougher test for a United side that has started the season in red hot form and successive 4 - 0 wins, albeit against teams that are struggling for various reasons. Their opponents here, though, have started pretty well themselves, only losing narrowly to Arsenal in their first game, while recording a solid win last week. They have the pace and guile to test a United defence that has not really been put under pressure yet, and we think will score; however the midfield and attack that Mourinho has at his disposal will mean that the home side will score more, and we see this as another victory for the Red Devils.

A PINCH OF SALT

CAFE CONDIMENTS CONFIRMED AS BEST WAY TO EXPLAIN OFFSIDE RULE

● UK

With just two games gone in the new Premier League season, most fans have concluded that everything is already decided, with no one now capable of catching Manchester United, and have turned their attention to one of the games greatest ever mysteries - how to explain the offside rule to someone who knows nothing about football.

And (Arsenal fans look away now) a new study conducted by the Institute of Studies has concluded that it is best explained using the condiments in a greasy spoon type cafe.

The condiments – usually salt, pepper, squeezy plastic tomato and a bowl of sugar – beat off competition from the contents of a workplace desk and one of those huge iPads they use on Match of the Day.

Football scientist Helen Archer said: "For example, Sergio Aguero is the salt and Phil Jagielka is the vinegar and Leighton Baines is the sugar.

Above: Everything you need to explain why Lacazette's goal for Arsenal against Stoke was disallowed for offside; you can clearly see the salt is in front of the pepper.

"David Silva is the squeezy plastic tomato with ketchup in it, or maybe salsa would be more fitting, but actually no, greasy spoons don't have salsa.

"So, David Silva-tomato wants to play the ball, which is a balled up receipt for the breakfast you've ordered, to Sergio Aguero-salt.

"The squeezy tomato can't pass the receipt to the salt if the salt is in front of the vinegar and the sugar and there are no more condiments beyond them, unless the receipt is passed from behind this spilt coffee, which we'll use as the half way line. Simple as that."

Onlooker Stephen Malley said: "What if the salt is in front of the spilt coffee but not interfering with play?"
