TWICE BITTEN

PREDICTABLE RESPONSE AS RABIES REARS ITS UGLY HEAD AGAIN

● HUA HIN

The furore that has descended on Hua Hin and Thailand over multiple outbreaks of rabies has led to a wide array of actions and suggestions to deal with this deadly disease. The most worrying of these has been the mass capture, transport and rumoured destruction of dogs found in the rabies 'red zone' where a 61 year old Thai man was bitten by a cat two months ago and died last week, sparking the current crisis. Pet owners and those who take care of street dogs are being urged to firstly makes sure these animals are vaccinated against rabies, and secondly to prevent them being loose in the street and avoid them being captured and taken away.

This week a new 'pet tax' has been mooted, as well as a licencing and registration scheme, however these are likely to lead to more stray animals and an accompanying jump in animal populations, thus worsening the risk of the spread of rabies. Animal welfare groups have campaigned long and hard for the Thai authorities to undertake regular sterilisation programs on Soi dogs, as the growth in their population has exploded across Thailand, and has been particularly noticable in Hua Hin. However these calls have fallen on deaf ears in the past, despite the numerous advantages for both humans and dogs that would transpire. A concerted campaign to educate the population regarding the need to stop dumping unwanted animals and to take care of our animal friends is also sorely needed. Most temples are overflowing with such creatures, and while the monks do their best, they need the public to step up and take part.

AWOL is not, unfortunately, optimistic that the current crisis will actually change anything in the long run; any measures that are introduced will require enforcement, something that has been shown to be largely lacking in most areas since we started publishing, unless there is significant incentive.

● GOLF BALL
Two Golfers were approaching the first tee.

The first guy goes into his golf bag to get a ball and says to his friend – "Hey, why don't you try this ball." He draws a green golf ball out of his bag. "Use this one – You can't lose it!"

His friend replies, "What do you mean you can't lose it?!!"

The first man replies, "I'm serious, you can't lose it.

If you hit it into the woods, it makes a beeping sound, if you hit it into the water it produces bubbles, and if you hit it on the fairway, smoke comes up in order for you to find it."

Obviously, his friend doesn't believe him, but he shows him all the possibilities until he is convinced. The friend says, "Wow! That's incredible! Where did you get that ball?"

The man replies, "I found it."

Actually only six of them took part because .....

● GASSY GRANNY
An old lady goes to the doctor and says, "I have this problem with frequent gas. Fortunately, the farts never smell and are always silent. As a matter of fact, I've farted at least 10 times since I've been here, and I bet you didn't even notice!"
The doctor says, "I see. Take these pills and come back next week."
The next week the old lady returns. "Doctor," she says, "I don't know what the hell you gave me, but now my silent farts stink like the dickens."
The doctor says, "Good! Now that we've cleared up your sinuses, let's work on your hearing."

● COMETH THE HOUR...

One thing many expats don't miss at all is the need for Daylight Saving Time (DST) in Thailand. Here in the UK we will have the mad scramble to put our clocks forward by one hour this Sunday, the main purpose being to make more use of those long (light) summer nights. Then of course in October all the clocks have to be put back again at the end of what became known as British Summer Time (BST,) also observed by Ireland and Portugal.

It wasn't always so. In fact DST only began in 1908, when residents of Thunder Bay in Ontario became the first people in the world to give it a go. It was the brainchild of one William Willett, a builder, whose aim was to allow people to benefit from more evening recreation time outdoors. It seems that people in the UK weren't meant to enjoy themselves at the end of the working day though, and DST wasn't introduced here until 1916 in an effort to save coal during the First World War. Daylight Saving began even later in the States, in 1918, just for the last few months of World War 2. It was then abolished by Congress, leaving individual locations to decide for themselves what they did about DST, and with no uniform rules on the dates and times when clocks should be changed. Problems ensued with co-ordinating railway timetables, but it wasn't until 1967 that the Uniform Time Act corrected the anomally. Even then individual States could still opt out of DST providing it was done on a State wide basis. Just two - Hawaii and Arizona - have continued with year round Standard Time, but the debates continue, with Alaska now a prime candidate for joining them. Things have never gone too smoothly in the UK either. During World War 2 the UK operated double DST by putting clocks forward and back by two hours each summer, again to save fuel for the war effort, then again in 1947 because of extreme fuel shortages. Assorted ideas have also been put forward over the years about staying permanently on 'summer time', otherwise known as Greenwich Mean Time plus one hour. The plan was tried out from October 1968 to October 1971, but didn't go down too well in Scotland, which ended up with very lengthy dark winter mornings. Even so attempts to adopt a permanent British Summer Time continue, with the most recent new proposal being in 2012.

Last month THAB reported on a Banksy painting which had appeared on a disused bridge in Hull. Despite a hate campaign against it by one city councillor, an attempt to cover it with graffiti by person or persons unknown, and subsequent restoration work by a few Banksy fans, the original work is still there. Just a bit less distinct. And while the debate goes on about what to do with it now a similar project in another part of the city is being welcomed.

Pupils at a school close by an unsightly railway bridge are being helped to create their own design to decorate the eyesore. The aim is to give the area surrounding the bridge a 'vibrant feelgood factor,' and has the approval of the city council. Banksy - please take note - in Hull you need a stated aim, council approval and the right paint before being accepted as an artist.

Finally this week it's back to Thailand. Just when you think you've heard it all the Powers That Be come up with another idea to top the lot. It is of course the need for dart board licenses. As we all know the game of darts attracts more gamblers than the whole of the horse racing industry put together. Not only that but dart boards are dangerous. They encourage players to improve their maths skills while developing the team spirit between expats and locals who, heaven forbid, might even become friends. There is also always the possibility that one of those local players might just make it to the top in Thailand, where there are some seriously good players. And all without a single satang changing hands - except of course for the new license fees.

Next week - a new threat to gambling in Britain.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS
NO ONE DOES MORE FOR VETERANS.

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

While it's true there's nothing you wouldn't do to make your friends happy, that impulse will soon come into conflict with your willingness to do anything for a decent piece of pie.

AQUARIUS JAN 20 – FEB 18

You never thought you'd get tired of the endless parade of deep-fried food that is your life, and sure enough, it hasn't happened yet.

PISCES FEB 19 – MAR 20

Unfortunately, popular entertainment has led you to believe that when you try to deliver a baby while trapped in a malfunctioning elevator, the mother and baby both survive.

ARIES MAR 21 - APR 20

You'll inspire thousands to go out and do something with their lives in order not to wind up being as pathetic and useless as you are.

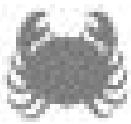
TAURUS APR 21 – MAY 21

The rescue workers won't need to knock down an entire wall of your house to get you out, but they want to make you feel extra fat.

GEMINI MAY 22 – JUNE 21

You'll resolve not to fall for the same old tricks just as your shoelace goes untied, a menacing figure looms up right behind you, and you finally find true love.

CANCER JUN 22 – JUL 22



Someday, you'll look back on all this and laugh, you sick, demented, inhuman monster.

LEO JUL 23 – AUG 22

Love means different things to different people, but you'll have a hard time finding someone to whom it means "a profound degree of affection."

VIRGO AUG 23 – SEP 22

It's kind of disappointing, really, but it turns out you and your archenemy actually aren't that much alike at all.

LIBRA SEP 23 – OCT 23

People have a hard enough time believing "timbersports" are a real thing without you trying to achieve notoriety by becoming its all-time most penalized participant.

SCORPIO OCT 24 – NOV 21

It turns out that sorting is one of God's least favorite things, as you'll learn this week when you decide to kill them all and let Him sort them out.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 – DEC 21

You've decided to pull one last big job and then retire, although it is unclear exactly how this will work for a trombone instructor.

● A section for all you budding etymologists where each week the origin of a word or phrase is investigated.

THIS WEEK IT IS.... RAG-AND-BONE MAN

A rag-and-bone man is a collector of discarded clothes, bones and other low-value items that can be re-sold to merchants. Cloth was recycled to make shoddy and bones were used to make glue.

Of course, the expression 'Rag'n'bone Man' is known to most millennial as the stage name of the English singer/songwriter Rory Graham, who was awarded both British Breakthrough Act and Critics' Choice Award at the 2017 Brit Awards.

For people of an earlier generation, especially those in the UK, the image conjured up by the term 'rag and bone man' is of a down at heel gent with a horse and cart trawling around the streets calling out for any old discarded items of scrap, clothing or bones that he could resell for a few pennies. Their typical cry was 'any old iron' although the rag and bone man some may recall from their youth in the UK's West Midlands used to call out 'rag bone, rag bone'.

Rag and bone men, or totters as they were sometimes known, first made an appearance in early 19th century England. An early reference to them in print is found in The Proceedings of the Old Bailey, July 1802:

"I had rather a suspicion of her; she is an old rag and bone picker in the street"

Early rag and bone men (or pickers or gatherers) were as likely to be women as men. The desperation implied by their attempts to scrape a living by scavenging discarded rubbish for anything of meagre value shows that they were from the very bottom of the social heap.

The British folk memory of 'totters' is more rose-tinted than the harsh reality. This is in part the product of the fondness for the two most celebrated rag and bone men in popular fiction, Steptoe and Son. The bitter-sweet, kitchen sink comedy television series of two London totters was a hugely popular in the UK in the 1960 and 1970s.

Rory Graham chose 'Rag'n'bone Man' as his stage name as a reference to the TV series.

Tons of gold fall from the sky as Russian cargo plane malfunctions on take-off

More than 170 gold bars fell from the sky after a plane's hatch flew open - with police unsure if it was accidental or criminal.

The aircraft was carrying £265m worth of platinum, gold and diamonds when the hatch flew open - sending the precious metals plummeting back to earth.

According to the TASS news agency, Russian authorities have recovered more than 170 gold bars weighing 20kg each.

The plane was travelling from Yakutsk Airport - a major diamond-producing region - to Krasnoyarsk.

However, the Nimbus Airlines AN-12 cargo aircraft made an emergency landing in Magan after it began haemorrhaging valuables.

Reports suggest some bars of gold were scattered up to 15 miles away from the airport.

Police have sealed off the runway, and say it is unclear if it was an accident or a deliberate attempt at a heist.

Technical engineers who worked on the plane prior to take-off are reportedly going to be questioned by police.

Driver tries to get out of offence by saying she's Homer Simpson

If you're caught driving without insurance, it's probably not the best idea to try and pretend you're Homer Simpson. Especially if you're a (not yellow) woman from Milton Keynes.

But that's exactly what one woman did when she was stopped in Buckinghamshire earlier this week when she was pulled over. Instead of pulling out the genuine article, she handed over the Homer Simpson licence, complete with his signature and address. Interestingly Homer's licence shows that he's able to drive buses pulling trailers and some kind of heavy goods vehicle. However, his date of birth is incorrect it says he was born on August 4, 1963, but according to his real driving licence which features on the show he was born on May 12, 1956. Thames Valley Police traffic cops posted the picture on Twitter yesterday saying: 'Earlier this week, PC Phillips stopped a car in Milton Keynes, Bucks. 'When she tried to identify the driver's ID, she found the below… 'The driver's car was seized and she was reported for driving with no insurance and driving without a proper licence. 'D'oh!'

Judge locks self in courtroom, causes $3000 in damage trying to break free

A judge in Oregon used a bench as a battering ram to break free from a locked courtroom, causing about $3,000 in damage, a report said.

Judge Susie Norby offered to pay for the damage out of her own pocket, but a Clackamas County spokesman said the funds will come from the county's general fund, meaning taxpayers will foot the bill, the Oregonian reported.

Norby said her offer was turned down because county officials regarded the cost as negligible, the newspaper reported.

"I feel deeply sad to have caused harm to our beautiful and historic building," Norby told the newspaper. "It is a building I cherish, respect and am proud and grateful to work in."

Repair work in the Oregon City courtroom will include reinstalling marble on the framing above the courtroom doors, the report said.

Norby said she locked herself in the courtroom March 4, a Sunday, and tried to ram her way out because her keys and phone were elsewhere, and no one was expected at the building until the following day. She was stuck in the courtroom for more than an hour before a sheriff's deputy came by and sprung her.

Smoke bomb intended to scare skunks sets house on fire

A Detroit-area man's idea to use a smoke bomb to rid the crawlspace in his home of skunks blew up in smoke – literally.

Firefighters responded to a call Monday morning to find the flames had spread from the crawlspace to the first floor of the house, the Detroit Free Press reported.

The fire continued to spread throughout the house, resulting in what Sullivan described as a "complete loss," with the occupant losing most of his belongings.

No injuries were reported other than one firefighter suffering a sprain, the paper reported.

As for the skunks, Sullivan told the paper no carcasses were found at the scene.

FEATURED GAME

WEDNESDAY 28TH MARCH 2018
INTERNATIONAL FRIENDLIES
England v Italy 02:00

The shocking absence of Italy at this summer's World Cup finals in Russia is only the second time in their history that they have failed to qualify, with the last time being the 1958 tournament in Sweden. Given that it is only 12 years since they won the trophy, it is quite a dramatic fall from grace. They will, however, be a significant test for England, as their rebuilding starts. It will be interesting to see whether Southgate chooses to use the absence of Harry Kane as an opportunity to try out fringe players across the team, or play his likely World Cup team with Kane's understudy. England do have two more friendlies before the tournament, so we expect a fringe team, and an Italian victory.

IT'S THE RUSSIANS!

FA TO DESIGNATE EVERY PRE-WORLD CUP PREMIERSHIP FOUL AS KREMLIN AGGRESSION

● UK

As international suspicion grows on Russian espionage in Britain, the Football Association has assured fans it is alert to the potential threat posed to the beautiful game by the Kremlin ahead of the World Cup.

The FA has confirmed that any physical slight committed against a potential member of the English First or Reserve Team line-ups ahead of the World Cup will be considered an act of anti-British hostility mandated expressly by Russian premier Vladimir Putin.

Moreover, all slide tackles will be subject to an immediate 'top brass' inquiry with draconian emergency powers up to and including pre-trial solitary confinement for 1,000 years.

To comply with anti-discrimination legislation, these measures will be applied against any player convicted of any on-pitch infraction, regardless of their nationality.

Left: "So, you say we can place listening devices in these footballs, and learn the secrets of the imperialistic capitalists? Interesting, very interesting.'

The Chairman defended the measures: 'We can't be too careful. Even British players could be double agents. We will do our utmost to avoid coming home with anything short of at least one point from the group stage.'

He added: 'Football players are renowned for their ability to soldier on through every scrape and slight on the pitch without drama. But now we realise that if a player crumbles like a house of cards in floods of tears with the nearest player at least five feet away, we'll know the Kremlin is involved.'
